The guards and twenty-eight state militia-men surrendered to the miners at Oliver Springs Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock. A few minutes before 7 o'clock Dr. Shelton, of Oliver Springs, who is the prison physician, was sent by the miners to Warden Farris, who had charge of the stockade. Dr. Shelton told the warden that there were 2,000 miners, armed with Winchesters and dynamite, surrounding the stockade and all would be killed unless they surrendered. Warden Farris at once said he surrender, showing the greatest fear. Major Candler, with the twenty-seven men of the national guards of the state of Tennessee, refused to surrender. He said that his men had come to protect the property and convicts and they would not surrender. Farris ordered his eighteen guards to march out the convicts two by two and surrender to the miners. No protest of Major Candler's had any effect, and the convicts were marched out and the blockhouse doors left open. The troops were thus left at the merry of a mob, if one should come. They were on his regular morning inspection at the time, they had all told only 500 rounds of ammunition, so they marched out and followed the convicts and guards. For a mile after leaving the stockade not a soul was seen. They then came upon some fifty to seventy-five miners, who fell upon them and demanded their arms. The militiamen surrendered their guns, save a telegraph operator and Major Candler. They refused to surrender and made their escape and joined the Chattanooga companies at Harriman about noon. These companies had never been able to get to Oliver Springs, as the trainmen refused to take them. The convicts were marched on down under guard, who were given back their guns, to a station near Oliver Springs. Here the entire number of ninety-seven were placed on cars, and they, with the guards and miners, started to Knoxville. They reached Clinton about 11 a. m. There the miners left, using one of the engines they had captured Tuesday night to take them to Coal Creek, ten miles north. The convicts were kept there for some time and then carried to Knoxville. They arrived at 8 p. m., and soon after were transferred from the coaches to the jail. They are held awaiting the orders of the governor. It is expected that they will be taken to Nashville immediately. At 8 o'clock the company of militia which surrended reached Knoxville. After they were disarmed during the morning by the miners they were told to "skip out." They complained bitterly of their treatment by the miners. They say they were robbed of their money, watches, arms and whatever else they had. They also denounced Warden Farris for surrendering. They all agree that if he had fought not a gun would have been fired. No miner was in shooting distance of the camp when they came out. They also stated, as do the guards, that the total number of miners did not exceed seven to nine hundred. The guards now say say they made a serious mistake in surrendering. This conclusion is correct, for the miners with their overpowering numbers, did not dare to attack the little handful Tuesday night; if they would not attack in the night they would not have done so by daynght, as all the circumstances show. The miners who left Clinton about 11 o'clock a. m., went to Coal Creek, where two or three hundred more had assembled, increasing the total to something like one thousand men. The miners have full possession of the telegraph office at Coal Creek and have several operators among their number. They will probably attack the stockade, but it is believed the 135 militiamen there will repulse them if they do.

A startling report is current to the effect that Governor Buchanan knew several days ago what the miners intended to do. He is now charged with being in accord with them. The indications are that the mob will have Uncle Sam after some of them. Acting on the order of United States Judge Jackson, Receivers Fink and McGhee, of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railway, offer a reward of $200 each for the proof which will establish in proceedings for contempt the guilt of six of the leaders who took forcible possession of the engines and cars of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railway on its Walden's Ridge division on August 16th and 17th, and who cut the wires of said railway company at Clinton and Oliver Springs, Tenn., thereby preventing the running of trains and endangering life and property.

THE NEWS AT NASHVILLE.

The serious condition of affairs at Coal Creek aroused considerable excitement at Nashville Wednesday, and at no place was there more excitement than in Governor Buchanan's office. The governor nervously walked the floor and anxiously awaited the messengers that climbed the hill every few minutes. The news of the surrender at Oliver Springs did not seem to create any surprise and when messages were received asking what to do with the convicts orders were issued to the railroads to furnish transportation to Nashville at once. When it became evident that an attack would be made on Coal Creek, orders were issued to the Second and Third regiments placing them under marching orders, and late in the afternoon all the companies were ordered to proceed to Coal Creek at once to protect the stockade.

There are only 900 men in the national guard and the indications are that not more than 50 per cent of them will answer the call. Acting under the state law enacted after last summer's troubles and authorizing the governor to summon the sheriff of every county with posse of any size, Governor Buchanan has also ordered the sheriff of Davidson county to summon 1,000 men for immediate duty at Coal Creek. The sheriffs of Knox, Hamilton, Morgan, Rowan, Grundy, Marion and Anderson have also been ordered to summon 900 men. The militia fails to provide for arming these men, however, and they will have to provide their own arms.

At a late hour Wednesday afternoon Governor Buchanan received a telegram stating that Coal Creek was surrounded but there had been no trouble. He was urged to come at once to the scene, as it was believed he could succeed in quieting the miners. Governor Buchanan accordingly made arrangements to go to Coal Creek at 9 o'clock. Subsequently, however, he was taken seriously ill. His physicians say that complete nervous prostration has been caused by the worry. He has not slept for several nights and considerable anxiety is felt for him. Governor Buchanan at midnight dictated the following telegram:

John G. Ivins, Knoxville, Tenn.—Intended, as agreed with Houk, to leave to-night at 9 o'clock for Coal Creek, but I have been taken seriously ill. Cannot go. Get word by some means to the miners to whom Houk telegraphed this morning. I must execute the law, but if the miners will be patient a few days I have no doubt matters can be satisfactorily arranged according to law. JOHN P. BUCHANAN, Governor.

The very latest dispatches received Wednesday night state that the sheriff is summoning every available man to go to the seat of war. Governor Buchanan has called for 8,000 recruits.

FROM PREVIOUS DISPATCHES.

A dispatch of Saturday from Tracy City, Tenn., says: Once more Tennessee has riotous miners, prison stockades have been burned again and convicts have been temporarily driven from their competition with free labor. Tracy City is the scene of the trouble. This is a point where trouble was least expected. Last summer when the convicts were released at Coal Creek, Oliver Springs and Briceville an unsuccessful attempt was made to have Tracy City to take similar action, but it failed for the reason that the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company was working its free miners on full time and they were injured by the convicts being there. Recently, however, the company found it necessary to reduce the coal output and during July the output was only twenty-eight thousand tons, whereas a year ago it was thirty-six thousand. This loss fell on the the free miners who were put on half time, while the convicts worked full time. This caused the organization of the band that burned the stockade Saturday.

THE BREAK MADE.

The stockade was burned at 9:30 o'clock and 690 convicts were liberated. All was quiet when the laborers quit work Friday night. At 5 o'clock, after a mass meeting had been secretly held, a committee of miners called on Mr. E. O. Nathurst, superintendent of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company, Saturday morning, and asked that the miners be allowed to work as many hours per day as the convicts. He promised to submit the matter to the company. After the committee left Mr. Nathurst feared trouble, knowing of a secret-bound organization formed some time ago with unknown purposes. He, with Deputy Warden Burton, circulated among the miners, who were in groups, and tried to keep things quiet, but their efforts were of no avail. Things grew worse till 9:30 o'clock, when an armed body of men advanced and took the stockade. There were about one hundred and fifty armed men in the party that went to the stockade about 8 o'clock. The men approached each guard. Two disarmed him while the third took his place. The convicts were then ordered out of the mines and off the grounds. There were 690 of them They were marched to and loaded on flat cars and were then turned over to Warden Burton and he was ordered to take them away immediately. The train then proceeded to Cowan, where they waited for the special sent from Nashville.

When the convicts had left the free miners removed four sick prisoners from the hospital and placing all the arms, ammunition and other property in places of safety, the stockades, which cost about $5,000, were burned. The guards in charge of the convicts were allowed a gun apiece and the others were confiscated by the miners. Not a shot was fired during the trouble.

Within a quarter of a mile of Sewanee the coupling pin was drawn from the back car, and between twenty and thirty convicts made a break for liberty. The guards fired, and two convicts were killed. One is said to be wounded in the woods and one captured alive by mountaineers. It is known that only five have been recaptured.

The miners are very reticent, and say they have no statement to make and would not give the names of the leaders or state their intentions in case the convicts returned. They say the time they worked was not sufficient for them to make a living.

Everything was quiet at Tracy City Saturday night, and will remain so until further action from the other end of the line is taken. The trouble grew out of the lease system. The miners at Tracy City have been among the most conservative in the state. The mines are situated in Grundy county, and are among the most extensive in the state.

MAY ABANDON THE LEASE.

A dispatch from Nashville states that the 400 convicts employed at Tracy City reached that city Saturday night, and are now safe in the penitentiary. What the authorities or lessees will do is not known, but there is a probability that the lessees of convicts will abandon the lease.

A committee of miners from Coal City called on Governor Buchanan Sunday, and asked to have the troops removed. He took the request under advisement. It is expected in many quarters that another uprising will be the result.

MINERS CAPTURE INMAN.

The fears expressed by Governor Buchanan, and by the lessees of the state penitentiary, have been justified by Monday's developments. The news of the action of the Tracy City miners caused great excitement among the Marion county miners, and led to their marching upon the stockade at Inman and forcing the removal of the convicts. A force of forty guards on the way to Inman from Nashville, were captured by about two hundred free miners, about four miles from the town early Monday morning, and disarmed. They were then started back towards Jasper. The mob of miners had marched over the mountains from Whitewell, about eight miles distant, and their intercepting the guards was an accident. The mob then proceeded to Inman, and were not resisted, Sheriff Morrison had been warned of the mob's coming, but was powerless, as he could not secure a posse to assist him in defending the stockade. Judge Moon, of the circuit court, ordered him to the scene, but he refused to act. The mob at once marched to the stockade. There were only about thirty guards, and these surrendered on demand. The convicts were in the prison, and were at once called out and loaded on flat cars. The engineer of the ore train was ordered to take them away.

After the cars were placed on the road, they were turned over to Warden H. H. Hartley and the guards. Mr. Superintendent Anderson appealed to the mob not to burn the stockade, as the railroad running just above one side of it would be destroyed. The men were advised by their leader to tear the stockade down, which they did. There was not a shot fired during the whole trouble. There were 390 convicts in the party, and none escaped up to the time they arrived at Stevenson, on the main line of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway. Inman is simply a convict mining camp in Marion county, and is on the property of the Tennessee Coal and Railroad company. They had 390 convicts and a few free miners digging iron ore, which was shipped to their furnaces at Cowan and other points.

SITUATION AT NASHVILLE.

A Nashville telegram states that neither Governor Buchanan or the lessees of the penitentiary were surprised at the action of the Marion county miners Monday. Governor Buchanan anticipated this result and was only afraid that there would be bloodshed. All of the Tracy City guards had been started for Inman Sunday, and it was thought that they might reach there in time to protect the prison.

Early Monday morning the governor received the following telegram from the warden at Inman: "The convicts have been released by a mob of 200 men and are awaiting trains at Victoria. What is the reward for the leaders and men in the Inman mob?

To this Governor Buchanan did not reply, but he will probably offer the same reward as he offered for the Coal Creek rioters, and which was never claimed, viz: $5,000 for the leaders and $250 for each member of the mob.

Shortly after the news of the release had been received the following telegram was received from Superintendent of Prisons Wade: "I have done all I can to prevent trouble at Inman by sending all the men I can get to go, which are inadequate to meet the emergencies. Can't you strengthen the place with troops?"

As to sending troops, Governor Buchanan is absolutely powerless, as he can only call them out on request of the civil authorities. He has heard nothing from Sheriff Morrison, although he wired him instructing him to summon as many men as needed, and asking if he needed military assistance. No reply was received.

TENNESSEE'S CROWDED PRISON.

A horrible condition of affairs exists at the state penitentiary. The prison is in the center of a thickly settled portion of Nashville and was built fifty years ago It would be an unhealthy place for a small number of men. It is small and illy ventilated, and with three tiers of cells can accommodate only 330 prisoners. There were 340 prisoners prior to the Tracy City trouble, and when the 350 from that place were received some were compelled to bunk two in a cell, while the others slept on the stone floors of the wings. Now with 290 more that reached the city from Inman there is not room for them to sleep on the floor even, so that there are three times as many prisoners as cells. Not only will they have to be crowded together at night but there is absolutely no work for them to do, and to avoid danger of outbreak they will have to be kept up all day. To add to the perplexities of the state officials, the lessees, the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company gave notification that they would not feed the Tracy City and Inman men, so that besides losing the lease money, the state will have to feed the 620 idle men. The lessees are heartily sick of the troubles of the past year and would be very glad to surrender the lease.

MINERS AND SOLDIERS FIGHT.

The expected attack on the convict stockade at Oliver Springs was made Tuesday morning. It resulted in a fight, and the miners were whipped for the first time in the history of the mine troubles in Tennessee. Oliver Springs, a little mining village, is across the mountain from Coal Creek and Briceville. The distance over the mountain is only six miles, while by rail around it is twenty-five miles. All day Monday the miners at Oliver Springs and Coal Creek were engaged in discussing the mine trouble. They did no work, and every man was armed. The men were in communication with each other by runners across the mountains. They planned the attack on Oliver Springs, where there were no militiamen and only forty guards. If successful there they hoped to so terrorize the garrison at Coal Creek that it would capitulate before the attack of all the miners of the district combined. Tuesday morning at 5 o'clock Captain Ferris, in command of the guards at Oliver Springs, discovered that the stockade was surrounded by miners. The men had taken position on two wondy eminences which surround the stockade. The leader of the miners shouted to the guards to surrender and give up the convicts. Captain Ferris replied: "Come and get us!" The leader shouted, "All right, G—d d—n you, we'll take you." The battle then began. From almost every direction the balls rained in upon the guards. They were well protected by the stockade. They had the convicts also well sheltered from any rifle balls. While part of the guard kept the convicts from stampeding the others poured shot after shot into the woods where the miners held position. Hundreds of shots had been fired, but the guard remained firm. Finally the miners seemed to think that a storming of the stockade would be successful, and a number of the more bold dashed out of the woods and into an open space not more than a hundred yards from the fort. They went no further and a number of those in the attack fell. A flag of truce went up from the woods then and the guard ceased firing. The leaders of the miners said that they wished to carry off the wounded. They were assured they could come to the stockade and not be hurt, provided the miners did not fire. The guards were fearful of treachery. When one fellow came in easy range he was covered by rifles. The miners were then allowed to carry off those who were wounded or killed. Before they left they declared they would get more and come back and "wipe out" the guards. It is not known how many, if any, of the miners were hurt. There is a rumor that three were killed and a number wounded, but there are no means of verifying the report, as all telegraph wires are cut. At 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon a special train left Knoxville for Oliver Springs to relieve the besieged guards. There were only twenty-eight men on board in charge of Major Chamblin, of the Third regiment. The company will fight to kill, beyond a doubt, if necessary. The train was run through very rapidly and reached Oliver Springs safely. Beyond this nothing is known, as [illegible]

[illegible] with one hundred. On the platform of the rear coach were other soldiers ready to serve. The train had orders to stop at Coal Creek at the [illegible] ground. After pulling out, Major D. A. Carpenter, an ex-officer and brave a man as ever marched under Sheridan, was put in command as general. He is an old federal officer who saw service for four years in the war of the rebellion. Before the train had fairly passed out of the city limits, the order was given to load. The men loaded their shotguns, rifles and army muskets. The militiamen had their cartridge boxes filled and had full soldiers' equipments. The citizens' guards had nothing of the kind. They filled their pockets with shells for shotguns and cartridges for rifles. At 5:30, Thursday afternoon, the train reached Clinton, four miles south of Coal Creek.

A telegram sent from the Atlanta Constitution station, four miles from the scene of war, states that the convict war broke out in earnest Thursday evening, and for four hours the military and volunteers under Col. Keller Anderson, of Memphis, engaged the mountaineers in a stubborn, hard fought, pitched battle. Four times the mountain men assaulted the stockade in which the troops are garrisoned, and four times they were repulsed. The charges made by the miners were swift and almost irresistible, while the defense put up by the small handful of troops cooped in the rude stockade was heroic, brave and grand. Small arms and cannon were used by the soldiers while the mountaineers fought with the old army muskets, the squirrel rifle, the shotgun and the improved Winchester. Darkness ended the battle, but it did not terminate the shooting. All night long the sharp report of the gun echoed from the hillsides, the preceding flash showing where the sharpshooters were located. With daylight the fight will probably be resumed all along the line and a bloody day is predicted by every one. The miners are determined and will never surrender, while the military commender, General Carnes, says that he will go to the rescue of the garrison or lose every man he has. Though the firing was incessant and spirited for more than four hours no one can present the casualties on either side. It is known that some fifteen or twenty miners have been killed, but the mountaineers refuse to give any information to any one. The troops cannot be accounted for because they are all cut off from the works by the army of mountaineers, but be the casualties what they may, the mountain men certainly got the best of the battle. They have captured and are now holding Col. Anderson as a prisoner of war. The capture of Colonel Anderson was a cowardly piece of business and has stirred up the greatest indignation everywhere. The fighting began at 8 o'clock. During the fight two or three mine leaders were captured by General Anderson and his troops. There was a truce and the miners told Anderson if he would surrender their leaders, they would allow him to return to his fort. He took the men and went down among the mob. Before he left he told his troops to fight and never surrender. When he got the captured miners to Coal Creek depot, where they were out of the range of the guns from the fort, a mob captured him and would not allow him to return. The leader of the mob was the notorious Bud Lindsay, a brother of the United States attorney general of this district. Lindsay has killed eight or ten men. He put a pistol to Anderson's head and told him he must give orders to his men to surrender. Anderson straightened up, threw out his arm in the face of Lindsay's pistol and told him to "shoot and be d—d!" that he would never tell his men to surrender. Anderson was then taken to a hotel as a prisoner. The miners declare that they will lynch him unless the troops are withdrawn. General Carnes is very uneasy about his comrade and will try to prevent the execution of any such threat, but he may be too late.

Every company of military in the state except two is on hand and these these two will arrive within a few hours. In addition to the military there are 200 volunteers. Among those volunteers are some of the wealthiest and most substantial gentlemen of Knoxville, who responded to the call when the alarm bell rang in that city in the afternoon. General Carnes has about one thousand men in his command and one hundred and fifty in the stockade. The Mountaineers number nearly three thousand—all of 2,500. They are between two forces of the state. In order for General Carnes to reach the garrison he must march his army right through that of the miners commanded by D. B. Monroe, a Tennessee miner, but before doing so General Carnes must get to Coal Creek. At this minute there are two trains of soldiers on the main line here awaiting for orders from the train dispatcher to move. The ride from here is one full of danger. The miners know that the troops are coming and they swear to give them a warm reception. The run from Clinton to this point was a mere creep, a crawl—the engineer was compelled to fell his way. Dynamite was found all the way and General Carnes is now debating whether it is safer to march his men through the woods in the dark or try the trains. The miners have complete control of everything and up to the time they cut the wires, would not let a single line leave without first seeing it. So cautious and careful have the miners been that no one seems to know what they intend doing except fight. Everybody knows that they intend fighting to the last.

At 2 o'clock Friday morning the troops under General Carnes went into camp two miles from Coal Creek.

BLACK BELT BELIEFS.

ODD SOUTHERN SUPERSTITIONS.

Visit to a Colored School. Characteristic Speech by an Ex-Slave That Ended With a Prayer.

HE sunlight is to the earth, after a period of darkness, what superstition is to the Southern negro. In it he seems to "live, move and have his being." Even Ben, my faithful guide and storehouse of knowledge, is steeped in it.

For some days he has not appeared to be himself, and upon inquiry I learn that "de ole red mule done lose her shoe in de cotton patch," and that is a sign that Ben will not be successful in selling the cotton products in the fall.

"Fie, fie, Ben, do not be so superstitious; that can't hurt you any. The idea of believing such a sign!"

"Well, chile, yo' shuh doan know nothin' about it. Is yo' superstitious?"

"No, Ben," I replied, and blushed at the fib. Would it do him any good to know that I had one or two pet "signs" which I cherished and believed in implicitly? He would not understand that to me superatition was "the poetry of life."

"Doan yo' know I'm a Joseph, honey!" continued Ben; "an' would yo' know some of my signs? Yo' better write 'em down in yo' little book," and I obeyed him.

"When yo' pick up a horseshoe an' it has nails in it yo' will sure have sickness in yo' fam'ly; if de nails am gone it means luck, but yo' mus' hang it up.

"When yo' house is full of mice or rats yo' must write a letter to de mice and tell them wa' ter go. If dey doan go at once write another letter and dey sure will go."

"But, Ben, the reason they go is because you are closing the holes, and they must starve or go somewhere else."

"Chile, jes' keep quiet. I sure know moh' about it than yo'. When the house is hanted, an' de 'hant' 'dress is white, yo' mus' cut a lock of hair from de first nigger yo' meet an' put it over de front door. Ef yo' chile be afraid of hants, sit it over hot lard and say: 'De Lawd He put de debbil in de swine an' I done send de debbil in de lard, fo' swine and lard mus' evil spirits keep, but de Lawd He save de chile."

"But, Ben—"

"When yo' dream of a coffin yo' will heah yo' friend is married to yo' lover, but if yo' see de corpse yo' will marry him yo'self. When yo' scour a flo' always turn yo' bucket to the right; it save you many shiver. When de debbil come in the sick room, burn de bed and yo'll have a live man ter keep."

"Ben, don't you——"

"When de white lady ask too many questions and 'rupt pore Ben he won't say any mo'" and with this quaint bit of wisdom he ended his seeming soliloquy.

How sorry I was that I had interrupted him. I coaxed him to continue, but he was not to be coaxed. That evening we were all sitting on the veranda when Ben said:

"Who is de daughters of the Revolution yo' talk so much about?" and we each gave our views of the question and explained it simply, so that he would understand.

"An' must yo' prove that yo' ancestors fought! I sure believe my old woman is one of de daughters. Her gran'father, Massa S——, wa' a General in de wah. He sure fought in de Rebolution; he sure wa' killed at de Bunker Hill."

"Are you very sure about it, Ben; very sure? How did she come to be so far South?

"Someone carried her mother heah. Yo' com' ter de cabin an' ask de ole woman yo'self; she knows."

Again Ben had innocently raised a perplexing question. His wife, the quadroon and ex-slave, could boast of aristocratic blood. This women, this negress, was the grandchild of a man whom the colonists loved and admired—a daughter of the Revolution! No! No! Her black blood, the negro blood, forbids that, and yet what irony of fate brands this women a "negress" and counts her three-fourths of white blood as nothing! Is it not strange? What inequalities of life in a land where all men are declared free and equal. What black and clouded skies for some, what brilliancy and sunshine for others! Martyrdom and freedom go hand in hand. Time must solve this problem.

A VISIT TO BLACK BELT SCHOOL.

Ben has taken us all to the village school. What humble boys and girls we see. As we go into the room the pupils lay down their well-thumbed spelling books and look at us in amazement. The "professor" tells us to be seated and continues the lesson.

Sydney rises, and with quivering lips replies: "O, the sun is running around the globe and I'm so cold."

"Give another," says Ben. (The professor has told us to request his pupils).

"The heavens declare the glory of God and Birmingham is a great city," replies Sydney, now thoroughly frightened.

I look around the bare room and copy the questions and answers that are upon the blackboard.

While I am musing upon the possibilities and the future of these urchins before me I hear the teacher say: "We will now hear some remarks from our visitors."

How the changes ring in the gamut of fear. Even while I think I am called upon to speak. Don't ask me what I said, something about Cinderella and being good children. They must pardon my abruptness. I never made a speech, in fact wasn't prepared. Then I get to talking about Joseph and am suddenly disconcerted when a pickaninny says: I know dat; Joseph was a pritty man an his brethren sheep heads."

"So am I" is my inward thought, and I sit down. The others of the party make brief addresses and then Ben comes forward. I take a pencil from my pocket and slyly copy his remarks.

OLD BEN MAKES A SPEECH.

Chilren, yo' sure should be proud to live and go ter school. When I wa' a boy like yo', I used ter get a lash inkers tho' yo' be, yo' is as surely American as anyone else in it. See what a fine city we live in; we has a bank in this city, we is. We are a great people. Yo' must be good boys and girls, with hearts large enough to grasp de whole worl'; yo' must hab sympathy fo' de fall'n an' de lowly. Fo'get yo'self and live fo' others an' in others.

Yo' nebber saw yo' poor ole mammy tied and lashed. Yo' nebber heard de houn's bay at night while yo' knelt at her knee an' tried to say "Our Father." Yo' nebber heard de cry of de unfortunit creature. Yo' hab nebber bin sold to de highest bidder. Pore Ben remembers well de fust tim' he wa' sold. He were free in sout tho' called brute; free in thought tho' called ignorant. I've heard yo' spell, an' it fill my soul with joy. It make pore Ben glad ter know his boys and girls can read and write.

And then, leaning forward, he prayed for them and theirs. What a simple prayer it was—the very a, b, c's! And yet who knows but in His sight it was more acceptable than others that are more magnificent? Ben's prayer was from the heart.—MISS JO NANO, in Pittsburg (Pa.) Dispatch.

ALABAMA STATE NEWS.

Summary of Things that Happen Around Us from Day to Day.

Six contests were filed by the Kolb candidates who were defeated for county offices, in the probate court of Morgan county a few days ago. These are for sheriff, tax collector, tax assessor, circuit clerk, superintendent and county treasurer.

H. M. Hall has been appointed receiver of the Florence National bank, in place J. C. Godlow. The Florence National Bank failed a year ago and the business is still unsettled. Mr. Hall was the receiver of the Farley National bank of Montgomery, and is noted for the dispatch with which he attends to business.

Advices from Montgomery state that Messrs. Richardson and Reese, attorneys for the contestants in the contests growing out of the recent election, formally began the contest by filing the requisite bonds a few days ago. Some of the contests will be heard before the probate judge, while contests for other offices will have to be commenced in the circuit court.

A dispatch from Gadsden says: Three of the newly elected county officers have made their bonds which have been approved, and they will enter upon the duties of their respective offices as soon as they receive their commissions. They are: Alexander W. Burns, elected sheriff, bond $7,500; B. O. Lell, tax assessor, bond $2,000; W. T. Gay, re-elected county superintendent of education, bond $2,000.

The movement inaugurated sometime ago by the merchants of Birmingham for securing a reduction in the rents corresponding to the hard times, has been progressing quietly. At a recent meeting resolutions on the subject were adopted which are very strong, and to which the landlord's attention was invited. They were not published for obvious reasons, but the merchants who are enlisted in this matter mean business and have made out a strong case.

Within the past year Cleburne county has furnished more work for Commissioner Hunter in disposing of "moonshining" cases than almost every other county in the state, and it is thought because so many arrests have been made there that the relatives of the parties are disposed to do what they can to protect the moonshiners. The United States officers are ever wide awake and rarely is it that a wildcat still escapes them.

A resolution incorporating a request to the executive committee of Alabama asking that its members assist the colored democratic sympathizers in their work for the party was adopted a few days ago by the Birmingham Colored Democratic club. The resolution, as it reads, sets out the state of affairs and asks that the committee do what they can to get the white democrats to give their colored supporters such situations as may be at their command instead of to those negroes identified with republicanism. They claim that as they stand the persecution incident to democratic support, they feel that these situations are due them.

A special from Florence says: Hon R. Finigan, until several months ago a prominent banker of Florence is under arrest charged with embezzlement. The charge was preferred by Dodson & Co. of Atlanta, Ga., who claim that they sent Finigan some notes for collection and that he collected $170, but failed to remit it. Finigan is in jail in default of $500 bail. Finigan enjoys the reputation of being the only man in north Alabama who served at the same time as cashier of one bank and president of another. He was cashier of the Alabama Banking and Trust company and president of the Florence National, both of which failed several months ago.

The Late Col. L. E. Davis.

Col. L. E. Davis, whose death occured a few days ago at Athens, was born in Limestone county, February 27, 1812, and was 80 years old at his death. His name goes into history as one of the public men of Alabama. His father, the late Hon. Reuben Davis, was a public-spirited man, and one of the first men of the thirties in Limestone county as the history of 1817. The colonel was justly proud of his ancestry, and many he told us of a "worthy son of a worthy sire." Colonel Davis was an industrious man and there were few people, even in town or county, who were more generally known. He was a member of the Methodist church, and was a consistent member. He was married to Miss Mary Ann Clark, daughter of Hon. Daniel Clark, of Limestone county, who survives him. He was the father of eight children, seven of whom survive him. He was buried from the family residence, and the funeral was largely attended by the people of the county.

Taxes Reduced in Dallas.

The board of revenue of Selma held a meeting recently, the result of which will be of interest to every citizen of Dallas county. The county is in a better condition financially than, perhaps, any county in the state, and the fact is mainly due to the careful management of the county's affairs during the past four years by the present board of revenue. When this board was appointed Dallas county was head over heels in debt and in a deplorable condition. Today she does not owe a cent that could not be paid on demand; magnificent iron bridges span her streams and well graded roads make intercourse from the city to the country easy and comfortable. The treasury of the county contains nearly $18,000, and at the meeting referred to the board of revenue reduced the tax rate from 4 mills to 3, and would have reduced it still 1 mill less but for the fact that they expect to make many improvements in the public roads throughout the county.

The Situation in Dallas.

The time has come for all white men in Alabama, especially in the black belt, to lay aside all petty differences and stand shoulder to shoulder, if they would save this grand old state from political disruption. How are we to adjust the differences, is the question now to be considered, and it is a serious matter. Several plans have been suggested, but none of them appear to be what the people want. We are of the opinion that the only way to re-unite the white people of Dallas county is to return to the convention system of making nominations. Take the voting census of each beat and allow one delegate to every twenty-five voters. Let these delegates be elected at beat primaries, with the understanding that they shall cast their votes for candidates before the convention according to their strength in the primaries until it shall become necessary to center on one man in order to effect a nomination. Then let there be no change in the basis of representation for a period of five or ten years. The county executive committee should be called together at once, and if conventions are what the people want, then give them conventions, for we are in a muddle, and must get together.—Selma Times-Mail.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

VIAU has been released by Louisville.

THE Bostons have released Catcher Lake.

HARRY STOVEY is one of the most timely hitters on the Baltimore team.

VON DER AHE has signed another young pitcher named Hawley for the St. Louis Club.

DUFFY, of the Bostons, played the first twenty games of the second season without an error.

BAD weather and the poor record of Anson's colts has made this a decided off-year for baseball in Chicago.

CHILDS, of Cleveland, and McPhee, of Cincinnati, are considered the heaviest batting second basemen in the League. Burke, of New York, is not far behind them.

THE Philadelphias do not play steady enough for a winner. They make phenomenal spurts at times which are heartbreakers to their opponents, only to fall back with a sickening thud.

WARD, of the Baltimores, in chasing a two-bagger at Baltimore, and while sitting on the ground, tossed the ball to Van Haltren, who by a beautiful throw headed the runner off at third base.

THE phenomenal success that the second season has had in reviving lost interest in many cities has been a very strong point in favor of the twelve-club League, whose success is assured for another season.

SILVETTE, of Boston, is the only League pitcher who has so far this season shut out a team without a hit. The feat is doubly remarkable in that it was achieved against Brooklyn, the hardest hitting team in the League.

JOCKO HALLEMAN, the Baltimore outfielder who broke Captain Stricker's jaw in Boston during a dispute, the result of Halligan getting drunk, has been suspended without any pay for the rest of the season by the Baltimore management.

HUGH SMITH, himself a pitcher, is quoted as saying that Tony Mullane is the best left-hand pitcher in the profession. He is as speedy to-day as in 1883. Nevertheless Tony has still a long way to go to equal Galvin's record of nineteen years of successful pitching.

SULLIVAN, the Cleveland new boy pitcher, was put overground in remarkably fast time, considering the load that he will weigh 230 pounds. He is a left-handed pitcher, and when he hits he runs away from the batter's box like a professional quarter-runner in the sprints.

NEW YORK has released Catcher Buckley and Pitcher Rusie to Worcester. In the month of January of a year New York has given away Davis and others to the Giants, and has released Buckley to Worcester. Thus unexpected events are constantly occurring in baseball circles.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

After Eight Years the Philosopher Finds Himself Again in Texas.

He Praises the Wonderful State and Its Thrifty People.

Here I am in Texas again, after eight years—the same great, wonderful State, only with more railroads, more people, more homes and more farms in cultivation. Eight years ago I wanted to come to Brownwood, for I believed it to be a good town with bright prospects, and, as I had a little spare money, I wanted to put it there. I wish that I had, but there was no railroad then, and I didn't have time to ride 100 miles overland. It then had about 1,500 people and now about 6,000, and is still increasing rapidly. It has a large territory to draw upon southward and westward, and has a manifest destiny before it. The surrounding country is said to be the best poor man's country in Texas, and as it fills up with immigrants the business of Brownwood must increase. The Georgians abound here, and they flock around me to give me welcome and to talk about the friends and kindred they left behind, and they want to know all about Georgia politics and what the third party is doing. I talk very careful and conservative about that, for I don't know who I am talking to, and State politics is awful hot here in Texas. The Hoggites and the Clarkites are very bitter, and the third party is sawing wood, for there are thousands of democrats here who swear that if Hogg is nominated they will vote for Nugent, the third party candidate. Everybody speaks well of Nugent. Hogg is very unpopular in railroad circles, such as Fort Worth and Dallas, but it is generally conceded that he will be nominated and elected.

I found on the train that brought me here from Fort Worth six men from Murray and Whitfield, coming out to Comanche to buy land. Every train brings some from North Georgia. Young men come by the score. The negro is not in their way here, and if I was a young married man I'd come myself. The truth is, the negro is in the young man's way. There are not a dozen negroes in the town of Weatherford, where I was last week—a pro perous, lively, busy town of 5,000 people—a town where they handle 60,000 bales of cotton, and immense quantities of wheat, and corn and oats and vegetables; where every dray, and hack and carriage is driven by clever, wide-awake young men; where white barbers shave you, and white folks do everything and are not ashamed of it, I know young white men in my town who are clerking for $25 a month who could make $50 or $60 running a dray, but they won't do it because it looks niggery. I know poor girls who won't hire to cook or clean up the house for the same reasons. All labor is honorable here. A young white man has just made up my bed here in the hotel, and he talked to me intelligently and pleasantly while he cleaned up the room. He is earning honest money, and will get a better place after awhile. There are but twenty-five or thirty negroes in Brown county. There is but one in Comanche county, that joins this. He runs on the train, and said his name was Newton Fields, and he had the honor of being the only darky that was allowed to stay. It seems that there were about a hundred in Comanche county, and one of them committed an outrage, and the citizens gathered and made them all leave the county within twenty-four hours. I believe it will come to that in Georgia. Visiting summary punishment upon one does not seem to do any good, and the way to do is to hold his kinfolks and his settlement responsible. These Texans use no timid measures about anything. They are the most independent and self-reliant people I have ever met. They ask no favors. It does not concern them what the North will say, and as for the negro he has to behave himself and be humble, and he does. In our state we help them in every day, and yet they show no gratitude. We employ them as blacksmiths and carpenters and draymen, and at every election they vote against us. You couldn't make them believe that General Grant was a slave owner until Mr. Lincoln's proclamation set them free. A few weeks ago our school board elected a negro girl as teacher in the colored school and her impudent, insolent father said he would let his daughter teach school, but none of his folks should cook or wash or nurse for the white folks. If you hire one she quits when she pleases. No contract will bind them. We have home with all this for peace, but there is a growing alienation between the races. I didn't realize how bad it was until I got here and seen for myself how much better it is to get along without them. They are an everlasting worry at my house and among my neighbors. It costs twice as much to live when you have a negro cook. A friend out here who was raised with the negroes and owned them said that in almost every family in Weatherford the father and boys helped the mother and the girls in all the household manner, and so the burden was light—very light. The family washing is done at the laundry, and all the laundry wagon comes round as regularly as the ice wagon.

Weatherford is a delightful town. The first thing that strikes you is the $60,000 court-house that is built of native stone—stone that is of a rich cream color and is bartered with smooth white trimmings. The next thing to strike the eye is all around the square and the handsome churches and residences are all built of the same material, and it gives the town a clean, cheerful appearance. They have street cars, and waterworks and electric lights. The electric cars are one mile away, situated on a high plateau that welcomes a cooling breeze both day and night. Good people gather there once a year and bring their tents, and they have talks, and lectures, and camp-fire, and musical entertainments and meals, and it is all in fine old time-style. Every day the good people of the town go out to camp there themselves and spend hundreds dollars and have a good time. I heard there many of the same-name acquaintances of the South, for although this town was in under the supervision of the Yankees and Freedmen's Bureau for two years after the war, it was settled by Southern people, and they have kept it so. Its population is about 6,000, and it is growing. It has a fine system of water-works, and is surrounded by a country that is unsurpassed for fertility and beauty. Its people are intelligent and refined, and I am glad I came. I am glad to see my old friends, and I am glad to see the country and the people prosperous and happy. I am glad to see the negro in his proper place, and I am glad to see that the white people are not afraid to tell him what it is. I am glad to see that the white people are not afraid to tell him what it is. I am glad to see that the white people are not afraid to tell him what it is.

THE LABOR WORLD.

AMERICAN street railroads employ 71,000 men.

WOMEN are not allowed to work on the streets in New Bedford unless they have been naturalized.

THE United States manufactures 65,000 hats every day, while England manufactures about 40,000.

THE shoe salesmen of Baltimore have been organized, and have affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

ORGANIZERS for each State of the Union have been appointed by the Carriage and Wagonmakers' International Union.

THE cable in the Hudson (N. Y.) tube and steel rolling mill has been declared off, after having been in force two years and two months.

A VOTE is being taken by the local brewery workmen's unions throughout the country whether or not to join the Knights of Labor in a body.

ONE of the busiest men in New York is President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor. His mail averages over a hundred letters a day.

SUPERVISING ARCHITECT MERRIBOOKS, of Washington, says that the new Eight-Hour Law will cost the Government $5,000,000 more a year on its building contracts alone.

THE boss coopers and manufacturers of staves and other coopers' supplies of Illinois, Indiana and Michigan have combined to fight against the manufacture of barrels by seamless labor.

THE Philadelphia, Reading and New England has reduced the pay of section men to $1.35 a day. They formerly received $1.50. The company has also discharged about one-half the men in the Hartford car shops.

THE annual meeting of the New Jersey State Federation of Trades was taken place in the Assembly Chamber of the State House at Trenton. Sixteen local unions were represented from Paterson, Newark, Jersey City, Camden and Trenton.

OF the 14,000,000 women in Italy nearly 3,000,000 are employed in industrial labor, and over 3,000,000 in agriculture. They are in the majority in the cotton, linen and silk industries, and in the silk trade there are 117,000 women employed and but 17,000 men.

COMPARATIVELY more children are employed in Rhode Island than in any other State of the Union. The population is 345,000, and not less than 5,000 children, between ten and fifteen years, are working in mills and factories. Their wages are from seventy-four cents to $6 per week.

AT a meeting in Boston of the representatives of the Knights of Labor, Central Labor Union and Building Trades Council, a committee was appointed and instructed to visit every labor organization in Massachusetts and solicit funds for the Homestead men. The organizations agreed to raise $30,000 for the strikers.

ONE of the most astonishing inventions of modern times is a new torpedo-boat now undergoing trial at Detroit. It fairly realizes the design of the imaginary "Nautilus," created by the fancy of Jules Verne. In fact, photographs of the craft, as it lies on the surface of the water and nearly submerged, strikingly resemble the pictures of the submarine boat which illustrate the romance of the French author. It is cigar-shaped, pointed at both ends, and has a small domelike turret on top, through a glass in which the steerman looks along the level of the waves. While running thus, the twin screws are driven by a steam engine. When the vessel wishes to sink, the little smokestack is unshipped, and down the cigar-boat goes beneath the water, which closes over it while it pursues the way at a depth of ten feet or more. It can stay under for half an hour comfortably, the supply of air suffering for that length of time. While it is submerged, the steers are run by batteries, in which electricity is stored by the steam engine. The interior is lighted by electricity.

Prof. Atwater, who is a careful student of food generally, is of the opinion that in the United States too much food is eaten containing an excess of fat, sugar, and starch, and not sufficient proteine. "This," he says, "is a natural result of our agricultural conditions, which have led to the production of large quantities of maize, which is relatively deficient in proteine, and of an extremely fat beef and pork. Our agricultural conditions to this extent produce a food containing nitrogen which is known as fat proteine.

Taking the common substances in our food, the nitrogen is found in lean meat,

The efforts to re-organize the party will not be effective, and a hurrah time in politics will continue until after the November election.

Mobile Register: Some time ago the Alliance Herald favored the Australian ballot system. That system requires that every voter be able to read his ballot.

By resolution of the State Democratic executive committee all Democratic voters who vote the National Democratic ticket will be entitled to take part in the party primaries.

The Prattville Progress thus advises: "If you want to be ignorant of your bad qualities, keep out of politics. If you want to know how mean you are, run for office."

Attalla Herald: A very large number of would-be leaders in Alabama have had a lesson along the line that abuse is not argument, and it is impossible to drive the voters of the State by abusing them.

The Alliance people whom we saw in West Alabama last week repeated that they were not wedded to the sub-treasury plan for financial relief. They want some statesman to give them something better.

The Lauderdale Gazette has succumbed to the financial depression after a brief existence and its material has been purchased by the Banner man who will conduct the paper under the title of Florence Gazette.

Dr. Macune still hangs on to the sub-treasury bill, and says that nearly everybody is for it. There is one person, however, who is not for it, and that is Weaver. Weaver says that it is merely a "suggestion," and in all his speeches treats it with utter contempt.—Ex.

The first of August showed to us that the white people of this State are about equally divided and in the future all individual preferences must be sacrificed and patriotism must prevail in order to restore unity and harmony in the Democratic ranks. — Prattville Progress.

The majority of the white people of North Alabama are becoming clamorous for a change of our election law. This paper has advocated a change for many years, and the State would be in less political turmoil now if the change had been made four years ago, when it was being generally agitated.

Cotton may bring a good price this fall, but from the way some people are neglecting their own business in an endeavor to save the country at large, they are not going to have any cotton to sell. Then the question is, what good is the high price going to do them?

The Alliance Herald has never taught that principle of the Alliance which directs placing a charitable construction upon the views of those who may differ with you. It prefers to incite to riot and strife. While all Alliance men do not agree with the Herald's extreme views, yet there are many who seem to endorse its course, and the paper continues its evil work.

The registration law, under the new constitution of Mississippi has practically eliminated the negro vote from politics in that State. Out of the total negro voting population of 85,000 only about 8,000 have been able to qualify under the new law. The law says that no person can register in Mississippi who cannot read the constitution or interpret portions of it read to him.

The cholera, the strikes, Bill Stevens and Wilson offering to divide the offices with the negroes, and the Kolb platform offering to secure for them legal rights, the election contest and then the Age-Herald all have something kindly of the "pack of talpers" called country editors, and enough to make the average citizen start up in the morning with the exclamation: "Mr. Speaker, where was I at."

Mr. Bowman's execution committee rejects all propositions to compromise and all efforts at re-organization. It would rid of the Jones men out of the Democratic party. Concerning that, committee's scornful address Col. H. A. Herbert in a recent speech says:

Now, my fellow democrats, it does not matter whether all these propositions were ever made by persons having authority from the Jones' wing to make them or not, Mr. Bowman's committee treats them as pending propositions, and it hastens at once and promptly to reject them all. One proposition is to divide the State executive committee equally between the two wings. They state and reject that. Another is to divide the electoral ticket equally between the two wings. They state and reject that. Another is to divide congressmen equally among the two wings. They state and reject that proposition, too.

What does all this mean, my fellow countrymen? Is it not plain that the meaning is that the two wings of the democratic party in Alabama never shall come together if this committee can help it? If this be true, then, I ask every democrat to answer the question for himself, has not the time come when the democrats who voted for Captain Kolb should declare themselves independent of this leadership, and get themselves and their neighbors ready to vote according to the dictates of their own consciences?

And let me call your attention to the concluding words of the extract I have read. The committee says: "It is our opinion that you will elect by a free ballot and a fair count nine congressmen and the entire electoral ticket."

How is that to be done? The address from which I have read is directed to the "Jeffersonian Democracy"—that means the democrats who supported Captain Kolb. Everybody knows that in the recent contest the republicans have had no ticket in the field. They divided their votes between Jones and Kolb. Let any Kolb democrat figure it out for himself. There are about 300,000 voters in the State, 170,000 whites and 130,000, blacks. Of the whites about 10,000 are Republicans. If the 10,000 Republicans and such of the negro voters as will go with them in the presidential election vote for the Harrison electors, where will the Jeffersonian democracy get votes enough without the aid of the Jones democracy, to elect nine congressmen and an electoral ticket of their own? The proposition, my fellow citizens is an absurdity.

In this emergency, my fellow citizens, there is but one resource, and that is for Jones democrats and Kolb democrats in the different counties in the State to get together and resolve to treat the election as a family quarrel and vote together for Cleveland and Stevenson this fall. I understand they have taken steps to come together in Marengo, and this is what I trust and believe sober second thought will bring the bulk of our democrats to do everywhere. Another thing ought to be done. Let public meetings be held everywhere requesting the legislature as soon as organized to provide laws under which a contest can be had, if such laws be needed to enable a fair decision to be arrived at.

It will be noted from the proceedings of the convention, Hon. Gaston A. Robbins received the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district at Calera on last Thursday. The VIEW predicted the nomination of Mr. Robbins early in the race and the Selma Mirror set down on us because of that prediction and hooted at the prophesy. The Mirror favored Capt. Burns. It is expected that the People's party will select A. P. Longshore, of Shelby, to make the race against Robbins. Mr. Robbins may not carry every county, but he is no doubt confident of getting a good majority in the district.

The country editor does more good work for less money than any man in the world. He labors for the good of the people, and too often the people forget him. He pushes men forward, makes them great and greatness goes in this world, and by them he is least appreciated and soonest forgotten. There is not one such editor in the land who doesn't do good immeasurably beyond the substance of his reward; and there is not a country paper that doesn't do vastly more than it can ever get pay for doing. —Age-Herald.

Democratic Convention.

Held by the Third Congressional District Democratic Convention.

Calera, Aug. 25.—The Fourth Congressional District Convention was called to order at 1 p. m., by J. B. Knox, of Calhoun, Chairman of the Executive Committee, who called D. T. Goodwin, of Calhoun, to the Chair. Judge J. T. Burns, of Cleburne, and R. E. L. Nott, of Dallas, were elected temporary secretaries.

Upon the motion of M. L. Wood, of Dallas, the Chairman appointed W. C. Phillips, of Dallas, T. W. Ayers, of Calhoun, W. H. Howle, of Cleburne, W. B. Browne, of Shelby, T. S. Plowman, of Talladega, W. A. Collier, of Chilton, and J. B. Knox at large, as a Committee on Credentials.

The Convention then adjourned until 3 p. m.

On re-assembling, the committee on credentials reported and the report was adopted.

Upon motion of Mr. Wood of Dallas, the temporary organization was made permanent.

Upon motion, of Mr. Collier of Chilton, the Chair appointed a Committee on Rules: W. A. Collier, of Chilton, J. R. Caldwell, of Cleburne, J. K. Milner, of Shelby, N. R. Gambles, of Dallas, S. J. Bowle, of Talladega, E. F. Brook, of Calhoun, and B. L. Boykin, at large.

Nominations were made as follows: M. H. Lane, of Calhoun, G. A. Robbins, J. F. Burns, and A. Irwin, of Dallas, Cecil Browne, of Talladega.

The first ballot resulted as follows: Lane 8, Burns 11, Robbins 6, Irwin 5, Browne 15, Forney 5, Grant 3.

For twenty-eight ballots the result was unchanged and the convention adjourned until 8:30 p. m.

ROBBINS NOMINATED.

On the reconvening of the convention the name of Mr. Irwin was withdrawn and the ballot stood: Lane 8, Burns 13, Robbins 13, Browne 15, Forney 5, Grant 3.

The first excitement of the evening was the change of the Dallas vote to Robbins 19; Burns 7.

After a recess of ten minutes the ballot stood: Lane 8, Burns 7, Robbins 27, Browne 16, Forney 5.

Things went on with varied success until the 70th ballot when it was evident that something was about to be done and another recess was taken when Dallas came back to the hall with 26 votes for Robbins and before the roll was finished a motion was made and carried that Robbins nomination be made unanimous.

Mr. Robbins addressed the convention thanking them for their compliment.

Messrs. Browne, Lane and Burns also addressed the convention pledging their aid and loyalty to the nominee.

The more intelligent the negro becomes the more Democratic he grows. The negro lovers in the North have held up on sending their money and maiden ladies down here to educate the negro since they have found out that an education makes a Democrat of him. They now let the Southern people spend their own money on the negro's education, and the Southern people are spending lots of it.—Age-Herald.

Keep the Money at Home.

Concerning the fact that in Tuskaloosa county the home printers saw a great deal of work in their line sent out of the county and to establishments that had no interest in Tuskaloosa, the Northport Breeze very truthfully says:

The efforts of our late coterie of county officers to impress upon their constituents their economical administration of county affairs availed them nothing. The public realize that a dollar spent at home is worth more to the community in which it circulates than two dollars spent abroad, and when such patronage can be kept at home without any additional cost it should be done.

The Jones crowd is silly enough to suppose that if they will repeal their party law, and pass a resolution inviting a return of the Kolb forces to the ranks of the party that the breach will be healed.—

The Democratic party recognizes the fact that a great number of democrats voted for Kolb, and that vote does not make them republicans, populites or independents, or anything but democrats. Hence the party does invite all democrats to rally to the support of Cleveland and Stevenson and the great democratic party. If Kolb had posed as either a radical, third party or independent, it would have been a little different, but he claimed all the time to be a democrat of democrats. Hence thousands of good democrats voted for him, who would not have done so had he declared he was not a democrat. That is all there is in it, and all democrats are invited to return home. There are a few who never were Democrats, who will not return and vote with us, but it would not be safe to sell many of them that they were not planted in [illegible] Mirror.

Tillman is now [illegible] of a third party. The only man in Ocala in favor of a third party were the sort of men that no party wanted. If I understand the alliance and the professions of faith it means Democracy, and if the Alliance does not mean democracy, then I do not want to belong to it nor stay with it." The above was uttered by Mr. Kolb while in Nashville in March, 1891.

A Woman's Good Name.

Many people who would recoil with horror from cutting a human creature's throat, which really does not hurt very much and only for a moment, will murder a woman's good name without remorse or compunction, and that hurts worse than death for a lifetime. It is a meaner crime than murder. We cry, and rightly too, against the sensational and depraving habit of making heroes of robbers and cut-throats. It is a hard thing to do and yet I have less hatred and loathing for the late Jessie James than I have for some people who have never been convicted of a capital crime, but whose tongues we know are worse than any knife that ever severed a human jugular. —R. J. Burdette in Ladies' Home Journal.

Patronize Home.

Christian Advocate:—There is no more suicidal policy than to withhold our patronage from home markets, industries and enterprises. In matters of this sort, take it home to yourself. Do unto others as you would have them do unto you. Do not break the backbone of local enterprise by patronizing foreign markets. Stand to yourself and to your own. Do not send your job work away from home. All things considered, you can do just as well at home and thereby help your neighbor and build up your town. If we can get what we want, and on as good terms as elsewhere it is because we have driven facilities from us and closed enterprise and industries that should have been encouraged. Buy your clothes, merchandise and groceries at home, or you will drive these business men from your own town, close business houses, depreciate home stocks and reduce your real estate.

Riding through the beautiful park of forty acres fronting the Alabama Insane Hospital at Tuskaloosa the attention is caught by the mound which marks the last resting place of all that was mortal of Dr. Bryce, the late Superintendent of the Institution. The Hospital itself as modeled and managed by Dr. Bryce will ever be his greatest monument, however grand may be the stone that marks his place of sepulchre.

Dr. J. T. Searcy, of Tuskaloosa, is spoken of as a suitable successor to Dr. Bryce as Superintendent of the Insane Hospital. Dr. Searcy would carry to the position that experience and scientific knowledge which would render him a fit successor of the great deceased.

This paper is in line with the people who want more money, but it has no egotistical theories to promulgate on the subject. The free coinage of silver might help, but would not fulfil all demands for a circulating medium.

A great many who voted for Capt. Kolb for Governor in this State are Democrats and are declaring for Cleveland, notwithstanding it was predicted that they would all land in the third party. It is not to be expected that Mr. Cleveland fulfils their ideal of a president in every respect but he is the nominee of the party and is a staunch friend of the south.

It is by sympathy that we enter into the concerns of others, that we are moved as they are moved and are never suffered to be indifferent spectators to anything which men can do or suffer.

The New York Commercial Advertiser is in great glee over the split in the Democratic party in Alabama. It thinks it sees Alabama safely landed in the Harrison column because of the disturbance that has been caused.

A VIEW scribe visited his old home in Tuskaloosa, Ala., last week, while on a brief respite from office duties. His brother of the Northport Breeze is nicely domiciled, though feeling somewhat "blue" because of the defeat of the Jones county ticket, for which ticket he had made hard fight. The Breeze man is a hard worker in any cause in which he enlists, and this particular contest was more than usually unpleasant because of having a regiment of relatives in the county to advise him, and about half of these on the opposite side. But the Jones men there are strong financially and numerically and they will stand by the Breeze well, the paper having a large and constantly increasing circulation. Industrially, Tuskaloosa holds her own, and as long as the river runs over coal beds that remain untouched she will live in grand hopes of the future—to be realized probably by succeeding generations. The government work on the Warrior is even slower than that on the Birmingham public building, and Tuskaloosians with their enterprising young Mayor to lead should assail the next session of Congress with louder shouts for "the flag and an appropriation."

Jemison Jottings.

Our local base ball team returned from Clanton Friday evening, crowned with victory, and was received amid the applause of an admiring people.

The most enjoyable social event of the week was a "bonnet party" given to our local base ball club on their return from Clanton by the young ladies of Jemison at the residence of Dr. Givhan. Each young man was required to trim his partner's hat. The young men turned millnite and trimed their partner's hats in a style which has aroused the envy of our local milliner. The young men say they had enough "yaller" ribbon left to trim the hats of all the Clanton girls a la Parisienne.

Rev. J. J. Dalton preached his first sermon here Sunday and made a favorable impression on all present.

Rev. J. L. Wyatt, former pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, preached his farewell sermon here Sunday night from the text: "The Lord watch between me and thee when we are absent one from another." His words were full of pathos and eloquence from the beginning to end. Brother Wyatt was beloved by all who knew him. He and his wife left Monday morning for Lebanon, Tenn., where he will enter the theological Department of Lebanon College.

Miss Lela Parker, of Columbiana, has been visiting J. R. Hill's family during the past week, but left for her home Monday morning, consequently a certain young man has the "blues" this week.

Mrs. J. R. Hill and her two little daughters are visiting relatives in Columbiana.

E. G. Givhan and J. R. Hill left this week to attend the Shelby Association. Several others will attend the association from this place.

J. A. Butler and son, Junius, are on a visit to relatives and friends in Dixie. Hence the domino game is resting quietly.

Mr. T. F. Young and son, Mr. J. T. Taylor, and his family and Miss Lizzie Taylor have returned home to Macon, Ga., after a week's stay with relatives and friends in the Jumbo neighborhood.

There has been a large per cent. of fodder lost by the continued wet weather. Corn, peas, potatoes and cane are very fine. Cotton is sorry, though but little of the staple is raised in this section.

QUARANTINE ORDERED.

Later Cholera News From European Centers.

A Washington dispatch of Wednesday says. The treasury department has communicated with the agents of the steamship companies whose ships ply between Hamburg and Bremen and Baltimore requesting them to have their steamers report at Cape Charles quarantine station, Va., before proceeding up Chesapeake bay. The steamers will be inspected by the officers of the marine hospital service at the quarantine station, so that all danger of the introduction of cholera may be averted.

A RIGID EXAMINATION ORDERED.

The treasury department is following up the precau ions heretofore adopted, and will use all the means at hand to keep the cholera out of the country. The attorney at Washington for the various steamship companies has promised their co-operation to the department. He said the steamship lines were fully impressed with the gravity of the situation and would omit no precautionary measures. Arriving immigrants will be subject to a rigid examination. A circular was issued by the treasury department Wednesday to all customs and hospital officers and steamship agents, ordering that on and after September 20, 1892, rags from any foreign port be refused entry in the United States unless accompanied by a certificate from the consular officer at the port of shipment to the effect that they have been disinfected in accordance with the prescribed methods. It is also ordered that rags gathered in or shipped from any port or place where the cholera is known to prevail in an epidemic form be denied entry to the United States absolutely after the date of this circular, except such as were then afloat, which must be disinfected on arrival.

PRECAUTION AT NEW YORK.

The quarantine officials in New York are busy preparing to prevent any importation of cholera from the infected European ports. Orders have been given by the commissioners to have the fever ship Samuel Carlton ready for hospital use in the lower bay. There are several vessels due this week from Hamburg, where the cholera is now raging. The ships have about two thousand immigrants aboard. They will be detained at quarantine and thoroughly examined.

THE REPORT FROM RUSSIA.

A St. Petersburg cablegram says: Official returns show Wednesday there were reported throughout Russia 5,505 new cases of cholera and 2,659 deaths from the disease. This is a decrease of 1,391 new cases and 770 deaths compared with the official figures Monday.

FROM GERMANY.

Eighty cases of cholera were reported at Altona, near Hamburg, Germany, Wednesday, including three cases of Asiatic cholera. Some of the business men of Hamburg are afraid to use public telephones, fearing contagion from the transmitter. Otherwise business proceeds as usual. The police and sanitary authorities of Hamburg at a conference Wednesday discussed the eventual closing of the harbor unless the epidemic speedily subsides. Official statistics show that between August 18th and the 23d there were 319 cases of suspected cholera reported. Of this number seventy-five of the patients died.

ITS APPEARANCE AT ANTWERP.

It is now acknowledged that cholera prevails at Antwerp, Belgium, and that after maintaining that suspicious cases of sickness were cholera nostras and not the dreaded Asiatic cholera, the official announcement had to be made Wednesday that it was the fatal scourge. Five persons died in the hospital Tuesday from the disease soon after admission. This makes three great northern European ports having the disease.

At London and Berlin sanitary measures are being taken and at the former place all clothing and baggage suspected of containing cholera germs will be burned.

A Pittsburg dispatch says: A car loaded with ingots was blown up with dynamite, or some other high explosive, on a sidetrack of the Allegheny Valley railroad, early Wednesday morning. The car was consigned to Carnegie Company's Thirty-third street mill. Fortunately there was no one within 100 feet of the car when it was blown up and the fragments, which were scattered in every direction, did no injury.

CONVICTS ORDERED BACK.

Tennessee's Prison Board Pass Final Resolutions.

The Tennessee state board of prison Inspectors, in session at Nashville, Wednesday, formally ordered the return of the convicts to the branch prisons, and they will be sent back as soon as arrangements for their comfort can be made. Owing to the vigorous prosecutions of the rioters, it is not expected that there will be any trouble, but a strong guard will be sent. The board adopted the following resolution:

Resolved 1. That this board has no authority or power to entertain any proposition from the lessees for the voluntary surrender of the lease upon the terms suggested in said reply, nor upon any terms other than by a declaration of forfeiture for non-compliance with its terms by the lessee as the law prescribes.

2. That being anxious to have the laws of the state maintained and the lease carried out and enforced as long as the law authorizing and creating the same remains in force, and inasmuch as the conditions imposed by the lessee upon its continuance in the performance of the lease are provisional only, and the least it will offer and without, in any manner, admitting the justice or legality of any of its claims set forth in said reply, the board accepts said proposition and hereby orders that convicts be ordered returned to the branch prisons from which they were lately removed at the earliest possible moment.

PAT. CALHOUN DENIES

That He Received Money From the Terminal Co., Without Giving Vouchers.

A New York dispatch says: Patrick Calhoun, one of the directors of the Richmond Terminal, was seen in regard to his financial relation with that company. It was said that Mr. Calhoun drew monies from the Terminal treasury without leaving the proper vouchers. In relation to this he said: "There is no truth in it. I have never drawn a dollar from the Terminal company except for legitimate expenses, and any effort to create any contrary impression is absolutely without foundation and finds its inspiration in the effort of certain parties who are responsible for the wreck of the Terminal system to hide real causes, and their part in producing the present condition of affairs."

BUSINESS OUTLOOK

As Reported for Past Week by Dun & Co.

R. G. Dun & Co's weekly review of trade says: Less advices from the West promise rather better crops of wheat and corn, and the cotton prospects are a little better, though none of the yields will approach that of last year. With abundant supplies brought over, the outlook is so good that business distinctly improves and the prospect for the fall trade is everywhere considered bright.

REPORT OF THE STRIKES.

The great strikes in New York, Pennsylvania and Tennessee appear to have scarcely an appreciable effect upon business as yet, and though an interruption of traffic is threatened on many important railroads stocks are generally steady or strong, closing but small fractions lower than a week ago.

In cotton a further decline of a sixteenth has occured and the sales have been 598,000 bales, the actual movement at this season being insignificant, while the crop prospect with heavy stocks on hand tend, to depress prices. Last week the quantity which came into sight for the crop year rose above nine million bales, and stocks of American here and abroad are over 2,300,000 bales.

Orders for dress goods from the West are large, and cotton jobbers have no difficulty in selling the whole production, higher prices for bleached goods being expected. The print cloth trade is enormous, the contracts in two weeks covering a million pieces and the production for August and September being sold.

TRADE NOTES.

The boot and shoe shops are pressed by jobbers and the trade is healthy, though profits are small. Wool is fairly active and firm and the outlook rosy. Iron is steadier at Philadelphia and the finished products improving, the trade in hardware being fair and exceeding last year's. At Baltimore receipts of fruit and vegetables are not equal to the demands of packers and manufacturers of clothing are busy. The iron mills at Pittsburg will also resume, but the present shipments of coke are the smallest for some time, and business in window glass is not active.

Improvement is also seen with brighter prospects at Little Rock and Nashville, and while trade is quiet at New Orleans sugar is strong and active, but receipts of rice are light, the crop having been damaged by rains. The sales of wool at the three largest markets since the middle of May have been 91,000,000 pounds against 70,500,000 last year. The production of boots and shoes is now estimated at 165,000,000 pairs, and the Eastern shipments last week were 6,000 cases more than a week ago.

Business failures occurring throughout the country during last week number for the United States 178.

SOUTHERN PROSPERITY.

Industrial Growth During the Past Week.

In its review of the industrial situation in the South for the past week, the Chattanooga Tradesman states that its correspondents at all important points in the Southern States report that business during the week has been somewhat lessened in amount. This is caused in part by labor troubles, now practically ended, in Tennessee, and by political excitement in other States. The crop reports are generally favorable. The demand for machinery for agricultural purposes indicates that the farmers are preparing to gather a large return for their labors. The textile plants are in full operation and additions and enlargements are daily reported. The iron and coal production continues up to the average. The proportion produced in the district where rioting has taken place has been so small, that the temporary shutting down of the coal and ore mines in that region has no effect on the market.

Thirty-eight new industries are reported as established or incorporated during the week, together with six enlargements of manufactories. Among the new industries reported are brick works at Calaveras, Texas, a $60,000 development company at Atlanta, Ga., electric lights and power plants at Asheville, N. C., costing $150,000, at Elkin, N. C., Gonzales, Texas, and Warrenton, Va.; and flour and grist mills at Huntsville, Alabama; Pigott, Arkansas; Obion, Tennessee; Claude, Texas, and Culpepper and Orange, Virginia. Gas works costing $100,000 reported at Wheeling, W. Va., ice factories at Rogers, Ark., and Richmond, Ky., machinery works at Bridgeport, Ala., and stove works at Weatherford, Tex. Coal mines are to be opened at Arbuckle and Philippi, W. Va., a $30,000 oil mill will be built at Whitewright, Tex., phosphate mining companies organized at Ocala and Williston, Fla., a $20,000 stove company at Covington, Ky., and a woolen mill at Elkin, N. C.

The woodworking plants of the week include lumber companies at Arkansas City and Conway, Ark., Bogue Chitto, Miss., and Dayton Ky., a planing mill at Richmond, Ky., saw mills at Obion, Tenn., and Suffolk, Va., and variety works at Morgantown, W. Va.

Enlargements for the week include coke ovens at Algoma, W. Va., quarries at Muldoon, Texas, cotton mills at Piedmont, Ala., and wood-working plants at St. Mark's, Fla. Among the new buildings of the week are churches at Little Rock, Ark., Cookville, Tenn., and Bridgeport, W. Va., a hotel at Norfolk, Va., school buildings at Geneva, Fla., Roanoke, Va., and Bunge, Texas, and a warehouse at Savannah, Ga.

IRON HALL RECEIVER

Appointed at Indianapolis—Bond Fixed at $1,000,000.

At Indianapolis Tuesday, the court appointed James F. Failey, of that city, receiver of the Order of the Iron Hall, fixing his bond at $1,000,000. Supreme Cashier Davis testified that he notified the officials of the order six months ago that unless somebody inaugurated a reform in the management of the affairs of the order it would surely fall into the hands of a receiver. He also stated that at the last meeting of the supreme sitting, he charged Somerby with irregularities and mismanagement.

In Baltimore Judge Dennis appointed James J. Wiener and James C. France receivers of the order. They will administer $135,000 of funds still remaining in Maryland. The officials of the order gave consent to their appointment.

In St. Louis, 1,500 local members of the Iron Hall adopted resolutions endorsing the paying of all assessments and to support Chief Justice Somerby. The sensation of the meeting was a speech of Deputy Supreme Chief Justice Badger. He charged Supreme Cashier Davis and Supreme Accountant Walker with endeavoring to wreck the order. He charged Davis with instigating numerous suits and said further that in the matter of sending money to aid in the new wrecked Philadelphia bank: Somerby's opposition to the plan was strong and that Davis overruled him.

TEXAS R. R. COMMISSION

Declared Unconstitutional by Judge McCormick.

A Dallas, Texas, dispatch, says: In the famous case by which the Texas and Pacific, the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe, the St. Louis and Southwestern railways sought an injunction out of the United States court restraining the Texas railway commission from enforcing certain tariffs, Judge A. P. McCormick Monday morning handed down a decision giving to the complainants all the relief for which they prayed.

SWITCHMEN'S STRIKE ENDS

The Fight Given Up and the Men returning to Work.

Chief Arthur Refused to Let His Men Go Out With Them.

A Buffalo news special says: At midnight Wednesday night Mr. Sweeney, at the head of the switchmen's order, officially recognized the fact that the strike movement of the switchmen began twelve days ago in Buffalo had failed. In official terms of the order, the strike was "declared off." Men who were formerly employed as switchmen in the railway yards here will before daylight be notified by their local officials that the purpose for which they quit their employment has not been accomplished, and that they are now at liberty to get back their places if they can.

GOV. FLOWER'S PROCLAMATION.

Governor Flower issued a proclamation Wednesday saying:

"In view of the continued attempts at the destruction of property and malicious interference with the running of railway trains in certain sections of the state, I deem it my duty to direct the attention of the people of the state to the provision of the penal code relating to such offenses, as amended by the legislature during the present year."

The governor in detail calls attention to all the sections of the penal code which bear upon interference with railway trains. The governor then offers a reward of $100 to be paid upon the arrest and conviction of each person who shall, during the next thirty days, violate the provisions of the penal code relating to railroads.

GOV. BUCHANAN'S ADDRESS.

He Gives a Detailed Statement of the Labor Troubles.

The following address to the public was issued Saturday by Gov. Buchanan:

To the People of Tennessee:

That there is an insurrection in the mining district of this state is a fact well known to the public. As many wild rumors and sensational reports have gained credence, I deem it wise and prudent to make the following statement in brief to the public. A complete and detailed account according to records on file at this office of the troubles will hereafter be made public.

Information was received at this office August 13th that the Tracy City branch prison had surrendered to the miners and the stockades were burned. On Sunday, August 14th, the superintendent of prisons ordered an additional warden and guard to reinforce Inman's stockade. On Monday, August 15th reliable information was received that the stockade at Inman was threatened with an attack. The sheriff of Marion county was ordered to summon a posse and protect the stockade, but failed to execute the order and the stockade was captured by the miners. The sheriff failed to obey the order. Troops from Knoxville reached Oliver Springs; troops from Chattanooga were intercepted. The stockade was attacked by miners who were repulsed, but it it finally capitulated to an overwhelming force.

Fearing a similar outbreak at Coal Creek without waiting for official information, I at once telegraphed the sheriff of Morgan county to summon a large posse, and protect the stockade. The nearest militiary force, the Chattanooga and Knoxville companies, were ordered to go at once to the scene of action. I ordered the sheriffs of Hamilton and Knox counties to supplement the regular troops by 500 men each, and sheriffs of Shelby and Davidson to furnish 1,000 men each, and the sheriffs of other counties to furnish their respective quota. I ordered General Carnes with the force at his disposal to proceed as rapidly as possible to coal Creek and disperse the mob. I have entire confidence in the skill and bravery of General Anderson, who is in command of the state forces at Coal Creek, and occupies a strong fortified position. The last official reports were that General Carnes, with a strong force, had reached within a few miles of Coal Creek.

On Wednesday, August 17th, having obtained reliable information of the strength of state troops at Coal Creek, I ordered the entire military force of the state to concentrate at Knoxville, under command of General Carnes, brigadier general N. G. S. T. I have every reason to believe that the insurrection will be quelled. To render this result certain, additional forces are being sent as reinforcements as rapidly as they can be assembled and transported. Some sheriffs and citizens have gallantly volunteered offers of assistance and have been gladly received. It is the purpose of the executive department to use every power conferred on it by the constitution and laws to restore order and preserve the maintenance of law. I therefore call on every patriotic citizen to hold himself in readiness in case his services should be needed by the state.

JOHN P. BUCHANAN, Governor.

HOT WEATHER IN EUROPE.

Many Fatalities Attributed to the Fierce Heat.

A Vienna cablegram of Sunday says: The emperor, Francis Joseph, has countermanded the orders for the holding of the military manoeuvers fixed for August 29th, owing to the intense heat. The action of the emperor is due to reports received from Carniola, where manoeuvres have been held, notwithstanding extremely hot weather. Two hundred soldiers there were sunstruck. Eleven men died.

A VILLAGE ALMOST DESTROYED.

Advices come from Lucerne that the heat caused a fall of ice in a glacier in the Valley of the Visp, which almost destroyed the village of Tasch, near Zermatt.

WRECKS A TRAIN.

A cablegram from Paris states that the heat snapped a rail at the Bourget station Monday, causing the telescoping of a train. The driver and stoker of the engine were crushed to death.

CROPS RUINED.

A later cable dispatch from Vienna states that the heat has caused numerous forest fires and injured the field crops, especially in Hungary, but the vintage prospects are very fine.

CAUSES A SPREAD OF CHOLERA.

Advices from Berlin state that since the hot spell set in, numerous cases of cholera have occurred in various parts of Germany, and several persons have died of the disease in Hamburg, but no cases of Asiatic cholera have been reported.

THE CHOLERA RECORD.

The Dread Disease Still Slaying Its Thousands

A St. Petersburg news special says: Official returns of new cases of cholera Monday and deaths show a decrease, compared with Saturday's figures, of fifteen cases and an increase of 111 deaths. Total number of new cases reported Monday, 6,906; total deaths, 3,430.

Advices from Hamburg, Germany, state that cholera is chiefly prevalent in Alstadt, or the old portion of the city, comparatively few cases occurring in Neustadt, or the new portion. Every precaution possible is being taken to localize the disease. A number of new cases were reported Tuesday.

A dispatch from Rendsburg, in the province of Holstein, states that every day hundreds of persons are dying there from cholera. Rendsburg is a very unhealthy place and military quarters are unknown. It has no less than 20 men-of-war in the service of transporting troops of the garrison to which it is located. Most of all persons are afraid to leave Rendsburg. Other cities are also infected.

AT COAL CREEK.

Richard Barry from the Tennessee Militia Camp Reports.

Tuesday was the quietest day Coal Creek has had in many weeks. The militiamen are still scouring the woods, gathering in any lurking woodcutter, coaldigger or farmer who may fall in their way. But the sight of a squad of soldiers surrounding a half-dozen men has ceased to be interesting in this section of the state. A new scheme, however, for finding the missing miners has been instituted by the soldiers. Squads now go to the deserted mines and build big fires in the entrances then the soldiers will make themselves easy and wait until the hiding miner is smoked out. Quite a number of men have been smoked out and the soldiers will not pass a mine without suspecting that some of their old foes are secured in it. Many of the arrests being made are working hardships on innocent people, but that is a part of the disadvantage of military law and cannot be helped. General Carnes, however, is sifting the great mass as rapidly as possible and scores are returning to their homes on parole every day.

The soldiers are not enjoying the situation much, and some of the boys are mighty anxious for furloughs; but these General Carnes refuses to give. They are subsisting at present on regular soldiers' diet, while many of the miners are throwing that aside for the best the country can supply. Baskets filled with the luxuries of their homes are brought to the prisoners every day.

General Carnes has been making a thorough search for and examination of the files in the Knoxville and Ohio railroad telegraph office, and some startling information has been discovered, but just what it is no one knows. The general is now in complete and absolute control of the office and every message sent us is subject to his inspection.

'Squire Kincaid and 'Squire Wilson will organize a court at once and trial of the men will begin. There are now over two hundred men confined in a small church awaiting trial, and the evidence against some of them is very strong. As fast as they are committed the prisoners will be sent to Knoxville and Nashville and jailed. Lindsay's trial will not begin for several days. He is confined in the church and is beginning to grow restless.

UNDER MILITARY RULE.

The people of Coal Creek are not taking kindly to some of the military ways. Some of the boys have a disposition to be tyrannical and ugly. Homes are invaded and searched at will. General Carnes, however, calls the boys down when he discovers any violation of military laws

CONVICTS WILL BE RETURNED

To the Branch Prisons at Tracy City, Inman and Oliver's.

A Nashville dispatch of Monday says: The convicts are to be returned to the branch prisons at Tracy City, Inman and Oliver Springs and the dignity of the law maintained. The lessees of the penitentiary, the Tennessee Coal and Iron company, had not fully complied with their contract, and a few days ago the board of inspectors demanded that they comply with all the contract's terms within twenty days or a forfeiture of the contract would be declared. This coming right in the midst of the rioting looked like a surrender to the miners as in case the contract were forfeited the convicts would be located at Nashville, at least until another contract was made. Saturday the inspectors made another demand on the lessees, viz: to remove from the main prison at once all the convicts above four hundred. This action was taken because the contract provides that this number shall be the limit in the main prison. Monday the prison board had a conference with Vice President Baxter, Attorney A. M. Shook and H. F. Debardeleben, a heavy stockholder. The proceedings were secret, but in an interview Mr. Baxter stated positively that Saturday's order will be complied with and the convicts sent back to the branch prisons. The state will furnish protection. This means that the convict lease question will have to be settled by the legislature and that the state officials will not surrender to the miners.

ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND.

Great Preparation Being Made at Chickamauga for the Re-union.

A Washington dispatch of Sunday says: Preparations for the coming reunion of the Army of the Cumberland at Chattanooga, September 15th, 16th and 17th next, have brought out some information of great interest to all veterans. As one example, it is found that there are 21,000 surviving officers and non-commissioned officers of the 265 regiments and batteries which served in that army. Names and present postoffice addresses of this whole number have been secured and invitations to the reunion sent to each. Besides these, several thousand invitations have been sent out under direction of Gen. Rosecrans, president of the society. This list of officers and non-commissioned officers is accepted as showing that about eighty thousand private soldiers, who served in the Army of the Cumberland, or about one hundred thousand in all, still survive. Information received by Gen. Rosecrans indicates that the Chattanooga reunion will be one of the largest army gatherings of recent years.

TEXAS MILITIA DISBANDING.

Favoritism and Politics Assigned as the Cause.

A news special of Sunday from Bryan, Texas, says: A split up of the state militia has started, the Bryan Light Infantry having disbanded and returned its commission. Captain C. S. Gainer in his letter to Adjutant General Mabry says the whole Texas volunteer guard is going to pieces. He charges superior officers with favoritism and conduct unbecoming soldiers or gentlemen in favoring certain companies in encampment decisions, in assailing the character of officers and men and denying them a hearing. Politics has entered the ranks of the militia and it promises to wind up like the democratic convention did.

Bad Lindsay's Conduct.

A Washington dispatch of Monday says: The department of justice has no direct supervision of deputy marshals, appointments of this being made by the reputable themselves, consequently the department has not interfered in the matter of the conduct of Bud Lindsay, who was charged with shooting at Coal Creek, Texas. Officials of the department have availed themselves of the information contained in the press dispatches on the subject, and Attorney General Miller has decided to communicate with United States Marshal Tipton to request of the governor that if the facts are as reported [illegible]

A St. Petersburg cablegram says: The official cholera report issued Saturday, shows a better general condition of affairs in cholera infected districts. There were 9,903 new cases Friday, throughout the country, and 3,376 deaths, a decrease of 974 new cases and 1,106 deaths. It also shows a large decrease in proportion of deaths to cases.

A Chicago dispatch of Tuesday says: Sam Moy, prominent in the Chinese colony, has surprised the government officials by informing them that orders had been received from China not to obey the law requiring Chinese residents to take out certificates of residence. He said the government of China had sent officials to this country to fight the law in the courts.

A Washington dispatch of Monday says: The war department has honored the requisition of the governor of Tennessee, made Saturday, for a small quantity of artillery ammunition, and it will be shipped from Rock Island arsenal to the place desired by the state. Several years ago the war department issued to Tennessee a light field battery, and it is supposed the present supply of ammunition is wanted for use by that battery.

BLACK BELT BELIEFS,

ODD SOUTHERN SUPERSTITIONS.

Visit to a Colored School. Characteristic Speech by an Ex-Slave That Ended With a Prayer.

HE sunlight is to the earth, after a period of darkness, what superstition is to the Southern negro. In it he seems to "live, move and have his being." Even Ben, my faithful guide and storehouse of knowledge, is steeped in it.

For some days he has not appeared to be himself, and upon inquiry I learn that "de ole red mule done lose her shoe in de cotton patch," and that is a sign that Ben will not be successful in selling the cotton products in the fall.

"Fie, fie, Ben, do not be so superstitious; that can't hurt you any, The idea of believing such a sign!"

"Well, chile, yo' shuh doan know nothin' about it. Is yo' superstitious?"

"No, Ben," I replied, and blushed at the fib. Would it do him any good to know that I had one or two pet "signs" which I cherished and believed in implicitly? He would not understand that to me superatition was "the poetry of life."

"Doan yo' know I'm a Joseph, honey?" continued Ben; "an' would yo' know some of my signs? Yo' better write 'em down in yo' little book," and I obeyed him.

"When yo' pick up a horseshoe an' it has nails in it yo' will sure have sickness in yo' fam'ly; if de nails am gone it means luck, but yo' mus' hang it up.

"When yo' house is full of mice or rats yo' must write a letter to de mice and tell them wa' ter go. If dey doan go at once write another letter and dey sure will go."

"But, Ben, the reason they go is because you are closing the holes, and they must starve or go somewhere else."

"Chile, jes' keep quiet. I sure know moh' about it than yo'. When the house is hanted, an' de 'hant' dress in white, yo' mus' cut a lock of hair from de first nigger yo' meet an' put it over de front door. Ef yo' chile be afraid of hants, sit it over hot lard and say: 'De Lawd He put de debbil in de swine an' I done send de debbil in de lard fo' swine and lard mus' evil spirits keep, but de Lawd He save de chile."

"But, Ben—"

"When yo' dream of a coffin yo' will heah yo' friend is married to yo' lover, but if yo' see de corpse yo' will marry him yo'self. When yo' scour a flo' always turn yo' bucket to the right; it save you many shiver. When de debbil come in the sick room, burn de bed and yo'll have a live man ter keep."

"Ben, don't you——"

"When de white lady ask too many questions and 'rupt pore Ben he won't say any mo' " and with this quaint bit of wisdom he ended his seeming soliloquy.

How sorry I was that I had interrupted him. I coaxed him to continue, but he was not to be coaxed. That evening we were all sitting on the veranda when Ben said:

"Who is de daughters of the Revolution yo' talk so much about?" and we each gave our views of the question and explained it simply, so that he would understand.

"An' must yo' prove that yo' ancestors fought? I sure believe my old woman is one of de daughters. Her gran'father, Massa S——, wa' a General in de wah. He sure fought in de Rebolution; he sure wa' killed at de Bunker Hill."

"Are you very sure about it, Ben; very sure? How did she come to be so far South?

"Someone carried her mother heah. Yo' com' ter de cabin an' ask de ole woman yo'self; she knows."

Again Ben had innocently raised a perplexing question. His wife, the quadroon and ex-slave, could boast of aristocratic blood. This women, this negress, was the grandchild of a man whom the colonists loved and admired—a daughter of the Revolution! No! No! Her black blood, the negro blood, forbids that, and yet what irony of fate brands this women a negress and counts her three-fourths of white blood as nothing? Is it not strange? What inequalities of life in a land where all men are declared free and equal. What black and clouded skies for some, what brilliancy and sunshine for others! Martyrdom and freedom go hand in hand. Time must solve this problem.

A VISIT TO BLACK BELT SCHOOL.

Ben has taken us all to the village school. What humble boys and girls we see. As we go into the room the pupils lay down their well-thumbed spelling books and look at us in amazement. The "professor" tells us to be seated and continues the lesson.

Sydney rises, and with quivering lips replies: "O, the sun is running around the globe and I'm so cold."

"Give another," says Ben. (The professor has told us to request his pupils).

"The heavens declare the glory of God and Birmingham is a great city," replies Sydney, now thoroughly frightened.

I look around the bare room and copythe questions and answers that are upon the blackboard.

While I am musing upon the possibilities and the future of these urchins before me I hear the teacher say: "We will now hear some remarks from our visitors."

How the changes ring in the gamut of fear. Even while I think I am called upon to speak. Don't ask me what I said, something about Cinderella and being good children. They must pardon my abruptness. I never made a speech, in fact wasn't prepared. Then I get to talking about Joseph and am suddenly disconcerted when a pickaninny says: I know dat; Joseph was a pritty man an his brethren sheep heads."

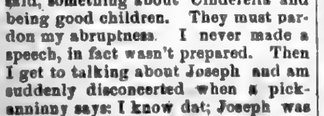
"So am I" is my inward thought, and I sit down. The others of the party make brief addresses and then Ben comes forward. I take a pencil from my pocket and slyly copy his remarks.

OLD BEN MAKES A SPEECH.

Chillen, yo' sure should be proud to live and go ter school. When I wa' a boy like yo', I used ter get a lash ingers tho' yo' be, yo' is as surely American as anyone else in it. See what a fine city we live in; we has a bank in this city, we is. We are a great people. Yo' must be good boys and girls, with hearts large enough to grasp de whole worl'; yo' must hab sympathy fo' de fall'n an' de lowly. Fo'get yo'self and live fo' others an' in others.

Yo' nebber saw yo' poor ole mammy tied and lashed. Yo' nebber heard de houn's bay at night while yo' knelt at her knee an' tried to say "Our Father." Yo' nebber heard de cry of de unfortunit creature. Yo' hab nebber bin sold to de highest bidder. Pore Ben remembers well de fust tim' he wa' sold. He were free in soul tho' called brute; free in thought tho' called ignorant. I've heard yo' spell, an' it fill my soul with joy. It make pore Ben glad ter know his boys and girls can read and write.

And then, leaning forward, he prayed for them and theirs. What a simple prayer it was—the very a, b, c's! And yet who knows but in His sight it was more acceptable than others that are more magnificent? Ben's prayer was from the heart.—MISS JO NARO, in Pittsburg (Pa.) Dispatch.



THE PROFESSOR AT WORK.

NATIONAL QUARANTINE.

A Washington dispatch says: A cordon of inspection and disinfection is being rapidly established on the seaboard from Louisiana to Maine and along the Canadian and Mexican frontiers. The states and the nation are working together and there is practically a national quarantine.

Acting Secretary Spaulding, on Tuesday afternoon, issued a circular to collectors of customs and others on the Canadian and Mexican frontiers, instructing them to exercise special vigilance in the examination of immigrants and their effects, and to co-operate with the officers of the Maine hospital service and local health officers in such action as they may deem advisable to prevent the introduction of cholera into the United States.

There is some talk of twenty days' detention being ordered on all vessels from infected ports, but nothing has yet been done.

Reports received show that the seriousness of the situation is appreciated and nearly all the larger cities are taking precautionary measures to improve their health conditions. New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore have all taken measures looking to the improvement of their sanitary condition to the prevention of the introduction of disease from abroad.

TROOPS HOMEWARD BOUND.

Gen. Carnes and Three Hundred Troops Leave Coal Creek.

General Carnes issued an order at Coal Creek Saturday that all men who were filling positions which demanded their return home could be furloughed. So 300 left. They take back to Nashville two field pieces. Some 200 troops have been left at the scene of trouble. They have changed their camp to the top of a hill near the depot, and have one Gatling gun and one field piece. There are still more than one hundred prisoners at Coal Creek who are being examined as fast as possible. Several were released Saturday, some of them on bond. It is probable that some will go to jail and await the meeting of court in September.

It is now believed that the law has triumphed. That General Carnes has acted with good judgment and is a splendid officer is attested by all the facts.

Bob Lindsay, the postmaster at Coal Creek and a brother of Bud, was released on a thousand-dollar bond. There is evidence to show that he has been acting with the miners while appearing to be on the side of the law. The troops at Coal Creek will remain indefinitely.

Overcoming a Bird's Migratory Instinct.

The migration of birds is due to instinct. But this instinct may be easily overcome and suppressed. On the roof of the City Hall in Donauwoerth (Bavaria), a couple of storks have a nest which they have not left for three years. The first time they remained because there was a young bird to weak to fly south. The parent birds were not willing to leave their little one and stopped to feed it. They liked the winter and have stopped in their nest ever since; have rear young every year, all of whom left when the cold season came and the rest of the storks departed for the south. But the old couple remain and do not seem to have any worse health for being exposed to the cold northerly winters on a high house top.—[Boston Advertiser.

BATTLE OF THE PUGILISTS.

The Greatest Event of Modern Times in the Sporting World

Will be the Three Championship Glove Contests at New Orleans.

No sporting event has ever attracted more attention the world over than the pugilistic encounters which are to take place in New Orleans from September 5th to the 8th. O course general interest centers on the battle between Sullivan and Corbett. The great sparring carnival begins Monday, September 5th. On that day Jack Skelley, a Brooklyn amateur, will fight George Dixon, a Boston negro champion bantam weight of the world, for the feather-weight championship of the world. Billy Myer, of Streator, Ill., and Jack McAuliffe, of Brooklyn, champion light-weight, will try for the light-weight championship on Tuesday, September 7th. On the evening of September 7th, John L. Sullivan, champion of the world, will fight James J. Corbett, of San Francisco, Cal.

All the fights will be to a finish. The stakes in the Skelley-Dixon fight are $5,000 a side and a purse of $7,500, making $12,500 in all. In the Myer-McAuliffe fight the stakes are $5,000 a side with a purse of $10,000, making $20,000 in all. The Sullivan-Corbett stakes are $10,000 a side, with a purse of $25,000, making $45,000 in all.

* * *

A SHORT SKETCH OF THE PRINCIPALS.

Sullivan is probably the most wonderful pugilist that ever lived—undoubtedly so under the new dispensation, where prize fights are governed by rules and regulations that bring them within the pale of civilization. When he whipped Paddy Ryan, at Mississippi City in 1882, he became champion of the world.

Sullivan was born in the city of Boston, thirty-six years ago. His first battle of any note was with Flood, who was reckoned at that time as an invincible. It was a hurricane fight with kid gloves from start to finish, and it was then that Sullivan attracted the attention of patrons of the sport, who saw in him the coming champion of champions. He whipped Flood to a standstill in a very few rounds, escaping with but slight punishment himself. Since that time Sullivan has met and defeated many opponents in the ring. A notable fight was his famous engagement with Patsy Cardiff, when in a limited round bout, Sullivan broke a bone in his right wrist and gamely continued the contest to a draw, his seconds not knowing that anything had happened. This, in addition to the prolonged battle he fought, when his feet were so badly spiked at Richburg, by Jake Kilrain, that his shoes were filled with blood, ought to be sufficient evidence of his gameness. Everybody who cares to know is familiar with his battle on the turf, under London prize ring rules, with Paddy Ryan, at Mississippi City, nearly eleven years ago, when he defeated the then champion of the heavy-weight class in nine rounds, eleven minutes. His unfortunate meeting with Charley Mitchel is also too well known to be particularized. The same can be said at Richburg with Jake Kilrain, who even today admits that Sullivan is the greatest man who ever donned a mitten.

James J. Corbett, the clever heavyweight, who will meet John L. Sullivan on the night of September 7th, in the arena of the Olympic Athletic Club, of New Orleans, is ten years younger than his opponent. His first notable battle was with Joe Choynski, when Corbett was but nineteen years of age. It was fought to an unsatisfactory termination, and Corbett and Choynski met again, this time in a barn, with gloves, Queensberry rules. The police interfered, and in the scramble one pair of gloves used by the pugilists were lost, and the backers of Choynski, who was believed to be getting the worst of it, wanted to call the fight a draw. A pair of kid gloves were found in the party, and Corbett conceded to Choynski the kid gloves, he keeping the five ounce ones. The battle was resumed and was won by Corbett, after which it was ascertained that during the fight in the barn he had broken the bones in both of his hands. After Jake Kilrain's prolonged battle with Jem Smith, the English champion, Kilrain and Mitchell made a tour of the country, giving boxing exhibitions. Corbett was one of the men who, at New Orleans, offered to go against Kilrain for a six-round bout, and hoisted Jake so plainly that his name was mine heralded all over the country, and he took first rank among the heavyweight pugilists. He met and defeated Donaldson McCaffrey in a limited round go and had several other encounters of minor importance, in most every instance being cool from beginning to end of the encounter.

Jack McAuliffe, like Jack Dempsey, was a cooper by trade, and when he discovered that he had in him the material for a boxer he was working at Bridgeport, Conn., and met and defeated men all the way from his own weight, then about 130 pounds, up to 190. He became a professional pugilist and was easily champion of the light-weight class until he met Jimmy Carroll, late manager of Robert Fitzsimmons, present champion middle-weight of the world. He defeated Carroll in a long-drawn out and desperate battle in the California Athletic Club rooms, in San Francisco, but before entering the battle, McAuliffe, who had become very fleshy, conceded the light-weight championship to Carroll, whether he won or lost, as he could not come to the weight then stipulated, 130 pounds. His battle with Jem Carney, the famous Englishman, in the light-weight class, is remembered by all patrons of the ring, and it has always been claimed that McAuliffe should have lost that battle, and would have lost but for the fact that he was surrounded by friends while Carney was virtually alone. One of the other most notable contests in the career of Jack McAuliffe was his meeting with the man he is to meet again before the Olympic Club on the night of September 5th—Billy Meyer, of Streator, Illinois. There was probably more money up on the first battle between these two men than ever before on such a contest, and it is probable, not to say a fact, that that is why the battle terminated in a draw. Since then McAuliffe has publicly declared that Myer might be a hard fighter and a cyclone, but he could defeat him in a battle before any club. Meyer thinks differently, and when the men come together the contest will be for blood.

Billy Myer, the Streator "cyclone," has won several matches, and has been defeated in others. He first became prominent in this section of the country in his battle with Charley Daly, of St. Louis, whom he defeated in thirty-nine rounds in a little town not far from Streator, Ill. Daly was heavier than Myer, and decidedly clever himself, but he was outclassed, and out of condition as well, and was finally compelled to succumb, though he gave Myer as good a battle as he ever had in his life. Myer met and defeated Jimmy Carroll, and was defeated by Andy Bowen, and is now anxious to regain his laurels by lowering the colors of Jack McAuliffe. He will be willing, if he succeeds, to take on any man in his class in the world

* * *

George Dixon, the colored wonder, of Boston, Mass., at the present the undisputed champion of the feather-weight class, is probably one of the most remarkable pugilists of the age. Perhaps his most famous fight was with Cal McCarty, which terminated in a draw, a second meeting being arranged, in which Dixon defeated McCarty, seemingly with ease. Later on Dixon met and whipped all comers, including some "wonders" sent over from the old world. His last notable contest was with Fred Johnston, of England, whom he defeated before the Coney Island Athletic Club, hands down.

* * *

Jack Skelly, who will attempt to wrest the feather-weight championship from Dixon on the night of September 6th, in the arena of the Olympic Athletic Club, in New Orleans, is one of the most popular young pugilists in the country. He is placed at the head of the amateur feather-weight class, and is its acknowledged champion, and if Dixon defeats him he will have to hustle. In Skelly's battle with Dixon he will be seconded by Dempsey and Jack McAuliffe, with Jimmie Carroll as bottle holder and adviser. He does not undegrate Dixon, but means to win if such a thing is possible, and he will have behind him men who will properly advise him. He is as big as Dixon and the second battle of the pugilistic carnival at New Orleans will likely be an interesting one.

With collections are to embrace every county in the state and will number probably over one thousand specimens. BILL ARP'S LETTER.

The Philosopher Has Yet More to Say of Wonderful Texas.

Notes and Observations of His Travels Through the State.

I left Fort Worth a few days ago for Brownwood, which is 150 miles eastward. The Fort Worth and Rio Grande railroad is a new one, and its recent completion has brought all that beautiful country within the limits of a new civilization. It is a splendid road, and its officers and its management are in general favor with the people. Gov. Hogg is said to be a prosecutor and a persecutor of railroads, and this has rendered him very unpopular with railroad towns that are building up all along the lines of the new roads. I believe that it is within the power of any railroad company to make friends of the people. This road is an example. It has no enemies, and there are no heavy damage suits and no outrageous verdicts. Everybody speaks well of Mr. Hornsby, the general manager. I went to Coleman, which is thirty-five miles west of Brownwood on the road to San Angelo. The names of towns and counties in this great country are peculiar and impressive. The saints, and the angels and the holy land (Palestine) are all represented. The heroes of the Texas republic are all before you on the map, Sam Houston, Crockett, Travis, Bowie, Fannin and Lamar and many others have counties named for them, and there are Tom Green and Deaf Smith counties. They were pioneers who left a name and a record. Deaf Smith is the man who burnt the bridge behind them at San Jacinto. These Texans go the whole hog on names, for they have a Jeff Davis county, and it is pretty well settled that they will go the whole Hogg in a governor. Since the war they have honored the Confederate heroes without fear, for they have made some new counties and called them Stonewall, Lee, Jackson, Bee, Hood and Joe Johnston, and they boast that they have plenty of unnamed territory that they are saving for the heroes of the next war.

Coleman is a brand new town of 2,000 people—not an old house in it. They have one of these seventy-five-thousand-dollar courthouses that are so common in Texas.

"What makes your people build such magnificent and costly courthouses?" said I to a friend.

"Anchors," said he; "they are anchors to hold down the county seat."

They are building so many new railroads across this country, and so many towns spring up along the line or at their intersection that sometimes they move the county seat by a majority vote and that leaves the old town out in the cold. But they can't afford to sacrifice a seventy-five-thousand-dollar courthouse. It is just an anchor—that's all. I saw that proven at Stephenville, which is the county seat of Erath. It has but one railroad, but Dublin in the same county has two, and Dublin is progressive and ambitious and has street cars and water works and wanted the courthouse. It was an old fashioned, common one, and they thought they could move it to Dublin. There was great excitement and money was spent on the election, but Dublin lost and now they have just purchased a seventy-five-thousand-dollar courthouse at Stephenville, which they say will anchor the county site down.

Coleman is full of Georgians. They flocked around me there and I was told half of my audience was from the good old State. The truth is, I don't see how we have so many people left in Georgia, for they are all over this country. I found seven men on the train that I took for Brownwood—seven from Murray and Cobb and Whitfield counties—all going to Comanche to buy land. I am told that every train takes as many or more from Georgia. They all know me and I know some of their fathers. Georgians come to the train to meet me at every station. They want to say "howdy" and welcome me to Texas. I was so sorry for old Judge Mobley at Coleman, who had just heard of the death of his noble son who taught school in our town of Cartersville. He was a good son and one of the most talented and exemplary young men that I ever knew of. His untimely death was a great loss and it grieved me when I heard of it. I met my venerable friend, Judge Yarborough, at Comanche. He was my father's friend and the friend of my young manhood. After the war he emigrated away out into this unsettled wilderness to get away from the free negroes and here he has lived until a railroad has come to his town and now, in his eighty-fourth year he begins to realize that a railroad is not such a bad thing after all, for almost every day it brings to him somebody that he used to know and he is comforted. How tenderly he inquires of every visitor, "Are you from Georgia?" When I left him in the evening he pressed my hand and said, "Can't you come back in the morning before you take the train? It will do me so much good." Of course I went back. His good wife is still well preserved, and we talked lovingly about Rome and her people, especially those who have crossed the river. Comanche boasts that there is not a negro in the county, except one—just one who runs on the railroad and is allowed to pass through. He is a democrat, they said, and behaves himself. I found an educated negro over here by the name of Bailey, who publishes a democratic newspaper. He is from Rome, Ga., he said, and he made a speech the other day at Granbery—a Cleveland speech. I did not hear it, but they say he speaks well and handles the people's party without gloves. He is, however, working forces as only and he gets it from his white friends.

Some of these immigrant girls homesick very soon after they get here. They never took a journey before and it seems like they have come so far they can never get back again. It is like burning the bridge behind them. One of the seven that I found on the train was in long very solemn at the imminent wrecking girls' case were swiftly passing by and rubbed his eyes [illegible] with his elbow and said: "Then you don't a guess—don't you want to see it?" One thing that strikes and mesmerizes is the largeness of the country—the long distances to the horizon. A boy would hardly understand in go to [illegible] of these inborn hints that this is a country of money. But the old Rome boy never [illegible] see so much country and I see the [illegible] pretty hot, but nobody gets mad but the editors.

"This is a grand country, and it impresses you with awe and wonder. The boundless extent of it as you go miles and miles and see the vast area of beautiful and fertile plains and not a tenth of it occupied by anybody. It is only around the towns that it is settled up. There are millions of acres here that can be had from $5 to $7 that will produce more grain and cotton than the best valley lands in Georgia and with less labor of cultivation. I saw one farm of 2,000 acres near Brownwood that was all in cultivation and had 11,000 pecan trees on it. They are three years old and are forty feet apart and will be in full bearing ten years from now. They showed their tops just above the cotton all over the vast area. Of course it was not an American who owned this farm and planted these trees. It was an Englishman. An American won't wait ten years for anything. But the Englishman plants for posterity. He figures now for his children that in ten years he will have 11,000 trees that will average at least five bushels to the tree, and as the pecans are of the best variety, they will bring 50 a bushel. There is an income. Just think of it; $220,000 a year and no work to do. Oh, if I had only come out here fifteen years ago and planted even 300 acres in pecans, do you think that I would now be traveling a thousand miles from home to sell my talk for more than it is worth? No, sir; nary time.—Bill Arp in Sunny South.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Development for the Past Week.

The improved condition in the leading industries continues, and the demand is such that prices even at the recent advance are stiff.

Iron shows no signs of an advance as yet, notwithstanding there is a steady demand. The Southern furnaces are mostly in operation and are making a very vigorous and aggressive efforts to increase their shipments North and East. The large mill at Birmingham and the mill at Gate City, Ala., have signed the Amalgamated scale, the latter has already resumed, and the former begins operations next week. The Southern iron mills are all crowded with orders.

There is quite an activity in flour mills in the South.

Reports show an increased demand for machinery. The hardware trade generally gives encouraging reports and predict an active fall trade.

Thirty-seven industries were established or incorporated during the week, together with 7 enlargements of manufactories, and 13 important new buildings. Among the new industries reported are agricultural implement works at New Ulm, Tex., a cotton mill at Vicksburg, Miss., electric light and power plants at Princeton, Ky., Gonzales, Tex., and Radford, Va., and flour and grist mills at Newport, Ark., Caldwell's N. C., Advance Mills and Basham, Va., Bolton and Vernon, Tex., the latter to cost $50,000. A $25,000 machine shop will be built at Jefferson, Tex., a $100,000 mining company is reported at San Antonio, Tex., a $25,000 coal mining company at Middlesborough, Ky., a $100,000 iron mining company at Birmingham, Ala., and a $500,000 mining and smelting company at Little Rock, Ark.

Paint works with $50,000 capital at Saron, Texas, $30,000 oil and gas company at Gonzales, Tex., phosphate works at Raleigh, N. C., an oil mill at Norfolk, Va., and a rice mill at Galveston, Tex. A carriage factory is reported at Bridgeport, Ala., a $30,000 lumber company at Austin, Tex., a planing mill at Aberdeen, N. C., and a $10,000 wagon factory at Charleston, W. Va.

Enlargements for the week include a flouring mill at Lynchburg, Va., engine works at Covington, Ky., cotton mills at Anderson, S. C., and Little Rock, Ark., and tobacco works at Greensboro, N. C. Among the new buildings of the week are market houses at Portsmouth, and Radford, Va., business houses at Guntersville, Ala., and Tempe, Tex.; hotels at Cookeville, Tenn., and San Antonio, Tex., and an office building at Rome, Ga.—The Tradesman.

DEMOCRATIC CLUBS.

More Appointments Made on the Executive Committee.

A special Washington dispatch of Friday says: At its last meeting the general committee was instructed to take some action looking to the co-operation of democratic clubs, boards of trade, congressmen and any and all bodies with influence with a request to the president to stop all immigration to this country from infected countries during the period of the epidemic. It was the opinion of some of the members of the committee present that the president could exercise such power. A quarantine inspection commission was appointed by the conference to inspect all quarantine stations of the United States, Canada and Mexico. This commission is to report to the international board.

FIRE DAMP EXPLODES

In a Coal Mine in Belgium—Many Miners Lose Their Lives.

A cablegram from Brussels, Belgium, states that a terrible explosion of fire damp occurred Thursday in the Agnyrie coal mine in Haimmit. The explosion caused a heavy coal fall, that blocked the galleries of the mine and entombed many of the miners. Rescuing parties were at once organized, and as a result three dead bodies have been taken out. It is known that thirty men are in the mine and efforts to rescue them are being made. Nearly all the men employed were married.

The Presidential election occurs on Tuesday, November, 8th. The Legislature of Alabama will convene on the following Tuesday, November 15th.

To our mind the Black Belt democrat who openly wrings the ballot from the unwilling hand of the radical voter is a better man than the white renegrade who invites social equality that he may become the beneficiary of the negroes' willing suffrage.—Selma Journal.

"Here is a maxim," says the Atlanta Constitution, "that should be posted in every newspaper office: In every report give both sides fairly when the information can be obtained, if the claims of your opponents are false or exaggerated the best way to counteract them is to publish them. Error ceases to be dangerous when reason is left free to combat it."

Every democrat cannot expect the party to construct a platform of principles to exactly suit his individual views, any more than he could expect to have his personal choice nominated for office without regard for the choice of others. Otherwise there could be no party organization; and there could be no "rule of the majority." But, as well attempt to bridge the Gulf of Mexico with a sausage, as to try to satisfy a man who is determined to be dissatisfied.—Ex.

The New York Herald says:

"People tell us that the republican party has done nothing. That is a serious mistake. It has done three things—it has raised the price of every necessary of life; it has covered the wages of the working classes; it has gagged the minority in the house, and it is ready at any moment to perform the same service for the minority of the senate. We think the republican party has done a good deal. It has done altogether too much."

Selma Times: Here is a little item to paste in your hat during the present campaign. During the four years of Cleveland's administration the expenditures of the government were three hundred and thirty million dollars less than during the four years of Harrison's administration. That is to say if a democratic idea be carried out this is the amount that would remain in the people's pockets instead of being taken therefrom by this tax gatherer to be squandered for unholy purposes.

Col. Elliot Shepherd of the Mail and Express thinks the railroads ought to carry people to the World's Fair at $1 a trip. Colonel Shepherd again displays his aristocratic breeding—he would have the railroads charge for passengers as they do for hogs. Most people object to being classed with hogs, but perhaps Colonel Shepherd himself might safely come in that classification. The Colonel continues to keep up his reputation as a diversified fool, and displaying greater variety of tom-foolery than any man who ever lived.—Age-Herald.

Too Lazy to Labor.

John Gould in Country Gentlemen.

It is easy to write about the hired man, what he should be, how to treat and manage him, but the more important thing is to first find him, for never in the experience of farmers was help of any kind so difficult to procure and the wages offered so high. Neighbors are compelled to change work to carry on their operation, and the old men and boys are busy in the meadows this year who in other times would not think it possible to work in haying. Said a neighbor the other day: "I am compelled to change work to the extent of cutting sixty acres of grass to get my twenty cut," and this is only one example in many. While this scarcity of help exists in the country, the towns are full of well dressed young men who "toil not, neither do they spin," except as some of them rest home exhausted after a heated discussion of the labor problem(?). Well, there is this much that can be said in these young men's favor, that they will not be likely to engage in any labor strikes.

WATSON STIRRING UP THE NEGROES.

Mostly a Rich as the Result of One of His Speeches.

AUGUSTA, GA., Aug. 26.—Congressman Tom Watson is creating race prejudice here to such an extent that some alarm is felt among the whites. The negroes are in the majority in this district. Watson is appealing to their passions and prejudice to get their vote in his contest against Black, the Democratic nominee.

There were two meetings at Sparta yesterday. Gov. Northern, Mr. Black and Congressman Moses addressed a Democratic meeting, while Mr. Watson drummed up the negroes and most ignorant of the farmers, who composed the Third party. There were perhaps a thousand negroes and two hundred whites listening to him. He told the negroes that he was in favor of wiping out the color line, and that the third party was in favor of equality of the races. The negroes cheered him wildly.

When the meeting was over a burly black negro went to the hotel at which Watson was lodging and demanded accommodations. He said Mr. Watson had announced the color line wiped out. The negro was put out by force, and then he attempted to incite the other negroes to riot. But for the large number of white Democrats in the town there would have been trouble.

The proprietor of the hotel is a spunky little woman. She had announced in the morning that she was for Watson, but after the negro incident she ordered Watson out of the hotel. Watson left town immediately.

Free Silver Coinage.

We are often asked the meaning of "free coinage of silver" silver "bimetallism," the quantity of silver in a dollar and other questions on this popular subject. The New York Sun recently received an application for similar information. The inquiry and reply was as follows, and covers the field.

1. What is "free silver?"
2. What weight of pure silver is in our dollar?
3. What is bimetallism?
4. Why not put enough silver in our dollar to make it the equivalent of the gold dollar and thereby stop all this wind about depreciated currency?
5. Why is silver an article of merchandise?
9. How many ounces of silver are equivalent to one ounce of gold?

REPLY.

1. By "free silver" is meant the free coinage in the mints of the United States. Under the present laws the government coins gold without cost to the owner, while silver is bought by the government and coined only on public account.
2. The dollar weighs 412½ grains; the silver in it weighs 371¼ grains.
3. Bimetallism is the theory of a standard value based on both gold and silver.
4. Silver fluctuates in value somewhat, so that it is not easy to do this as it seems.
5. Because it fluctuates in value. Gold was bought and sold during the war and fluctuated in value just as silver does now.
6. By our law, 16 ounces of silver are equivalent to one ounce of gold. In the market, where the price of silver is very low, the ratio is rather more than 23 to one.

Protection is Robbery.

Take the "free trade" between 1850 and 1860. In 1850 our exports of domestic merchandise were $134,900,233, in 1860 they were $316,242,428,

showing an increase of 135 per cent

Take the "protection era" between 1880 and 1890. In 1880 our exports of domestic merchandise were $823,946,353,

in 1890 they were $845,293,328,

showing an increase of 2 per cent.

Or if we take 1881 $883,925,947,

and we have a decrease of 1 per cent.

And the McKinley bill was intended to knock them down still more. But a famine in Europe prevented it this year and may prevent it even next year from getting in its fine work. But it will win in the end. Protection is for the millowner and so rob the farmer.

FOURTH DISTRICT CONVENTION.

Two Conventions Held. Two Ballot Boxes.

SELMA, Ala., Sept. 1.—The republicans factions in the fourth congressional district held two conventions.

The Bill Stevens faction held a convention in Selma in which the colored troops predominated, a report from Selma stating that but a few white men were present, the most prominent white republican there being H. A. Wilson, of Clanton.

The convention at Selma nominated Hon. Geo. H. Craig, of Dallas, as the candidate for congress in the fourth district and H. A. Wilson, as candidate for elector in that district.

The convention of the Mosely wing of the party in the fourth district was held at Calera yesterday, and Mr. J. D. Hardy was elected as chairman. This convention was attended by delegates from every county in the district except Chilton and it is stated that two-thirds of the convention were white men.

Ringing resolutions were adopted endorsing the administration and firing into democracy, but the body concluded not to make any nomination at this time, and adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

The Negro Vote.

Meridian, (Miss.,) News.

Whenever the negro is called in as "an arbiter" between two hostile factions, trouble and dissatisfaction will inevitably follow, and that he will be called in whenever he can be made available for the purposes of both, is a settled fact. No matter which faction may be awarded the victory the other will cry out fraud, and the consequences are invariably attended with bitterness and a dethronement of all that tends to promote harmony and stable government.

Purchasable and easily influenced as a voter, the negro will always be a boomerang in the hands of the men who use him, and the surest and quickest remedy for this evil, is to so restrict the franchise as to render him virtually useless in that role, recognizing the great danger attendant upon either a solid or divided negro vote, (for we regard both as equally dangerous,) the original advocates for calling a constitutional convention in this State, had the important matter of restricting in some way the negro vote of the State in their mind's eyes, and after long and persistent efforts they succeeded in getting the Legislature to call a convention which, notwithstanding its many indiscreet acts, incorporated into the organic laws of our state a ballot system which, for the present, relieves us of the internecine party strife which is now like a seething cauldron in all portions of Alabama.

Notwithstanding the apparently irreconcilable difference now existing between the Kolb and Jones factions, we believe that passion and hatred will pass away under the mellowing influence of reason and time, and that our neighbors will then follow our example and in this way relieve themselves of further trouble on that account.

It is argued by some, that the Australian ballot system will afford only temporary relief, but we agree with the old darkey who said, "whenever a nigger is about to climb de fence, the white man is always dar, wid anudder rail to lay on top."

Let the people of Alabama call a constitutional convention at an early day as possible and adopt the example that Mississippi has set in restricting the franchise laws of their State, and they will be relieved of any further contention for the negro vote.

A newspaper reflects the standing of the community in which it is published. If the merchants, business and professional men support the paper, the paper will naturally support the city or town in which it is published. The newspaper can do more toward building up or tearing down a town or city than any other agency. Strangers in your city look first at the newspaper—it is the mirror in which they see the enterprise of the city reflected. If they see the paper looking healthy, clean and filled with the names of the various enterprises the city claims as its own, advertisements of the business carried on in the city, they become interested to such an extent as to investigate, and when property is not too high, they become one more to the city's population.—Ex.

The pension bubble is becoming unendurable. Though still men everywhere are standing aghast at its proportions and wondering when it can be curtailed. The Fifty-first Congress, under the Tom Reed's driving process, passed one law which required $50,000,000 more expenses during this fiscal year than were expended last year. Harrison signed it with great gusto. Mr. Cleveland in that matter, as in all others, when it came before him, acted as he believed for the best interest of the country. He vetoed the bill which Harrison signed. In closing a speech at Atlanta recently, Speaker Crisp said:

"Cleveland is the only man who has been in the executive chair since the war who has had the courage to veto a general pension bill in the face of a demand to sign it by the Representatives in Congress. But the Reed Congress came on and passed it, Harrison signed it, and what has been the result? It cost us $49,000,000 this year. Do you know that every man, woman and child in Georgia are paying $2.50 a year for pensions? Do you know there are 1,000,000 pensions on the rolls, and they are being increased at the rate of 1,000 a day? I am in favor of pensioning the gallant soldiers who saw service on the field, but not the camp followers and bummers.

If Mr. Cleveland had been a demagogue and popularity seeker he would have signed the bill, but he knew that under its provisions the country would be robbed of millions of dollars annually by men not entitled to pensions. He was not afraid to do right no matter what effect it might have on his political fortunes.—Ex.

Trimming the Tree.

Meehan's Journal.

The trunk of a tree, being once formed does not lengthen a fraction no matter if it lives a hundred years. A branch from a trunk of a tree that is now, say six feet from the ground will have the center of the branch still six feet from the ground no matter how many years elapse. Where branches are now too low they had better be cut off at once.

In cutting off branches they should always be cut close to the trunk or to any main branch, so that the wound may heal over. If the branch is very large so that the wood is likely to take several years in healing over, it is better to paint it, in order to keep the water from rotting the wood until it is properly healed. Many trees are spoiled by leaving an inch or two of stump to a cut-off branch.

Good Crop.

Evergreen Star.

Mr. C. P. Demnig has raised this year 6,000 pounds of oats on two acres of land; he cut the oats in June, planted the same land in corn, and will make seventy-five bushels. He also cut, saved and housed about 20,000 pounds of hay, which he raised from German millet. Still the farmers of South Alabama will buy their hay in the northwest when they can raise it at home.

In Favor of the Farm.

Mirrorland Farm.

Drudgery! Is it more drudgery to follow the plow, with the blue sky overhead, the soft earth under foot, and the air full of sweetness around you and the songs of birds in your ears, than to stand behind a counter in a hot, close store measuring off cloth from morning until night, with a constant surging crowd before one of anxious or impatient buyers; or to stand at the counting house desk, late into the night sometimes, adding up columns of figures, and then, tired and worn out, to go to an uncomfortable room in a crowded tenement? Comparing the lives of town people who are just comfortable, inasmuch as they have enough to eat and wear and a place to abide in, as the result of their labor, with that of farmers similarly situated, the comparison is favorable to the farm.

Stopped His Paper.

Nowadays when a subscriber gets so mad because an editor differs with him on some trivial question that he discontinues his paper, we remind him of a good anecdote of the late Horace Greeley, the well known editor of the New York Tribune.

Passing down Newspaper Row in New York City one morning, he met one of his readers, who exclaimed:

"Mr. Greeley, after that article you published this morning, I intend to stop your paper."

"Oh no,' said Mr. Greeley, "don't do that."

"Yes, sir, my mind is made up. I intend stopping the paper."

The angry subscriber was not to be appeased and they separated. Late in the afternoon the two met again, when Mr. Greeley remarked:

"Mr. Thompson, I am very glad you did not carry out your threat this morning."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, you said you were going to stop my paper didn't you?"

"And so I did. I went to the office and had your paper stopped."

"You are surely mistaken, I have just come from there and the press was running and business was booming."

"Sir," said Thomson very pompously, "I meant I intended to stop my subscription to your paper."

"Oh thunder," rejoined Greeley: "I thought you were going to stop the running of my paper, and thus knock me out of a living. My friend, let me tell you something. One man is just one drop of water in the ocean. You didn't set the machinery of this world in motion, and you can't stop it; and when you are underneath the ground things on the surface will wag on the same as ever.

W. L. SAMPEY,

CLANTON, ALA.,

DEALER in DRY GOODS, SHOES, HATS, CLOTHING, HARDWARE, BAGGING and TIES, STAPLE GROCERIES and TOBACCO. AGENT for THE CAPITAL CITY FIRE INSURANCE CO., and COTTON BUYER.

Dr. A. M Rambo, of Verbena, was in Clanton last week on professional business.

Jim Griffin, colored, was arrested here Tuesday for assault and battery, and after paying cost and fine was discharged.

The VIEW received numerous welcome calls from friends on Saturday, some of whom remembered to renew their subscriptions.

Remember that our job office has the latest styles of new type and we can do your work well and cheap. Your patronage is solicited.

Mr. I. W. Gullahorn, of Whichtaw Falls, Tex., was in Clanton Monday on his way to Calera to see his family, whom he intends moving to Texas.

Gin House.

All cotton brought to our gin will be ginned at 40 cents per hundred pounds this season.

A. E. & C. K. BIVINGS.

Drunken men will please be considerate enough to bear in mind that the VIEW printers do not relish conversing with swine, and keep at a distance while in that condition.

See announcement of the opening of Clanton High School on Sept. 19th. Prof. Robinson has purchased the Baptist Church building and proposes to build up a school that will give satisfaction to his patrons.

The VIEW has been with the people of Chilton county for nearly eleven years now, and its success is evidence that its efforts for good and against evil have been upheld and are appreciated. Of course there are some who do not like that kind of a paper and they have probably not helped us.

The "Macedonia Friend" who writes locals for the VIEW this week did not furnish his name, and we depart from our rule in publishing them without the real name of the author because there is nothing objectionable in them, and because he writes: "Please don't throw this in the waste basket. We like to read the CHILTON VIEW very much." However, he should not forget the important matter of furnishing his name next time.

Prof. Tipton Mullins will open school here on the 20th and Mr W. C. Robinson on the 19th of this month. Patrons should see that their children are prompt in attendance and diligent in their studies. That children do not make rapid progress at school is largely due to parents not taking proper interest in them. If your boy gets a thrashing or your girl is punished, when they return home give them another thrashing. It is the duty of every patron to help build up a good school and not pull it down.

Macedonia Dots.

Miss Lonnie Gibbons is recovering from a severe illness. We hope to see her out again soon.

Little Eula Gibbnos has also been very sick the past week, but is improving slowly.

Miss Geneva Brown has returned to her home in Autauga after a pleasant visit here.

People's Party Executive Committee.

The VIEW has been furnished with the following proceedings of the mass meeting held at Clanton on Saturday last:

The Citizens of Chilton county met in mass meeting at the court house on Saturday, Sept. 3rd, 1892 for the purpose of perfecting the organization of the People's party and electing delegates to State convention of People's party. The meeting was called to order by Ira Campbell, of Jemison. On motion, Mr. O. M. Mastin, of Clanton, was elected chairman, and Alex. G. Dake, secretary.

On resolution a committee of one from each beat was appointed to select suitable persons from each beat as delegates to State convention of the People's party which meets at Birmingham on Sept. 15th 1892. It was further resolved that a committee of one from each beat be appointed to select nine suitable persons to be voted on to serve as an executive committee of the People's party for the next two years. The following gentlemen were appointed on said committees:

COMMITTEE ON DELEGATES.

W A Mims, beat 1; T M Driver, beat 2; J W Foshee beat 3; J A Miller, beat 4; J J McDonell, beat 5; Robert Williams, beat 6; T C Gandy, beat 7.

COMMITTEE ON EX. COMMITTEE.

J M Scott, beat 1; B M Gentry, beat 2; D N Riggins, beat 3; J A Logan, beat 4; J B Wells, beat 5; E H Smith, beat 6; L B Pounds, beat 7.

Beat 8 not being represented in the meeting, no person was appointed from that beat on said committees.

The committees then retired and the meeting adjourned until 12:30 p. m. awaiting their action.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The meeting called to order by O. M. Mastin, chairman. On motion J. J. L. Stewart addressed the meeting for about 30 minutes in a very forcible manner.

The committee to select an Ex. Committee announced that they were ready to report. The following report was received and adopted and the gentlemen named were selected:

Beat 1, W H Conway; beat 2, Ira Campbell; beat 3, D N Riggins; beat 4, O M Mastin; beat 5, J J McDonell; beat 6, Robert Williams; beat 7, W Y Nix; beat 8, E W Bailey; at large, J E White.

On motion the committee on delegates to the State Convention was received and adopted. The following gentlemen were elected by acclimation.

Beat 1, Sam Pate; beat 2, B M Gentry; beat 3, W A Wood; beat 4, J A Logan; beat 5, B H Wells; beat 6, E H Smith; beat 7, L B Pounds; beat 8 E W Bailey; county at large, O M Mastin and M Robinson.

The following resolution offered by J J L Stewart was adopted by a rising vote:

Whereas, the frauds practiced by the so-called organized Democracy of Alabama in the recent State election whereby the will of a large majority of the voters of the State was subverted and Capt. Kolb deprived of the office of governor, to which he had been elected, deserves the condemnation of all good citizens irrespective of past party affiliation.

Therefore, Be it resolved that we denounce the counting out of Kolb votes and the throwing out of Kolb precincts as a theft unparalleled in the history of politics and if persisted in will lead to revolution or the distruction of free institutions.

Resolved 2. That no compromise that the Jones men may offer will be satisfactory, other than to do justice to the candidates in all counties where Kolb had a majority, as we recognize the principle of "equal justice to all and special favors to none."

Resolved 3, That in the platform adopted by the People's party and the candidates nominated at Omaha we recognize the only promise of reform or relief for the laboring classes of our country, we therefore, pledge to Weaver and Field our earnest support and ask all who are opposed to boss rule and plutocratic domination to aid us in their election.

Resolved 4, That in the selection of men to represent us in Congress we will vote for no one who does not openly condemn the frauds of the last election and also endorse the demands of the industrial organizations of the United States. J J L STEWART.

On motion to ascertain their choice for Congressional representation and Presidential electors. The following nominations were made:

A P Longshore, of Shelby, J F Burns, of Dallas, Mr. Burns' name being withdrawn. On motion Hon. A. P. Longshore was chosen unanimously by a rising vote.

Nomination for electors being in order, L H Reynolds, of Montevallo, J A Logan, of Clanton, J W Pitts, of Shelby county, and B W Groce, of Talladega, were placed in nomination. Mr. B. W Groce received the largest vote and was chosen as Chilton county's choice for elector by unanimous rising vote. On motion the People's party platform was read and adopted.

The question of establishing a newspaper in the interest of the People's party came up for discussion and resulted in an arrangement being effected with Mr. T. H. White, by which the people's party paper will be published immediately. On motion, Mr. White was requested to send copies of the first issue for distribution to the secretary of sub-alliances throughout the county. On motion it was decided that the paper be called the People's Party Banner.

On motion by secretary Dake, that each beat committee man be instructed to appoint three assistant committeemen from his beat and proceed to make a thorough organization of the People's party.

Resolved that the secretary be requested to furnish the Alliance Herald and Alabama Reformer the minutes of this meeting for publication.

On motion the chairman of the meeting was to act as chairman of Ex. committee until organization of said committee. After which the meeting adjourned sine die. O. M. MASTIN, Chairman.

ALEX. G. DAKE, Sec't.

[An address was also issued by the meeting but is too long for publication this week.

THE PLAGUE AT OUR DOORS.

A Ship Arrives in New York Loaded With Cholera Infected Passengers.

The steamship Moravia, which arrived at New York Wednesday from Hamburg, had twenty-two deaths on voyage (twenty children and two adults) from a disease which the ship's doctor calls cholerine. Thirteen were natives of Poland, five of Prussia, one of Austria and three of Hesse. All were buried at sea. The first death took place on August 19th and the last one on the 29th. The Moravia has been ordered down the lower bay.

The Moravia left Hamburg on August 18th, the day cholera was discovered there. She is an emigrant ship of the Hamburg-American Packet company, and carried 358 emigrants. Dr. Jenkins was summoned from the shore when his deputy, who first went aboard the Moravia, learned of the condition of affairs, and he personally interviewed the ship's physician and others regarding the disease aboard the ship. The surgeon of the Moravia declared that twenty two passengers of the ship had undoubtedly died of cholerine, and Dr. Jenkins immediately ordered the steamer off shore, giving Captain Theile, her commander, instructions to anchor off Hoffman Island, and to remain there until he received further orders. After the doctor left the steamer she weighed anchor and immediately returned to the lower bay, a yellow flag—indicating that she had contagion on board—flying from her foremast head.

DOCTORS IN CONSULTATION.

On landing at the quarantine wharf, Dr. Jenkins and Dr. Talmadge, his chief deputy, went at once to the former's house, on the bluff overlooking the bay, and were in consultation for some time. It was first given out that the Moravia had a clean bill of health, and that the doctors had been surprised at the clean and healthy condition of the vessel.

The return of the vessel to the lower bay created no surprise or suspicion, as it was believed the emigrant passengers on board were to be treated to a bath at Hoffman island, and then landed for a fumigation of the ship and their clothing. It was not till the afternoon when the facts began to again circulate. Then there was a panic among the people who had flocked down to the shore to witness the operation of the doctors on the vessels. The story was at first discredited, but Dr. Talmadge soon confirmed it. Those whose business did not detain them at the spot immediately hurried away from the health station. It was reported during the afternoon that Dr. Roberts, of the health department, had declared the cases on the Moravia to be true cases of Asiatic cholera, but the health officer denied the story, and said he would make no report until he had made a thorough investigation.

"There is no cholera in New York today," Dr. Cyrus Edson said Wednesday morning. "There have been times when I thought it advisable to conceal the presence of certain cases of disease, but the situation is far too grave for anything of that sort now. The moment we know of the presence of cholera, it shall be announced to the public."

MORE DEATHS WILL FOLLOW.

The ship's surgeon called the disease cholerine, but that is only another name for the dreaded Asiatic cholera. Dr. Jenkins said the results were serious and he was fearful more deaths would follow. Cholera broke out the day after the ship sailed and the first death took place within twenty-four hours.

DISCUSSED IN WASHINGTON.

The arrival of the steamer Moravia at New York from Hamburg Wednesday, after having had twenty-two deaths on board from cholera, was a fruitful topic of discussion in Washington Wednesday afternoon among the officials of the government charged with guarding the nation's health. Assistant Secretary Spaulding said it showed how necessary and timely were the quarantine precautions taken. Speaking of the suggestion that congress be called together to enact a law suspending immigration, Secretary Spaulding said the suspension of immigration would materially decrease the danger, though it would be possible for the cholera to get here even then.

"We are doing all that can be done," he said. "We have established a close quarantine to protect this country at every port. Vessels will be detained just as long as the health officers think necessary in each case, whether it be one day or twenty. No vessel will be permitted to land until the authorities are satisfied that there is no possible danger. If it is decreed by divine providence that we shall have cholera here, we cannot prevent it, but it is as nearly impossible for it to get in as we can can make it."

THE PRESIDENT ABOUSED.

The cholera situation has alarmed the president, and he has decided to return immediately to Washington to personally supervise government matters. He has cancelled all engagements made for him at Ophir farm and by Chairman Hackett, of New York's republican state committee.

The announcement that he would leave New York for Washington was wholly unexpected and created some surprise as it was thought that the cholera scare was not of sufficient importance yet to demand his presence in Washington. It is understood his return is due to a telegram sent him Wednesday by Attorney General Miller, who is undoubtedly much alarmed at the situation and thinks the president's presence at Washington necessary. The president has been kept fully informed of all action taken of late to prevent the cholera getting a foothold in the United States.

HEAVY INCREASE AT HAMBURG.

During the twenty-four hours ended at midnight Tuesday night the ambulance conveyed to the hospital 508 cholera cases. Of this number 208 have since died. In Berlin three new cases and one death; in Madgeburg two new cases and one death. There is no questioning the fact that the present cholera epidemic [illegible] city, and every hour the situation becomes worse. People are dying off like sheep and the plague is spreading.

I was thought Tuesday that the epidemic was abating in virulence, the number of new cases and deaths reported for Monday being far below those of the day preceding. Unfortunately this was not the case. It was only a temporary halt in the onward march of the plague and now it is again marching forward, mowing down its victims by the score. A reign of terror prevails and every person who can possibly do so is fleeing from the city.

[illegible] OF LONDON.

A London cablegram of Wednesday says that there is no denying the fact that the people of England generally are beginning to be nervous to a pronounced that despite the quarantine regulations of the various ports the country is doomed to undergo another seige of the cholera plague. That the quarantine regulations, as at present enforced, do not prevent the introduction of cholera, has been abundantly proven and many persons claim that the only effectual method to keep the disease at bay is to absolutely prohibit all intercourse with infected ports abroad.

[illegible] THE HEALTH BOARD.

There is deep indignation felt at the health authorities of London for permitting passengers to land on Monday last from the steamer Peregrine, from Hamburg. These passengers were carefully examined and as no symptoms of cholera were shown, they were allowed to go ashore, with the result that they have introduced the disease into one of the most densely populated quarters of London. Two cases of the disease appeared Tuesday in City Road, a densely populated part of the city, the sufferers being passengers from the Peregrine. It is believed that it will require every aid known to science to prevent the disease from spreading.

PREVIOUS DISPATCHES.

Since Monday night there has been an enormous increase in the number of persons who have been attacked and who have died of cholera in the city of Hamburg, 810 new cases and 319 deaths having occurred Tuesday. Interments Monday lasted far into the night, the total for the day being 391. A feeling of deep gloom has settled over the city. The loss to the commercial community is reckoned at several million marks daily. The exodus from the city is unabated and the number of foreigners arriving has fallen to the lowest on record.

The most conflicting reports as to the extent of the epidemic in Hamburg have been published. Hamburgers are treated like lepers elsewhere in Germany. Hotel doors are shut in their faces, and it is impossible for them to get lodgings. Many have been known to alight from railroad trains a few stations before reaching Berlin, and to come into the city by local trains in order to avoid inspection. The authorities are endeavoring to stop this practice, but find it difficult to do so. Suspected cases of cholera are reported at Halle and Leipsic, but the presence of the disease in these places has not been officially confirmed. The Standard's Hamburg correspondent reports the epidemic of cholera abating somewhat.

A CASE IN LONDON.

The first suspicious case of the disease in London was made public Tuesday. Ida Samyan, the four-year-old daughter of a couple of Russian Jews, who arrived from Hamburg Saturday, was admitted to the London hospital Sunday suffering with symptoms of Asiatic cholera.

INCREASING AT ST. PETERSBURG.

The London Times' St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs that cholera is subsiding at Nijni-Novgorod, and has quite ceased at Kozloff. Thanksgiving services were held in the churches at the latter place. The disease seems to be steadily on the increase, however, in St. Petersburg. Official statistics show that mortality from cholera has been greatest in Caucasus and the country of the Don Cossacks. Up to the 23 [illegible] of August the total number who died throughout the Russian empire is given at 107,647, but owing to the known incompleteness of official statistics the real number may safely be reckoned as high as 150,000.

A cablegram from Liverpool says: Four Russian emigrants, who were to sail hence for America, were stricken Tuesday with the pestilence. They were at once removed to a hospital, where they are closely watched to determine whether the disease is of the true Asiatic type.

CENTRAL AMERICA ALARMED.

A Panama dispatch of Tuesday says: The federal authorities of the United States of Colombia have issued orders closing the ports on the Atlantic coast of Colombia to all vessels arriving from ports infected with cholera. This puts a stop at once to commerce with Germany, France and Belgium.

Official returns in St. Petersburg Monday reported 150 new cases of cholera and forty-one deaths. This is an increase of thirty-one new cases and sixteen deaths, as compared with Sunday's figures.

THURSDAY'S DISPATCHES.

A New York dispatch says: The steamer Moravia was sent to the lower bay, two miles south of Swinburne island, Thursday morning. Dr. Sanborn reports that there are no new cases on board.

The steamers Gallia and Lahn are detained until the five days' quarantine, required by the health regulations, have elapsed. The Gallia has 275 Russians and 175 Poles aboard.

ABATING IN RUSSIA.

A St. Petersburg cablegram states that official cholera returns from all Russia show a gratifying decrease in the ravages of the pestilence. The latest returns, which are for August 29th, show a total of 4,859 new cases and 2,529 deaths. Compared with the latest returns, these figures show a decrease of 1,285 in new cases reported and a decrease of 212 in the number of deaths. It will be observed, however, that the death rate continues excessively high, the figures of the last report showing a mortality of slightly over 52 per cent. Statistics from St. Petersburg also show a decrease in both new cases and deaths.

SUSPICIOUS CASE IN NEW YORK.

Captain Cross, of the police department of New York city, reported Thursday night that he was informed by Dr. Beck, of 94 Rivington street, that he attended a man named Etwinon, who lived on the fourth floor of No. 95 Orchard street, and that he found him manifesting symptoms of cholera. The man he said was a Russian, and arrived on Sunday on the steamer Russia. The board of health was notified.

SAVANNAH'S QUARANTINE.

Rigorous quarantine exists at Savannah against the entire world outside of North America. Vessels now on their way to Savannah's port from infected ports will be sent to the government quarantine station at Sapelo, fifty miles down the coast, so that they cannot come in contact with vessels detained for other causes at the city quarantine station.

PETITIONING THE PRESIDENT.

Philadelphia's city council Thursday afternoon passed a resolution petitioning the president to issue a proclamation forbidding immigration during the continuance of the cholera epidemic. Considerable comment has been occasioned because of the favor shown John A. Clark, ex-councilman, who was taken off the steamship British Princess, now quarantined at Philadelphia, by the personal [illegible] of Dr. Whitehead and Keeper, of the board of health.

SAN FRANCISCO TAKING PRECAUTIONS

The health officers of San Francisco are taking every precaution against the cholera. Quarantine Doctor Lawler has declared all vessels arriving from Alaska rigidly inspected. He fears cholera might be brought over from Russia by way of Alaska. All incoming trains from Portland and Ogden will be inspected before passengers are allowed to enter California. Ogdentown is being inspected and the city will be thoroughly cleaned.

ANTWERP AND HAVRE.

There has been a considerable change in the panicky feeling prevailing at Hamburg in consequence of the reduction of cholera. The official report of cholera for Wednesday, showed a great falling off, both in the number of new cases and deaths. A general feeling of relief was experienced, but those acquainted with the peculiarities of the disease, knew temporary cessations of its fury were characteristic. Only 199 new cases and forty-five deaths were reported for Wednesday.

THROUGHOUT THE SOUTH.

Notes of Her Progress and Prosperity Briefly Transcribed.

Important Happenings from Day to Day Tersely Told.

A news special of Tuesday says: Another attempt is being made to form a consolidation of the tobacco warehouses of Louisville, Ky.

The Jellico and Birdeye Coal Company have awarded the contract for building their railroad from Jellico, Tenn., to Birdeye, Ky., to the Chattanooga Construction Company.

The boycott on the Marietta and North Georgia railroad has been declared off by the Southern Passenger Association. Hereafter all lines in the association will give that road ticket representation.

The Alabama board of health, through its president, Dr. J. T. Searcy, of Tuscaloosa, has petitioned President Harrison to stop foreign immigration to this country till the cholera epidemic ceases.

A Knoxville, Tenn., dispatch says: Commissioner Ford was acquitted at Coal Creek Wednesday. The indictment against Alleman was withdrawn. All the prisoners have now been tried. There are twenty-seven in jail here and a number at Clinton. Many are out on bond.

A charter was granted Thursday by the secretary of state to the East and West Railroad of Georgia. This line is projected to run from Sparta, in Hancock county, Ga., to White Plains, in Greene county, and to Davisboro, in Washington county. The road will pass through the counties of Washington, Hancock and Greene and will be about fifty miles in length. The capital stock is $30,000 with the privilege of increasing it to $500,000.

A Knoxville dispatch says: A prominent official of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad states that Major Henry Fink has telegraphed Mr. E. B. Stahlman, commissioner Southern Railway and Steamship association, that after considering the matter he is ready to sign the names of the Cincinnati Southern and the Alabama Great Southern railroads to the new agreement offered by the association. This ends all differences existing between the lines in the association.

A Nashville dispatch of Tuesday says: Judge Caldwell has called a special session of the county court for September 12th to consider the question of submitting to the people a proposition to subscribe $350,000 to the capital stock of the Tennessee Midland railroad. This special session was called upon the petition of President S. J. Moss, of the Midland, who proposes, in the event this amount is subscribed, to complete the road from Perryville to Nashville by December 25th, 1893. The road is now in operation from Perryville to Memphis.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Review of Trade for the Past Week by Dun & Co.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s report says: Business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number for the United States 165, against 204 failures last year.

In all reports business appears more favorable than a year ago. There has been a general though moderate improvement in distribution; manufacturers are more fully employed; several great labor controversies have ended and crop reports are somewhat more satisfactory. Wheat declined almost 2 cents to 2 1 4 for August. Corn is scarce for early delivery and crop prospects improve, but little, so that the price is unchanged at 68 1-2 cents. Oats are a shade stronger at 28 cents. Accounts of cholera in Russia have caused a heavy unloading of pork which has fallen $1 per barrel. Hogs are a quarter and lard a fraction lower, while oil has also declined a fraction. Cotton is further depressed to 7 1-8 cents by the great accumulation of unsold stocks and better reports of the coming crop, but while in other speculative markets sales have been small for the week, those of cotton reached 505,000 bales.

Some improvement is noted at all southern cities reporting, and trade at Nashville is very fair, increasing with brighter prospects at Memphis and in all lines gaining at New Orleans with a better demand for money. All manufactures are now doing well. Nearly all iron mills have resumed work since the settlement of wages at Pittsburg and in Ohio and the demands for material increase, but production apparently increases more, as pig iron is weaker at Pittsburg. There is a better demand for finished products and general activity.

LETTER FROM MR. CLEVELAND

Commending a Colored Democratic Worker.

Herbert A. Clark, a colored man of Columbus, Ohio, recently prepared an article in reply to some criticisms on President Cleveland, presenting an argument to show from his standpoint why colored voters should support the ex-president. Copies of the articles were sent to the two candidates and Clark is in receipt of the following acknowledgment:

"I have received your letter of the 31st inst. with clippings which you enclosed and read them with the utmost satisfaction. I am well satisfied that in time to come your communications of kindness done something to benefit, in a practical way, our colored fellow citizens, will be a handsome compensation for the efforts you are making in support of the democratic cause. Assuring you that I fully appreciate your expressed determination to stand by the friends of the democratic principles, I am your friend, [illegible]"

A STEAMSHIP GOES DOWN

And Twenty-Six of Her Passengers Find Watery Graves.

Only One Man of the Crew Escaped to Tell the Tale.

A dispatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., states that the fish tug E. M. B. A. arrived in that city Thursday night, having as a passenger, Harry Stewart, of the Algomac, a wheelman, only survivor from the steamer Western Reserve, which foundered Tuesday morning, about 9 o'clock, sixty miles above Whitefish Point, on the course to Keewenaw. The Western Reserve, up bound, and light, left Soo canal Tuesday afternoon, having on board, as passengers, Captain Peter Minch, her owner, his wife, three children and his wife's sister, besides a regular crew of twenty-two hands. The rest of her short history is best told in the words of Stewart:

Everything went well until about sixty miles above Whitefish, when the first warning any one on board had of the impending danger was a terrible crash about 9 o'clock a. m., caused by the huge craft breaking in two and breaking the main mast about half way up the rigging. She took in water fast from the start, and the yawl boats were lowered. Captain Minch, his family and officers and crew to the number of seventeen, got into a wooden yawl, and the others took to a metallic one. The Reserve sank in ten minutes, and, before she had hardly gone out of sight, the metallic yawl capsized. The other yawl went to her assistance, but only succeeded in rescuing two of her occupants, Captain Myers' son and Stewart.

The nineteen survivors started for Whitefish, sixty miles away. The wind was about west when they started, but veered to the north, making a considerable sea. The yawl weathered the breakers all night, and when about ten miles from life-saving station No. 10, and about a mile from shore, it capsized. Stewart says that he saw none of the occupants after that. He struck out for shore, and was in the water two hours. He struck the shore about ten miles above the city station, and had to walk there before reaching any one to render him assistance. A search failed to find a trace of any other survivor of the wreck.

The Western Reserve was one of the largest and finest of new steamers on the lakes. She was built by the Cleveland Ship Building company, and launched October 20th, 1890. She was valued at $220,000. She was 300 feet long and forty-one feet beam. She was considered a thoroughly staunch and seaworthy boat.

GOV. TILLMAN WINS.

He Carries South Carolina by Over Ten Thousand Majority.

Dispatches from Columbia state that in Tuesday's primary elections Governor Tillman carried South Carolina by a majority variously estimated at from ten thousand upward, and the entire reform ticket goes through with him. Returns have been very slow in reaching Columbia and Charleston, but the latest reports show that, while the conservative strength is far greater than two years ago, Governor Tillman still has a majority, which must be very gratifying to him and his supporters. The comparisons made with the vote two years ago need some explanation. At that time, General Haskell ran as an independent democrat against Governor Tillman, the democratic nominee, and Tillman's majority was 44,-831. The race between Tillman and Sheppard is strictly within party lines, and, of course, nothing like the majority over Haskell was expected this time. Governor Tillman has done all that his friends have claimed, and Tuesday's primaries emphasize his great strength with the people of South Carolina.

THE CONSERVATIVES GAVE IT UP.

The conservatives concede the state to Tillman by about ten thousand majority, but claim three conservative congressmen—Brawley, in the first; Hemphill, in the fifth, and Johnstone in the third district. These are present members. Shell, alliancemen, in the fourth district, is also reelected. The vote on prohibition was general, but there is nothing definite as to the result yet. The country vote is conceded to be largely Tillmanite.

A LATER ACCOUNT.

Dispatches of Wednesday from Columbia state that Tillman and the alliance have swept the state. The conservatives are beaten by between fifteen and twenty thousand votes, and several of the old-line congressmen are supplanted. The result is a great surprise to the conservatives who believed that they stood a fair chance of winning. Under the leadership of ex-Congressman Samuel Dibble, they have made a strong campaign, but it began too late to be effective.

The candidates for congress who sided with them share the same fate, and the alliance elects four representatives of the seven. Of the thirty-five counties in the state, ex-Governor Sheppard, the candidate of the conservatives, has carried only five, with a total, thus far, of 24,000. Tillman carries the other counties with a total vote of 37,000. In an interview Chairman Dibble said: "I believe that we are defeated by 15,000 votes. We are democrats, and, of course, expect to abide the result of the democratic primary."

GEORGIA WEALTH AND TAXES.

The Tax Rate This Year Will be 4.85 Cents on $100.

Georgia's tax rate will be 4.85 mills for this year. The rate was fixed Tuesday by Governor Northen and Comptroller General Wright. The state has to raise $3,245,000 by taxation this year, and it has $463,000,000, in round numbers, to levy taxes on. To determine the rate was a question of division.

Of the total taxable property, $42,000,000 is returned by railroads and street railways. Three counties have not made their returns—Chattooga, Dougherty and Sumter—but last year they returned $12,284,000, which added to the $408,-007,000 for this year by the other 134 counties makes $420,000,000 of taxable property exclusive of the railway property. Last year the tax rate was 5.08 mills on the dollar. The rate for this year is .23 of a mill, or nearly a quarter of a mill, less than last year.

Two large items in the state's expenses for the coming year will be $500,000 for state schools and $366,000 for pensions. These two items and $90,000 more awarded the old homes of the state road for betterments run the rate up last year. Were it not for these large appropriations the rate would be only 3 mills. For general purposes exclusive of the schools and the pensions the new rate is lower than it has ever been since the war.

A Matter of Life or Death.

Do you know that the state of the blood running in your veins is the cause of your sickness or your health? This is a most important matter, although overlooked by people who show a great deal of good sense otherwise. Your blood has to be kept pure, or your whole system gradually becomes a wreck. It costs very little to check disease and correct the state of the blood if the matter is taken up in time; but it costs a great deal, and is often impossible, if taken up after disease has gained a foothold.

In Reply to Many Times

There is nothing that equals the household machinery like keeping meals waiting once they are ready to be served. If there is an hour set for breakfast it is the duty of every one to be on hand promptly when the time arrives. It not only fosters a habit of regularity but it is an act of justice to the efforts of the cook to partake of the viands when they are in prime condition, just from the oven and not spoiled through ten or fifteen minutes' waiting on the back of the range or a cooling off after they have been set on the table. Promptness insures a better meal every time, and the late comer should never growl over chops dried out, coffee cold or buiscuits soggy, for they are largely due to his own tardiness. Hotel life spoils one for the regularity and system necessary in a private family, and the man or woman who has boarded many years prior to their marriage will have to materially alter their mode of procedure if they mean to keep their servants and have their house run systematically, and, as a natural consequence, smoothly. One cannot blame a cook for leaving a place when the members of the family straggle down one by one, and the dishes are on the table from one to two hours. It is no encouragement toward devising new and dainty things to eat when they can never be judged properly, and many a fault found with the cooking is directly traceable to the irregularity of the household that prevents the serving of meals when they are ready.—Philadelphia Times.

The United States department of agriculture investigation of food adulterations leads to the conclusion that about $700,000,000 is paid annually for materials under that supposition that the articles bought are something different from what they really are. Most of the adulterations are not positively harmful, but are put in to cheapen the articles. Manufacturers do not call them adulteration, but dignify them as "streaks of economy."

Just Common Folks.

A hundred humble songsters trill
The notes that to their lays belong,
Where just one nightingale might fill
The place with its transcendant song.
And thus Fame comes, and with its smile
A soul with lasting greatness cloaks,
And leaves a thousand else the while
To be for aye just common folks.

If only sweetest bells were rung,
How we should miss the minor chimes;
If only grandest poets sung
There'd be no humble little rhymes.
The modest, clinging vines add grace
Unto the forest's giant oaks,
And 'mid earth's mighty is a place
To people with just common folks.

Not they the warriors who shall win
Upon the battlefield a name
To sound above the awful din;
Not theirs the painter's deathless fame,
Nor theirs the poet's muse that brings
The rhythmic gift his soul invokes;
Theirs but to do the simple things
That duty gives just common folks.

They are the multitudes of earth
And mingle ever in the crowd,
Elbowing those of equal birth,
Where none because of caste is proud.
Bound by the meshes of a fate
That sometimes a decree revokes;
Above the lowly, 'neath the great,
Are millions of just common folks.

Fate has not lifted them above
The level of the human plain;
They share with men a brother love,
In touch with pleasure and with pain.
One great, far-reaching brotherhood
With common burdens, common yokes,
And common wrongs and common good,
God's army of just common folks.

The Missing Candidate.

Characters: Sir John Rivers, 65. Mr. Henry Bosanquet, M. P., 45, his cousin. Miss Vaughan, 23, governess to Sir John Rivers' children.

Scene: Rivers Court in Surrey, England. Time: General election.

Sir John (surprised)—My dear fellow——

Mr. Bosanquet (breathlessly)—It's Frank I want. I've wired to his clubs and to his rooms in town and got no answer, so I came down here.

Sir John—Sit down (introducing). Miss Vaughan—Mr. Bosanquet.

Mr. Bosanquet — Now, where's Frank? We want to run him against Somers.

Sir John—I don't know where Frank is. No one here does. In Spain, I believe, somewhere.

Mr. Bosanquet—What a pity! It would have been a walk over the course for him. He had only to show himself and the thing was done. Old Somers would not be in it against Frank with his good looks and popularity. It was such a chance for the boy. It would be the making of him to get into the House.

Sir John—I am very sorry for the party, and sorrier still for Frank, but I can do nothing.

(Miss Vaughan rises hastily).

Miss Vaughan (a little confused)—I think we will have to leave you, Sir John. You wish to talk politics—and the children have finished.

(Exit with children.)

Mr. Bosanquet—That's a nice girl, John, and a very pretty one.

Sir John—She's a deal too nice and too pretty, my dear Ned. It's not her fault, poor girl; but, to tell you the truth, it is those charms of hers that have sent Master Frank to Spain and keep him in hiding.

Mr. Bosanquet—What? She won't have him?

Sir John—I don't know about that; but I saw how the land lay and I told Frank quietly that it couldn't be. Either he must go, I said, or the girl. So he went.

Mr. Bosanquet—You should have sent the girl.

Sir John—Not at all. Ellie and Phillis are devoted to her, she is quite a matter to them, and as they have no mother now, poor little beggars, I couldn't break their hearts and spoil their chance of growing into nice women, even for Frank. You see, Ned, one can't pick a Miss Vaughan off every bush. She is a lady by birth, in manner and at heart, and as straight and honest a little woman as ever lived.

Mr. Bosanquet—Why, hang it all then, let him marry the girl!

Sir John—I have sometimes thought of that; but—you know we old fellows are not quite so blind as we are supposed to be, and—well, I won't let Frank marry a girl who doesn't care a pin for him.

Mr. Bosanquet—And you mean to tell me that this little paragon of yours doesn't care for Frank Rivers, the best looking young fellow in the county, the hardest rider and the best dancer for twenty miles?

Sir John—Not a bit; and a man, my dear Ned, may be the greatest hero in the world, and the cleverest and handsomest fellow in the bargain, but if his wife doesn't love him she'll think him a brute and make his life a burden to him. No, Frank doesn't marry Mary Vaughan while I live!

Mr. Bosanquet (laughing)—If you have eyes, John, so have I, and mine are twenty years younger than yours—and I saw something just now when we were talking—and come, I'll lay you ten to one, in fives, that she's over head and ears in love with Frank and that the two are in correspondence at this moment.

Sir John—What makes you think that?

Mr. Bosanquet—Why, the way she turned pale when I spoke of Frank's lost chances, and I noticed how she hurried from the room. You bet she went to fetch his address.

Sir John—And admit before me that she is writing to my boy? No, if she were mean enough to have done that she would be coward enough to keep it dark.

Mr. Bosanquet—When a woman is in love she doesn't know what being a coward means.

(Re-enter Miss Vaughan.)

Miss Vaughan—You said, Mr. Bosanquet, you wanted Mr. Rivers's address. It is No. 16 Calle del Palacio, Salamanca.

Mr. Bosanquet—Hurrah! I'll wire and he'll be here in forty-eight hours. The seat is saved. Thank you so much, Miss Vaughan. You have done Frank a splendid turn. Good-by, John. I must drive to the nearest telegraph office. (Exit.)

(A pause.)

Sir John—You promised me you would not write to Frank, Miss Vaughan.

Miss Vaughan—Yes, and I have broken my word. I have written once to Mr. Rivers.

Sir John—I am disappointed. I had trusted you so completely.

Miss Vaughan—Sir John, I am afraid I must leave your employment.

Sir John—I am sorry beyond words and the children will be entirely cut up. And this letter that you have sent?

Miss Vaughan—I have not sent it yet.

Sir John (brightening)—You have not sent it?

Miss Vaughan—No, but I mean to by this night's post. (Showing letter in her hand) I have it here.

Miss Vaughan—Yes, it is an answer to one from him.

Sir John (half laughed)—The young rascal! He had broken his word, too; but hang it all! so would I have at his age for—for the woman I loved.

Miss Vaughan—Good-by, Sir John, I should like to go as soon as possible. May I? (She holds out his hand. After a moment her head is bent to [illegible]

He Had No Patience With Timid People.

He was a plump, well-fed drummer and he sat outside the Ryan Hotel telling strange and wonderful things to his fellow guests as they enjoyed the cool night breeze. A gray bug, measuring three inches longitudinally and an inch and a half across the beam, sailed around leisurely overhead and eyed him curiously from time to time. Finally it concluded to alight upon his back and explore in an upward direction.

"If I'd have been in Frick's place," proclaimed the drummer in trumpet tones, "I would have just hauled off and shot that crazy printer before his finger could have pressed the trigger. All he needed was presence of mind and prompt action. I hate a man that gets rattled in an emergency."

The gray bug had reached his shoulder blade and was making for his collar.

"Now look at those fellows in that concentrating mill out in Idaho. They saw a carload of dynamite dashing down the mountain side toward the mill, and not one of them had the courage to throw a rock on the track and derail the car. They got rattled and ran away. Rank cowardice, I say."

"Then look at those Pinkerton men cooped up in that barge at Homestead. Not a man of them dare put his nose out. If there had been one man among them of cool determination he would have cowed the strikers by sheer force of will. It makes me sick when I think of such cowardice. I'll bet any one that if I had been one of the men on that barge those strikers should have ceased their work or I'd have known the reason why. A little presence of mind, as I said before, goes a long—— Wow! Wurrup! Ouch! Murder! Ow! Take it off, somebody. Help! Help!"

The Upper Vest Pocket.

"There is just one person in this world that I would feel justified in assassinating, and that is the inventor of the upper vest pocket," said Major John Wampler, at the Southern. "The upper vest pocket is a delusion and a snare; it has caused more misery than unrequited love, more profanity than tight boots. A man cannot resist the temptation to put all manner of articles into it—combs, toothbrush, pencils, etc.—well knowing that the first time he has occasion to stoop down he will spill the entire cargo all over the floor. The upper vest pocket has my sole scorn for twenty years; then I ordered my tailor to omit those receptacles, and I now have hopes of living a gentleman and dying a consistent Christian.—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Communistic Insects.

Never among mankind can we find so absolute and complete an absorption of the individual by the social group as in the cities of ants and bees, where individual property has never, it seems, been imagined. In these republics what one citizen-sex has for herself belongs to the others. Does a hungry bee meet one laden with booty returning to a city, she lightly taps her on the head with her antennae, and instantly the latter hastens in a sisterly way to disgorge part of the nutriment provisionally stored in her own stomach.

Ants proceed in the same way as bees, but in addition the ant thus sustained is very careful to show her gratitude. "The ant who feels the need of food," says Huber, "begins by tapping her two antennae, with a very rapid movement upon the antennae of the ant from whom she expects succor. Immediately they may be seen approaching each other with open mouth and extended tongue, for the communication of the liquid which one passes to the other. During this operation the ant who receives nourishment does not cease to caress the friend who is feeding her, continuing to move her antennae with singular activity."

The collective system of property must have lasted among ants and bees for many thousands of years, for, apart from cases of demoralization such as may for example be produced among bees by giving them a taste for drunkenness, these intelligent insects show the most absolute deference and devotion to social property. Their primitive selfishness has broadened out into a collective or patriotic egotism. But these very social species, with their more than Christian charity, have not reached this high degree of civilization at one bound. In the ant and bee world, as in our own, there are savages. There are still at the present time certain species of ants ignorant of the division of labor carried so far among their civilized congeners.

Living on Air.

The teaching of experience as illustrated by several recent instances of prolonged abstinence, though it may afford some idea of human endurance in this particular under special conditions, has yet provided no certain criterion of the vital resistance possessed by the average man when suddenly deprived of every form of sustenance. The measure of this force may nevertheless be gauged with approximate correctness from the history of recurrent instances of prolonged and accidental privation. As an example the following is remarkable even in this category.

It is the narrative of three Bohemian miners, who, after being entombed by a fall of sand in the pit where they were working, were finally rescued alive, though, of course, in an utterly prostrate condition, seventeen days later. During the period of their live burial air was pumped down to them by bore holes. On this they may be said to have lived, without food and without water. The total want of the latter is what makes their survival so remarkable. But for this essential the longer fasts of professional fasting men would have been quite impossible. We can have no difficulty in understanding generally why this holds true if we bear in mind the fact that not only does water constitute by far the greater constituent of every tissue, but that without its due proportion the circulation and nutrition of the blood and tissues cannot be duly effected, and consequently [illegible] upon which [illegible] would be utterly impossible. BILL ARP'S LETTER.

The Philosopher is Anxious to Know What is to Become of us All.

He Says We Had Better Drop Newspapers and Take up the Bible Awhile.

It strains a weak mind to take it all in and keep up with it. What with the awful cholera across the seas, and the famine in Russia and the presidential election, and the Third party, and Hogg, Clark and Company in Texas, and Tom Watson and Black in Georgia, and the coal miners in Tennessee, and Sullivan and Corbett in New Orleans, and the World's Fair, and the strikes and hangings and lynchings and murders and suicides and rattlesnakes thrown on to fill up the columns; I don't know what will become of us all. The planet Mars must be on a rampage sure enough and is throwing down a few rocks to show that he is mad. We see that some more meteoric stones are falling out west. I reckon we had better quit reading the papers and take up the Bible awhile and go to meetings and draw our minds away from this sublunary world until some of these things are over. Thank goodness the prize fights are over for a season. That job is done. Now let us have peace. I reckon most men would confess to a sneaking desire to see a prize fight. I do, and it is one of the best evidences of original sin that I know of. I would like to be out of sight behind a curtain and have a peep-hole and see how it was done. One time would do me for with me it is a curiosity only. If there was much blood I would retire early, for blood makes me sick. I expect I would take sides and want my man to whip. Original sin makes a man or a boy love to see a dog fight or a chicken fight or a bull fight or to run foxes with hounds. It is all cruel and devilish and hardens the heart. A cruel boy will make a cruel man, and I wouldn't want him for a son-in-law.

But age and reflection and the grace of God will change a man and drive out this original sin if he is willing. The danger is that before he is aware of it, it becomes total depravity and then he is gone. A young man can indulge in some vice or passion until it is his very life and he can't quit. He can indulge a passion for gaming until it absorbs him and he is not fit for anything else. What a miserable life it is that is bet away on races and fights and the turn of a card. When a man is on his last bed what comfort is there in saying to himself, "I bet and I bet and I bet." Only this and nothing more. If our young men would only stop and think how much better is a useful life than to die a wreck and a nonentity!

But I did not start to preach a sermon. I was only ruminating upon the spectacle that the world presents to those who see it just now as it revolves upon its axis. Human beings—men, women and children dying in Persia and Russia by the thousands every day—dying of pestilence or famine—dying faster than they can be buried, and in Hamburg at the rate of 900 a day, and all business stopped except funerals and grave digging and all night long the muffled rumbling of the hearses and carts and ambulances and in almost every cottage of the poor the wails and groans of misery. Pestilence and famine are holding a carnival. These people are not our kindred nor our friends but they are human beings with hearts and feelings and affections like our own. God pity them! And as the world turns another scene comes to view where thousands of wild excited people are gathered to see two men punch each other unto death or victory, and there are shouts and yells and oaths and pandemonium and betting high and fast and furious and like a shadow over all is the devil smiling and happy and his tortured tail is wagging calm and serene. I ruminated over this and wondered. Suppose that death on the pale horse should suddenly have appeared in that crowd, or the destroying angel should have come with his glittering sword, or the seat mid which should have waited there a breath of the pestilence that is raging on the other side—would it have violated the eternal fitness of things?

The trouble with all sporting is the company that one must keep who wishes to enjoy it. This trouble begins with the medical boy at his games of marbles or ball and with the young man, who is fond of baseball or billiards or cards, or the young lady who likes to dance. Some good pious people hold even that all such things are sinful, because somebody may get hurt. Some [illegible] by [illegible]

More than other people it is a pardonable presumption, for, as a general thing, they are against vice and folly in all its forms. Nevertheless a preacher is but a man, and there is no greater tyranny than the tyranny of priestcraft.

I wonder what is the matter with the people and why they are so restless and excited, and why they are all so split up and torn up in politics. For the life of me I can't see any very great difference between our privileges and enjoyments now and what they used to be. Cotton is very low, but I remember when it was 5 cents a pound and we have had to haul it 200 miles to market. Salt and iron were 5 cents a pound and steel 75 cents. Those were hard times sure enough, but the people didn't complain like they do now. We have had good seasons this year and made good crops and had no pestilence, and yet the people are not happy, and I'm afraid are not grateful. There is a general row between labor and capital and about silver and the banks and the railroads and almost every man wants something he hasn't got and is looking over the fence to see what his neighbor has got. The producer says that prices are too low and the consumer says they are high enough and so there is a clash. More cotton is made than is wanted and won't bring its cost and the politicians say that somebody is to blame for it; but I can't find out who it is. A wagon load of melons sold in our town for 25 cents a dozen because the market was overstocked and the man went home cursing the town and joined the people's party that night. I wish we could harmonize all these things and maybe we can after the elections are over. I don't know of any farmer who is suffering, and, to my opinion, a man who owns a good little farm and has a healthy wife and industrious children is more secure against the ills of life than any other class upon earth. If he will keep a debtor and credit account with his Maker and put down his liberty and independence—his time that is all his own, and not another's—his latitude and longitude—his pure country air and good water that rewarded neighbors do not contaminate like they do in cities—his distance from vice and folly and fashion and competition—his security against pestilence and his good appetite by day and his rest by night—when all these blessings are weighed and put down for what they are worth, he ought to be ashamed to envy the towns or the cities or the plutocrats. I have tried it and I know it, and if I ever undertake to raise another family I will go to the country as quick as I can get there.—Bill Arp in Atlanta Constitution.

The other day at Kouchibouguac, Kent county, N. B., the watchman of McLeod's mill, about daylight, noticed an animal swimming in the mill pond. He thought at first that it was a cow or a horse that had fallen in, but on looking more closely saw that it was a moose of immense size. Some of the hands were called to capture the animal, which, owing to the loose logs floating about, was unable to extricate itself from its predicament. The moose was in savage temper, and was dangerous to approach, but after some trouble the mill chain used for hauling out the logs was fastened around its horns. Then the force of the water was put on, and slowly but reluctantly the creature was landed. The moose, which proved to be fully grown and taller than an ordinary horse, was now captured, but what to do with it was the problem. Two or three persons who went too near the beast were warned by unmistakable signs that its hoofs were dangerous, and one mill hand, a Scotchman, who was overbold, got a blow from its forefoot that he will remember to the end of his life. By this time half the people of Kouchibouguac were at the mill. When finally Mr. Atkinson, the manager, made his appearance, he decided that as there was no possible way of keeping the animal in captivity the proper course was to release it, and this was accordingly done. The moose, still from its long swim and the rough handling it had received while being hauled out, went down the incline very slowly, and kept on a walk for some time after it reached terra firma, but it [illegible] and when last seen was making [illegible] toward the forest.

Senator John T. Morgan will address the people of Chilton county at Clanton, Saturday, October 1st.

Weaver has taken pains to show his hate toward the South and the Georgia toughs have taken bad eggs to show that the sentiment is reciprocated by them.

To his rallying cry of "More Money" the farmer should add "Less cotton and More Grub." The farmer should be independent of any money famine.

Gen. Weaver in a speech at Waycross, Ga., denied the charges in circulation concerning his administration while stationed at Pulaski, Tenn., during the war.

The political outlook now is that Weaver will easily carry Kansas and Colorado on the rotten egg platform. This will throw the election of a President into the House, and neither Harrison nor Weaver will be in it.

The Republican party is the author of the national bank law and the protective tariff. It also opposes free silver and every other demand of the toiling masses. What can farmers hope for in fusing with such a party?

Union Springs Herald: We know of several farmers in this county who have not got a stalk of cotton planted, and they say they get along better, and have more money, and have more time to rest than they did when they raised cotton. These farmers raise corn, rye, oats, peas, sugar cane, ground-peas, hogs, cows, horses and many other things that pay a greater per cent than raising 5 cent cotton.

The Weaver party were rotten-egged in Macon, Ga., last week, and Mrs. Weaver was struck in the face. The weakest point about some people is their spirit of intolerance, by which means they often place themselves and their cause at a disadvantage. The rotten-egg business in this case was not only disgraceful to our boasted civilization, but will be effectural during the remainder of the campaign in gaining sympathizers for Weaver and his cause.

The following abstract from an address delivered by Hon. Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Tribune, before the American Agricultural Association of the West, is worth reproducing:

I understate the truth when I say that the farmers of the West and the planters of the South are charged $500,000,000 a year on their goods, for the profit of protected Eastern manufacturers, more than is fair and necessary on the principle of live and let live.

In his speech at Atlanta, Speaker Crisp commenting on the third party's demands for Government ownership of the telegraph lines and railroads, said: In the third party platform the railroad plank providing for the Government ownership of railroads is absurd. It would cost the Government $9,000,000,000 to buy them. Where is the money to come from. There is not enough money in the country. It is more than the money of all nations. But suppose we had them. It would take 1,500,000 people to operate them. We have now 100,000 office-holders. If we had 1,500,000 Federal office-holders when would the people nominate anybody again.

The blues seem to have a first mortgage on a good many of our folks. The hard fact of poverty is staring many in the face and the grim wolf of starvation is licking his chops in expectation of eating a few of us. There is heard the wail of the "Sell-out-and-go-to-a-better-land" croaker. Courage, comrades! It looks bad to see you waver now you who have endured worse times than these. You have seen war and reconstruction; you lived through '76 and '77 when the mortgage was singing the dirge of the Alabama farmer. You have only to endure the burden of to-day. To-morrow's clouds may roll away in the sunshine or you may not be here to see them should they burst. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."—Ala. Beacon.

Gen. John T. Morgan is expected to address the people of our county next Saturday at Clanton. No good citizen who can spare the time should fail to attend and hear him. Gen Morgan is a statesman of more than ordinary mold. He is now and has ever been in line with the people of the south and west in their demands for relief from Federal taxation and imposition. He opposed the nominating of Mr. Cleveland, probably doubting that Mr. Cleveland fully represented his party in its oft declared financial policy. Yet when Cleveland was nominated Gen. Morgan takes up the fight in behalf of the party's nominee.

Mr. Cleveland would never veto a measure which the party in the wisdom of its representatives might give us. He has so declared himself, and the course for Democrats to pursue is to vote the regular ticket. The greatest prosperity this State and the South have known was during Cleveland's administration. The north and east saw the South rising up as a rival in wealth and industrial progress, and on that cry Harrison was elected and Cleveland defeated, and the seat of industrial progress and prosperity has been transferred to the Northeastern States during the past four years. That is a true statement of facts. The financial depression, brought on us here by loss of confidence in southern properties and securities has not been felt at the east. The commercial agencies report business good and money plentiful there. Harrison as the creature of that power seeks the perpetuation of this state of affairs. Weaver can do nothing for us, because he cannot be elected; and the only hope for the south and west is in Cleveland and the reforms he advocates.

Come out to hear Gen. Morgan and he will impress these truths upon you more forcibly. Do not fear that he would convert you if you are determined not to be converted. No one could do that. He will come among us as the friend and representative of all the people, one who has devoted his life to the study of public questions, and will be prepared to entertain and to enlighten us all.

It is said that the best way to get rid of a bad law is to enforce it. The rule may yet be proved in case of our Alabama election law.

The Money Question.

Cleveland's Letter of Acceptance:

The people are entitled to sound and honest money, abundantly sufficient in volume to supply their business needs. But whatever may be the form of the people's money, national or state, whether gold or silver or paper, it should be so regulated and guarded by governmental action or by wise and careful laws, that no one can be deluded as to the certainty and stability of its value. Every dollar put into the hands of the people should be of the same intrinsic value or purchasing power. With this condition absolutely guaranteed, both gold and silver can be safely utilized, upon equal terms, in the adjustment of our currency. In dealing with this subject no selfish schemes should be allowed to intervene and no doubtful experiment should be attempted. The wants of our people arising from a deficiency or an imperfect distribution of money circulation ought to be fully and honestly recognized and efficiently remedied. It should, however, be constantly remembered that the inconvenience or loss that might arise from such a situation can be much easier borne than the universal distress which must follow a discredited currency.

What The Enemy Intend.

Mobile Register.

If any citizen of Alabama is in doubt as to the intentions of the republican party which the Weaver party are now seeking to put in power, let him read the following from the National Republican, (Washington, D. C.,) the official organ of the republican party, taken from the issue of July 8, 1891, while the force bill was pending. It needs no comment:

With the Lodge election law in full force over the south and various democratic strongholds up north, we may confidently look for a different state of affairs. New York city will then return several more republican congressmen than at present, while more than twenty negro representatives from the south will render the republican control of the future congresses absolutely secure and safe. As Mississippi, South Carolina and Florida contain a large majority of negroes, and as there are enough white republicans in Alabama, Arkansas, North Carolina and Louisiana, acting in concert with the negroes to put these states into the republican line, we can confidently look in the future for seven southern states to be reliably republican. This means a gain of fourteen senators and at least twenty representatives to the Republican party.

When through the operation of the Lodge national election laws, six or seven southern states shall discard democratic rule, we shall look confidently to see some measures of justice done to the blacks who have been so long defrauded of their rights. Heavy taxes should be laid upon the property of whites to develop and extend the public school system in those states.

Separate schools for the two races should be abolished, and the plan of bringing the youth of both colors into close and equal relations in schools and churches given a fair trial, as one of the most potent elements to break down the detestable bourbonism of the south. The right of the black to bear arms should be guaranteed to him, as well as the social rights intended to be secured him by the passage of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendment to the constitution. The state laws against the intermarriage of the races should be repealed and any discrimination against the blacks in the matter of learning trades or obtaining employment should be made a criminal offense, while the colored man's right to hold office should be sacredly protected and recognized. A few years of this policy will solve the race problem satisfactorily.

Senator David B. Hill, of New York, said in his recent speech at Brooklyn concerning the Lodge elections bill, generally known as the force bill:

The law would be expensive, dangerous in enforcement and of doubtful constitutionality. It would drag the judges into politics, weaken the respect for Federal authority, provoke conflicts between the people and the military, and the present era of conciliation and good feeling would be superceded by prevalence of a spirit of bitterness and hate. The bill is a desperate attempt to prop the failing fortunes of a once great political party. It was conceived in political animosity, is urged from the narrowest and worst of motives and is unworthy of a place among the statutes of the American Republic.

I know this much, that the Democratic party will be entirely content to permit every workingman whose wages have been increased since the passage of the McKinley bill to vote the Republican ticket, if our opponents will consent that all whose wages have not been increased shall vote the Democratic ticket, and upon this basis, we will carry the country by 1,000,000 majority.—David B. Hill in his Brooklyn speech.

Paying Federal Soldiers.

Birmingham Age-Herald.

On January 11, 1886, Gen. Weaver introduced a bill in congress providing for the payment to ex-union soldiers and sailors of the late war the difference between the market value of gold during the war and that of greenback currency, in which they were paid at that time for their services.

To meet the difference in value, it would, as set forth in the proposed bill, require $800,000,000.

The bill did not pass, and in 1888 Gen. Weaver introduced it a second time, thus showing an unfaltering determination on his part to carry the pension and bounty robbery policy of the republican party to the remotest extremes of public plunder.

The Force Bill Issue.

Benjamin Harrison's candidacy stands for two things,

First.—The perpetuation of the war tariff for the benefit of the wealthy few who contribute most to the support of the tariff party in power.

Second.—The employment at elections of Federal arms to bring the Southern States under the domination of the negro, and thus perpetuate his party in power.

For the first time in its history a President of the United States asks for a re-election on a proposition to hand over a large, rich and populous territory to the domination of an ignorant, lawless mob, influenced by race hatred and incited to violence by demagogues, the power of evil to be only tempted by martial rule. The president appeals in vain. A regime which would be an outrage in Mississippi. To establish it would be to invite anarchy. Granted that it broke the Solid South, it would create a solid North against the domination of the negro.—Chicago Post.

G. F. P. cures Leucorrhœa.

Re-consolidation.

The Kolbites and the Third party-ites can no longer pose about a subsidized press representing the Jones democracy, since a special collection has been taken up for the Alliance Herald and rabid Republicans were the most liberal contributors. We venture to assert that there is not a Jones paper in the state that would ask or accept of a contribution, or that does not give value received for every cent it gets. And they ask only for the patronage of their constituents, in a business way.—Northport Breeze.

The Guntersville Democrat says: The Alliance News stopped its publication with yesterday's issue. A called meeting of its stockholders was held on Monday which was largely attended by the brethren, some of whom expected a handsome dividend. It is stated that the total expenses of running the paper for the year just closed has been about seventeen hundred dollars, while the receipts were something like five hundred dollars. The paper had seven hundred dollars above the cost of the plant, to start on, and owes now between four and five hundred dollars. This reminds us of what the Eufaula Times says about newspapers:

"The average newspaper does not pay. Perhaps twenty out of the one hundred and seventy-five in the State make a decent living for their owners and afford profitable investments for capital. If it were not for 'suckers,' and we mean by 'suckers' people innocent of the troubles, difficulties and expenses attending a newspaper, there wouldn't be a new one begun in Alabama in the next half century."

New Orleans States: A lady writer has published a book entitled "How to raise Children." There is a great deal to be said on this question, but the old fashion way of giving them plenty of hominy and milk and licking them with a trunk strap when they need it, cannot be beat.

Merchants and farmers and others: Brace up friends, and pay all you can of what you may owe and all will yet be well. This is not meant for those farmers who have raised ample food crops to run them a year and who are thereby independent of a money famine. What a pity that there are not more of that class.

The People's party has adopted a telling shibboleth, "More Money." This is a pretty live issue at any time, and especially so with farmers, saw mill men, newspaper men and some others who never see any money and who have a curiosity to know what it looks like.

The Opelika Industrial News comes nearly rising up the political situation in Alabama than any journal we know of. The News says:

In the city of Birmingham there is to-day in session a convention composed of at least four hundred former good and true Democrats, representing each of the sixty-six counties in the State of Alabama.

The object of this convention, as has been heretofore declared by some of the leading spirits in the movement, is to put out candidates in each Congressional District of the State and to nominate Presidential electors, all of whom are to oppose the organized democracy of the State. Will they succeed? This is the question now uppermost in the minds of thinking men. To say that the candidates and electors nominated by that convention, stand no chance for success, is simply to close our eyes against what has recently transpired in Alabama politics.

They surely stand a chance and no reasonable man who is at all posted in Alabama affairs, who is not blinded by prejudice will deny this fact. The next important question is will it be to the interest of the people of Alabama, the country at large and the Democratic party State and National for them to succeed. Here is where many honest men differ. Many men in the state of Alabama, who a few years ago, could not by any means have been induced to vote against the organized democracy, now honestly believe that the country's interest demands the defeat of the grand old party. There is no denying the fact that we have reached that stage in our political history, here in Alabama, where the party lash has lost its power. The cry of traitor, negro supremacy and force bill will no longer do the work. Men true, Democrats tried, men who feel they have had the good of the country at heart as much as any other men are about leaving the fold of the Democratic party. How are they to be retained in the ranks of the grand old party? It can be done by sound reasoning, unanswerable argument, together with kind and perfectly fair treatment.

Mosely and Parsons, machine Republicans, contributed one hundred dollars to the Alliance Herald. Such papers take pains to denounce "boodleism" while getting all the boodle. Such is politics.

Atkins' Patent Concave Tooth Dexter.

BABY'S FAVORITE. FOR THE GOOD OF THE BOOTY IT HAS SO MANY.

The patent by which this saw is protected consists of a depression of the face of the cutting teeth through the center from point to base, thus removing all friction while in use, giving strength and stiffness to the teeth and increasing three-fold the durability of the "set." WE CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a saw equalling the ATKINS EASY CUTTING DEXTER.

Prices: [illegible]

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The large demand for the Atkins Concave Tooth Dexter has led competitors to make inferior saws which they claim "as good as the Dexter." Some indication in our saw marks them a lower grade of steel, inferior workmanship, and without the patent concave tooth.

Ask your hardware dealer for the "Atkins Dexter" and take no others. If the dealer will not order it for you, send amount with order direct to us.

Can You Help?

ED. VIEW.—Please correct the statement that the contract for the new church has been let Mr. J. H. Skaggs, of Jemison. There will be no contract let for the building, but it will be done by day labor and all who will contribute work are requested to notify me. Respectfully,

W. L. SAMPEY.

Senator Morgan has ever been a brave champion of the free coinage of silver and every interest of the plain people—the masses who have so long conterded with poverty. The Senator by his stand has shown that he is not influenced by the wishes of the money magnates. He is an advocate of the interest of his section and his people. He should have a rousing reception in Chilton.

She Was Grateful.

We were nearing Jacksonville, Fla., after the long trip from New York. The porter had just finished brushing off a mother and four children, each one of whom had demanded attention every fifteen minutes, when the woman turned and said:

"You have been very attentive to us during the trip and I wish to reward you."

"Yes, 'um."

"What is your name?" she asked, as she took out pencil and notebook.

"William White, mum."

She wrote for a minute on one of the leaves of her book, and then tore it out and handed it to him with the remark:

"A colored man who is ambitious to get along will always find friends."

I caught him in the vestibule two minutes later and asked to see the paper. It read:

"MR. PULLMAN—Your man, William White, has been very attentive to me and my children, and I would recommend that you raise his salary and let him know that you fully appreciate his efforts.

MRS. S. B——."

I read it aloud to the porter and looked at him. He turned a sort of gray and gasped for breath, and it was sometime before he could ejaculate:

Befo' de Lawd but I dun thought dat a fifteen dollar check on some bank in Jacksonville. Huf Shool Wall of all de deleterious ornoxiousness I eber did dun meet up wid in my life dis captivates de panracle!"

G. F. P. Womay's greatest boon.

Neighborhood News Gathered by Our Correspondents.

Verbena Views.

Mr. and Mrs Paine, have moved to Anniston to the regret of their many friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Pernice of the Capital City, who have been spending the summer here, have returned from a pleasant trip through the North and are stopping at the Clifton House.

Mrs. J. D. Beal and children, who have been spending the summer here, have returned to their home in Montgomery.

Dr. O. J. Brooks, of Wetumpka, has been visiting relatives in Verbena.

Messrs. Bennett Griffin and Ed. Read, of Montgomery, visited friends in our city Sunday.

Mr. Jim Green has gone to the Southern University at Greensboro.

Mr. C. H. Green has moved his saw mill from here up to near Talladega Springs.

Miss Fannie Nix, one of our most charming young ladies is visiting friends in the Capital City.

A young gentleman from Cooper's has been visiting our city quite often lately; look out boys he will make some of you feel sad yet.

Miss Mary Brown, of Autauga, has been visiting relatives in our city.

Mr. H. F. DeBardeleben is having the Pratt Saw Mill railroad track taken up.

Mr. C. T. Zimmerman has a bouncing young man at his house. He has come there lately. We know he is proud of him.

Mr. Joel Barnett and lady of the Capital City have been the guests of relatives in Verbena.

Among our visitors this week were Mr. Barnett Merriwether, of Selma, Mr. John Parker, Montgomery, Mrs. Thomas Williams, Wetumpka, Mr. Fox Maull and his charming daughter Miss Dedie, of Elmore, and Mr. Ben Merriwether of Bullock.

Frank Baldwin, Esq., has gone to Montgomery to practice his profession.

Mr. A. J. Brooks has returned from a business trip through the Northwest. He expects to move his family up there soon. Chilton county will lose one of its best citizens, and the removal of his family will be a great loss to Verbena. We hope he will find a pleasant home in the West.

Mr. Adair's residence was destroyed by fire last week.

To any and every person who comes out to hear Senator Morgan speak on Saturday next we will send the VIEW six months for fifty cents.

Gen. Morgan is an orator and a statesman whom it is worth your while to hear, and the VIEW is a friend and a paper that it is worth your while to read.

Jemison Jottings.

Mr. Minor Woolley and his estimable wife, have moved to Jemison. Mr. Woolley has for years been a sufferer from paralysis for which he has our sympathy. To-day he is 72 years old.

We take pleasure in saying that Mrs. Mollie Allen having received her new stock of millinery goods, she can please the eye of all from the most fastidious to the plainest.

With a few exceptions our town is healthy, and in consequence of good health and other favors, we hope that Prof. Godsey's good work will prosper.

Let every one brace against fall chills which may prevail after so much rainfall through the summer.

There is not a greater boon to the farmer than a good brood mare, if she is only managed properly Farms have been paid for, mortgages have been canceled, and luxuries have been enjoyed, through the faithful, honest labor of a good mare or two, together with doing a full share of farm work, raise a good colt each year. Good mares on the farm are bread-winners, if they are handled as they should be.

A Few Don'ts.

Don't feed corn or corn meal to horses during hot weather; it is too heating.

Don't spare the oats. The well-fed horse stands up under constant work when the under-fed falters.

Don't imagine that when you water your horse three times a day you have done all that nature demands.

Don't breed that old broken-down mare. It wont pay but will be an injury to the breeding industry.

Don't throw away that curry-comb, now that the farm work is not rushing. It is needed as much now as it was during the summer.

Don't let the stallion stand idle in the barn. Make him work some; it will add to his potency and help pay for his feed.

Don't overload the team. It is better to make two trips than to strain the horses and get them in the habit of balking.

Don't use heavy harness. Light ones properly made of good leather are stronger, last longer and are [illegible]

REVERSED AND REMANDED.

The Sale of a Body a Little Too Previous.

There was a murder committed some long since. Two attorneys were employed for the defence.

After a long and tedious trial, the defendant was convicted and sentenced to be hung. One of the attorneys insisted upon taking the case to the supreme court, the other urging that the man hang. The former, being so persistent in his intention to appeal the case, the latter approached him one day and said:

"Look here, Mr. W——, we will never get any fee out of the defendant and I have got his consent in writing to sell his body, and Dr. —— has agreed to give me $75.00 for it. This is the only way we can ever get our fee."

Well, that may be, Mr. C——, but I don't believe in that sort of business. I shall prepare a bill of exceptions and take the case up.

The case was appealed, reversed and remanded. A new trial was had and the defendant received but a life sentence and is now working at Pratt Mines.—Birmingham Ledger.

The Clanton High School opened last week with twenty-five pupils and Prof. Robinson reported thirty-three in attendance Tuesday morning.

GERSTLE'S

Female Panacea.

For All Female Diseases.

Jamestown, Tenn., Oct. 15, 1891.

This is to certify that my daughter tried physicians and nearly all remedies for Female Irregularities, but received no relief or benefit whatever. We had nearly despaired of her recovery when we were induced by our postmaster, Mr. A. A. Gooding, to try Gerstle's Female Panacea, and after using four bottles she was entirely cured for which I feel it my duty to let it be known to the world and suffering humanity, for I believe she owes her life to the Panacea. Action by the Government—Various Cities Establishing Quarantine.

NEWARK NEWS.

Up to 4 o'clock Friday evening only one suspicious cholera case was reported—that of Edward Hoppe, who died at 1625 Madison avenue Thursday. The case is under investigation.

The arrival of the Bohemia with eleven deaths on the voyage and four new cases makes the last of the Hamburg immigrant-carrying vessels. The practice ceases with this vessel. The deaths are ascribed to gastro-intestinal trouble, but have the appearance of genuine cholera.

The Normannia's passengers on the Cepheus were safely landed at last in the afternoon, and fifty, who would not come up by boat, arrived by railroad from Babylon. They all complain of the Hamburg Packet Company, but commend the Normannia's officers and the coolness of the passengers and crew.

Reports received show that the presence of cholera in New York has caused needless alarm in many places where ordinary illness has been hastily asserted to be Asiatic cholera. Some diminution of travel has already occurred, owing to fears of the state quarantine, but thus far New York has successfully combatted the disease. The emergency cholera fund is steadily growing. No new cases are reported at quarantine.

POWERS OF THE PRESIDENT.

In response to a telegraphic inquiry from the president on the 9th insant as to the extent of the powers conferred upon the surgeon general of the marine hospital service and secretary of the treasury, with the president's approval, to make quarantine regulations with reference to immigration from infected ports, Attorney General Miller on Friday submitted his opinion, which holds that consistently with state laws and and regulations it is entirely competent for federal regulations to impose additional restrictions, and hence, also, the imposition of an additional period of quarantine on the total exclusion of all "vessels or vehicles coming from any foreign port or country where any contagious disease may exist," or "vessels or vehicles conveying any person or persons, merchandise or animals affected with any infectious or contagious disease," from "any port of the United States" is within the powers conferred upon the officers named in your inquiry, acting with your approval.

STOPPED IN CANADA.

A news special from Ottawa, Ont., says: The government has been apprised of the arrival at Quebec of a number of immigrants from Europe with through tickets for the United States. The railway companies absolutely refuse to allow immigrants to board trains and the immigrants are simply stranded in the provincial capital. They want to take possession of the federal immigration buildings, but the government requires these buildings for Canadian immigrants. Hence foreign-bound arrivals are thrown on their own resources. The difficulty will, it is thought, only be solved by the steamship company taking these people back to Europe.

NO MORE IMMIGRANTS.

A Washington dispatch says: The talk of the president's proclamation suspending immigration has subsided. The Atlantic steamship companies learning that the attorney general had given his opinion to the president that his powers were ample, sent a statement to the treasury of the number and character of passengers en route with the assurance that no further immigrant traffic will be permitted by them.

TWENTY-ONE DAYS' QUARANTINE.

From St. Johns, New Foundland, the news comes that the government on Friday, issued a proclamation that vessels arriving from infected ports shall be quarantined for twenty one days from the commencement of the voyage.

RICHMOND AROUSED.

A meeting of the board of health and advisory board of Richmond, Va., was held Friday, at which it was decided to inspect all trains and steamers coming into the city as a precautionary measure against the introduction of cholera. Steps were taken, having in view the improvement of the sanitary condition of the city.

STILL RAGING IN RUSSIA.

Fifty nine new cases reported in St. Petersburg, Russia, Thursday, deaths eight, a decrease of four cases and nine deaths. In the lieutenancy of Caucuasa, there were 477 new cases and 204 deaths on Tuesday. The epidemic is still virulent in the provinces of Saratoff, Samara, Simbirsk, Lambof, Kasan, Voronesh, Lublin and Don Territory.

STILL INCREASING AT HAMBURG.

Cholera is again increasing at Hamburg. Two hundred and twenty-two new cases and ninety-eight deaths Thursday, an increase of eighteen cases and seventeen deaths from the day before. Since the first outbreak of cholera in the city, 14,894 cases and 6,506 deaths have been reported. There were reported Friday 687 new cases and 213 deaths. The epidemic has caused the death of about three thousand children, and has left 2,400 orphans. An inspection of the workmen's dwellings at Hammerbrook, Hamm and Horn, suburbs of the city, has disclosed a shocking state of sanitary affairs.

SERENE IN SAVANNAH.

Mayor McDonough, of Savannah, received permission Friday from the war department to use Fort Pulaski as a detention camp for uninfected passengers on the vessels on which cholera may break out on the way to this port. Quarters at the fort will at once be made comfortable for prospective tenants.

WILD CHOLERA RUMORS

Affecting Chattanooga and Selma Vigorously Denied.

Friday, telegrams from Chattanooga, Tenn., and Selma, Ala., which stated that cholera cases were developed in each of those cities, were given publicity through the press. The following telegrams of denial were promptly sent out:

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Sept. 16, 1892.—Report absurd. Chattanooga was never more free from infectious disease, and never better so well prepared to resist its introduction from foreign points. HILTON B. COMB.

"SELMA, Ala., Sept. 16, 1892.—There is not a word of truth in the report. Hon. H. H. Stewart, mayor of Selma, said: 'I don't know of a case of serious sickness in Selma. The sanitary condition is good, the people healthy. There is no alarm and no concern. Prompt quarantine for the infected cities and of the general character will prevent the dreadful disease may create in the United States. I have never known, in a residence of twenty-six years in Selma, the health to be better. There is absolutely no ground for such a report.'"

BURNED THE PEST HOUSES

Because They Feared the Introduction of Cholera.

A Nashville dispatch says: The county board of health gave instructions that the pesthouse four miles below Nashville, on the river bank, be cleaned up in order that they would be prepared to care for cholera cases should the plague reach Nashville. The pesthouse was located near the thriving suburb of West Nashville, and the people there were greatly alarmed, as over fifty families live close by. Friday night they held an indignation meeting and appointed committees to try and secure promises that the pesthouse would not be utilized. About the time the meeting adjourned some one set fire to the pesthouse and all three buildings, each of which was 150 feet long, were destroyed. It would cost $4,000 to replace them.

WRECKED BY ROBBERS.

Four People Killed and Twenty-Five Seriously Injured.

There Were a Million Dollars on the Train but the Robbers Did not Get It.

Passenger train No. 8 on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe road was wrecked by robbers three miles west of Osage City, Kan., at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning. The train consisting of baggage, express and mail cars, two day coaches, two chair cars and three sleepers, was thrown over an embankment three feet high and the first six cars telescoped. Four persons were killed outright and twenty-five seriously injured. Those killed are: Frank Baxter, express messenger, Kansas City; J. Blumenthal, express guardsman, Mexico, Mo.; James Chaddicks, fireman, Topeka; Ed Mayer engineer, Topeka.

The wreck occurred at a small bridge which crosses a ravine. There is a heavy down grade and the train was running fully forty miles an hour. It was impossible for the engineer to see the misplaced rails in time to check the speed of the train and the coaches piled one over the other until the baggage and express cars were completely hidden from view. Three Pullman sleepers remained on the track, but the other cars were completely demolished. The fish plates had been carefully removed and the bolts taken out and the spikes drawn from ten ties and the rail bent to the inside. Robbery was unquestionably the object of the outrage. The train carried $1,000,000 in currency enroute from the Mexican Central railway to its headquarters in Boston. The scoundrels did not get the money.

A section house at Barclay was broken into Tuesday night and a crowbar, wrench and sledge hammer were stolen. All of these tools, except the crowbars, were found, and the fish plates and bolts which had been removed were also discovered. The passengers were sent to Topeka. Some of the wounded, who could not be removed, were left at Osage City. Several of the passengers will probably die, but the attending physicians will make no statement until the extent of their injuries can be examined into.

LABOR COMMISSIONER PECK

Charged With Misdemeanor in Burning Public Records.

A dispatch from Albany, N. Y., says: The committee sent by the national democratic committee, comprising Hon. Nelson Smith, J. Schoenhoff, E. Ellery Anderson and Edward McSweeny, called on Commissioner Peck, of the state bureau of labor statistics, Friday afternoon and labored with him for over an hour to secure the names of manufacturers reporting to him the effect of the tariff on their respective industries. They also asked to see the individual returns, but Peck held to his original statement that he would show nothing but what was contained in his full annual report. The upshot of the matter was that the committee left for New York without finding out anything at all.

Police Justice Guttman late Friday afternoon issued warrants for the arrest of Commissioner Peck and his stenographer, A. Rodgers, charging him with misdemeanor in burning public records, consisting of circulars collected by him from which he prepared his report on the effect of the tariff on wages and production. The warrants were issued under the state code after the proceedings before Judge Guttman behind closed doors.

William Dennison, janitor of the private house where Peck and Rodgers have rooms; a servant girl and Miss Schaffer, clerk in the bureau of labor statistics, gave testimony. Dennison testified to the arrival there two weeks ago of twenty-five large packages. He testified that on Sunday last Rodgers told witness he wanted to have the contents of the packages burned in the house furnace that night. Dennison said that that was his night off, when Rodgers gave him $2 to do the work. He consented and shortly after 8 o'clock that night Dennison carried the packages down to the cellar from Peck's bedroom, and starting a fire in the furnace kept feeding it steadily until twenty minues to 3 o'clock Monday morning. They were of the same color and size as the manufacturers' returns.

ALABAMA'S WAR GOVERNOR

Dies Suddenly of Heart Disease at His Home in Montgomery.

Ex-Governor Thomas H. Watts died suddenly at his home in Montgomery, Ala., Friday morning of heart failure. He was born in Butler county, Alabama, in 1819 and has been prominent in the politics of the state since 1847. During the states rights' discussion he was the colleague and right hand man of William L. Yancey, and was a prominent figure in the secession convention in Montgomery in 1861.

He went to the front when the war out, but was called to the cabinet by Jefferson Davis and was the attorney general of the confederate states until he resigned in 1863, on his election as governor of Alabama. He was governor of the state at the close of the war and from the time of the federal occupation of Montgomery until the appointment of the provisional government by President Johnston, he remained the nominal governor of the state. After the war he resumed the practice of his profession in which he ranked high.

No New Cholera Cases.

A New York dispatch of Monday says: There are no new developments in the quarantine situation either in the lower bay or at Pire Island. The anchor line steamship Furnessia arrived during the morning from Glasgow. When passing Sandy Hook she signalled, "Report—All all well."

THROUGHOUT THE SOUTH.

Notes of Her Progress and Prosperity Briefly Epitomized.

And Important Happenings from Day to Day Tersely Told.

A news special from Austin, Texas, says: Governor Hogg issued a proclamation last Wednesday, quarantining against New York and other places where cholera now prevails or may hereafter appear.

Roots, Taylor & Co., wholesale grocers of Memphis, Tenn., assigned Saturday to P. McAden. The assignment created a sensation, as it was believed the firm was doing a prosperous business. Liabilities, $30,000; assets, $75,000.

A news special of Sunday from Ocean Springs, Miss., states that an apparently well founded report is in circulation in that city to the effect that the vessel Rosina Smith, now lying at Ship Island, has yellow fever on board. One man died on board Saturday.

A news special of Monday from Huntsville, Ala., says: Fourteen carloads of machinery are arriving for the hub, spoke and handle factory. A force of mechanics and laborers will be put to work on the erection of the building. The factory is expected to give employment to forty-five skilled mechanics.

A Danville, Va., dispatch says: The people's party of the fifth Viginia district held a convention Friday to nominate a candidate for congress, their candidate, C. L. Martin, having declined. Martin reconsidered his action, however, and again submitted his claims. He was defeated by B. T. Jones, of Henry.

A news special from Winchester, Va., says: Harry Smoots, who was sentenced to be hanged October 7th, for the murder of Miss Susie Farrall, of Shepardstown, in January, committed suicide at Charlestown Wednesday morning from a dose of morphine. It is not known how he obtained the poison.

A Nashville dispatch of Wednesday says: John B. Gunter, recently nominated for congress by the republicans of the fifth congressional district, has declined the honor on the ground that "There is no use running a republican for congress in this Gibraltar district of Tennessee democracy."

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Charleston, S. C., board of health an order was issued quarantining the Clyde line steamers five days from their sailing date from New York. The average sailing time is forty-eight hours and the regulation consequently virtually amounted to three days' quarantine of vessels from infected ports.

A Columbia, S. C., dispatch says: The state board of health on Tuesday established a quarantine against railway lines entering the state. Unless the cholera scare becomes more pronounced the regulations will require only a rigid inspection of all passengers and baggage entering the state, particularly from New York, and will interfere but slightly with travel and traffic.

A dispatch of Monday from Ft. Worth, Texas, says: Chairman Gillespie, of the state executive committee of the "Lily White" faction of the republican party, has issued a long circular repudiating the action of the recent Ft. Worth convention in endorsing Clark, one of the democratic gubernatorial candidates, and calling upon "all live republicans" to support the "Lily White" candidate, Mr. Houston.

A Jacksonville, Fla., dispatch says: Dr. Joseph Y. Porter, state health officer of Florida, was shown a report sent out from Wilmington, Del., Tuesday, announcing a death at New Smyrna, Fla., from yellow fever, and said: "I have no information of yellow fever at New Smyrna or anywhere else in Florida. If there was a case there or anywhere else in the state I should know it as soon as discovered. The law in Florida is very stringent about reporting such cases. There is no truth in the dispatch from Wilmington."

A Savannah, Ga., dispatch says: H. M. Comer, president of the South Bound railroad, resigned Tuesday, and B. A. Denmark was elected to succeed him. Mr. Comer's resignation is on account of duties as receiver of the Central railroad, which require his entire attention. The Florida Central and Peninsular stockholders have confirmed the lease of the South Bound and the work of building the South Bound to Florida will begin at once. President Duval is now in Europe negotiating for money.

A News special of Wednesday says: Citizens residing on the government reservation at Fortress Monroe, Va., have been thrown into a state of great excitement owing to a receipt of a general order signed by the secretary of war preemptorily ordering that every house including Hyglia and Chamberlains new hotel to be vacated within fifteen days of the issuing of the order, which is dated September 14, 1892, and further ordering the removal and tearing down of all buildings at the owners' expense. An act of congress, dated March 1888, gives the secretary full power in this matter.

Nashville, Tenn., has a real live king who has just been called to his home to mount the throne and restore order from the chaos now prevailing in his kingdom. The king's name is Momolu Massequoi, and his country is Vey, which adjoins Siberia in West Africa. Momolu has been in Nashville for two years past attending the Central Tennessee college and securing a Christian education. He is twenty years old. He has just received letters stating that his father, King Belah, has been killed in battle, and that his mother had died of starvation. His people are in a desperate situation and he is urged to come at once and bring all the relief possible.

A. E. Watson, president of the First National bank of Marlin, Tex., has given the trustees of Roanoke college, Salem, Va., $1,000 to endow a scholarship in memory of his son, Armistead Churchhill Watson, and Russell Lewis Wells, son of Professor S. C. Wells, students of Roanoke college, who were killed by lightning at Salem the 27th of last June. These young men had been intimate friends and room-mates for three years, and their names will now be linked together in the Watson-Wells memorial scholarship, which is to be bestowed annually by the faculty upon some worthy student to aid him him in pursuing his studies at college.

Fearful Storm in Japan.

A San Francisco news special of Friday says: Japanese advices state that 300 persons were killed and ninety wounded in a recent gale in Tokamatsu district. Twenty thousand acres of land were devastated, [illegible] and 4,000 houses destroyed.

VERY GOOD TRADE

Notwithstanding the Cholera Fears Throughout the Country.

R. G. Dun & Co. report for the past week says: Cholera has landed and the business of New York goes on exactly as if it had not. The cars are crowded with passengers and the streets are badly blocked with carloads of merchandise, as they were this week one year ago, which means that the heaviest trade ever known at this season is now in progress. The same is true of other cities, almost without exception, and the outlook for the fall trade is at all points regarded as exceedingly good. But many people are afraid that all other people will be afraid, and consequently the speculative markets decline.

There has been much talk about the pestilence as an excuse for low prices in breadstuffs and cotton. But the fact is that the enormous stock brought over from last year afforded sufficient reason for exceedingly low prices.

In cotton there has been heavy selling, and September options are below 7 cents, though prices for spot cotton are unchanged. Trade at Louisville is improving; at Nashville fair, and at Little Rock satisfactory, while at Montgomery caution prevails, and at Galveston the late cotton crop causes slow collections, though trade otherwise improves.

At New Orleans, business is only fair, and money is in strong demand, but cotton is lower while sugar and rice are active and strong. Iron is more steady, the output September 1st being only 151,648 tons, against 155,136 tons on August 1st, and unsold stocks have been reduced about 68,000 tons.

In dry goods there has been a notable increase in the number of buyers, and the market is more nearly bare of woolen goods than it has been for years, the medium worsted and serge trades having the preference. There is a heavy demand for cottons, and medium bleached goods are higher, with browns firm. Carpets are stronger, and many mills demand an advance of 2½ cents.

Respecting cholera it is well to remember that sanitary precautions are more thorough than ever before and at most foreign cities have sufficed to prevent the spread of the disease.

Business failures throughout the country in the last seven days, as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., number, for the United States 154, against 210 last year.

The reunion of the society of the Army of the Cumberland commenced Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. General Rosecrans presided at the first meeting of the society. Reports from the work on the national park were presented and approved. Out on the battlefields the veterans looked up the locations of their various commands, and all sorts of wagons and hacks being employed to convey the throng to the national park and adjacent grounds. Gen. H. V. Boynton delivered the annual oration before the society and a large gathering of citizens and visitors at night.

General Boynton reviewed the achievements of the army of the Cumberland, and in so doing sought to correct some of the errors of history in the memories of Grant and Sherman by the light of official records only recently made accessible. In doing so he claimed the credit of saving Grant from the disgrace of a surprise at Shiloh, for Rosecran's victory at Chickamauga and for Thomas' success at Missionary Ridge. Grant and Sherman's memories wherein misrepresentation concerning the army of Cumberland were given currency was cautiously reviewed. The address was a scholarly and eloquent effort and will no doubt attract much criticism. The audience rewarded the speaker by frequent applause.

It is understood the meeting to be held in 1893 will be at Cleveland, Ohio, in December. Almost all of the guests left for Washington Friday to attend the Grand Army of the Republic.

TURPENTINE OPERATORS

Will Meet and Discuss the Feasibility of Diminishing the Output.

The call has been issued for a meeting of the Turpentine Operators' Association in Savannah, Ga., October 12th. A large attendance is expected. Florida's turpentine association has elected sixteen delegates to attend this meeting. The subjects of labor and output will then be thoroughly discussed and a decision arrived at which will control the action of the members of the association.

The operators begin to cut boxes in November and must arrive at definite conclusions at this meeting as to the scale of wages and the decrease in the output. It is understood that efforts will be made to diminish the output by nearly 50 per cent, and that wages will be cut down considerably. As the number of hands to be employed will consequently be less than in past years, there will be but few brought in from other states. Nearly all of the output of this season is marketed. The undercurrent shows a better tone than for some time past.

GOVERNOR FLOWER'S PERIL.

Some Miscreant Sends Him an Infernal Machine.

The life of Governor Roswell P. Flower was threatened by an infernal machine sent to him at the Windsor hotel in New York city a couple of days ago. Fortunately the governor suspicioned the mysterious package and did not open it. The machine is now in the possession of Inspector Steers, at police headquarters, together with its mechanical arrangements. A large number of detectives have been put on the case.

The inspector said if the box had been opened, as was intended, an explosion would certainly have followed. In speaking of the matter, Governor Flower said: "This is the first time anything of the sort has happened to me. I am not at all upset, however. I suppose I have made some enemies by calling out the militia, but I must do my duty, and peace must be kept. All the infernal machines in the world would not make the slightest difference to me."

BERGMAN SENTENCED.

He is Sent to the Penitentiary for Twenty-one Years.

A Pittsburg news special says: Bergman, the anarchist who shot President Frick, of the Carnegie Company, was on Monday convicted and sentenced to twenty-one years' imprisonment in the penitentiary on five charges of felonious assault, and entering a building with felonious intent, and one year to the workhouse for carrying concealed weapons. An hour later, Bergman was on his way to the penitentiary, and at 3 o'clock he had donned the convict [illegible] and had begun his long term of imprisonment.

CRASHED INTO EACH OTHER.

Fourteen People Lose their Lives in a Railroad Collision.

The Wreck takes Fire and Many of the Unfortunate Victims are Roasted.

Special dispatches from Cleveland, O., state that what will undoubtedly prove to be the most disastrous accident that ever occurred in the history of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railway, took place Wednesday morning at three o'clock in what is known as Brown's cut, a mile and a half from the village of Shreve, Wayne county, Ohio.

Train No. 6, a fast east-bound passenger and express train, collided at that point with the first section of freight No. 75, west-bound. The passenger train was about one hour late and was running at the rate of sixty miles an hour. It is stated that the engineer and fireman of the freight, while standing on a side track at Shreve, fell asleep and were awakened by hearing a train rushing by. Thinking that it was No. 8, the engineer pulled out on the main track, and had just got under way when the trains met. The collision occurred on a sharp curve and in a cut where neither crew was able to see the other train approaching.

The engines came together with such awful force that the mail car and smoking car of the express were thrown on top of the passenger engine and a freight car filled with printing presses was thrown over the freight engine. The passengers and trainmen, who escaped, say the accident had hardly taken place before flames burst forth and they believe that but two or three persons were killed outright, the others having been pinned down in the cars and slowly roasted to death. Thirteen burned and blackened trunks have been taken from the wreck.

STEWART IS FOR WEAVER.

He So Declares Himself Before a Silver Party Convention.

The second convention of the silver party was held at Winnemucca, Nevada, Friday evening for the purpose of instructing its electors to vote for Weaver and Field. Senator Stewart, in an address to the convention, declared that both Presidents Cleveland and Harrison had disregarded their respective platforms and after the election used their power to demonetize silver. He said a vote for either Harrison or Cleveland was a vote for an enemy of a paramount industry to Nevada. Weaver was the only presidential candidate whose position on the silver question harmonized with Nevada's interests. He declared he would vote for Weaver and advocate his election on the stump.

GEORGIA TOBACCO

Wanted By The World's Fair For An Exhibit.

The world's fair wants a good tobacco exhibit from Georgia. J. M. Estes, the special tobacco agent of the exposition, writes that the government exhibit will include samples from every state and territory, and embrace every class and type of tobacco grown in the United States. Six or eight hands, according to size, will constitute a sample. If growers will send samples properly tagged with the name of the variety to Colonel Nisbett, commissioner of agriculture, at Atlanta, he will have the samples forwarded to Chicago. Samples should be sent to the commissioner before January 1st.

THE DALTON'S NOT CAPTURED.

The Report Denied by the Governor of New Mexico.

A dispatch of Friday from Elpaso, Texas, says: There ported capture of the Dalton brothers is probably without foundation. Ex-Governor Ross, of New Mexico, telegraphs from Deming that nothing has been developed to justify the report, and as far as he has been able to learn, the Dalton brothers and their gang of train robbers have not been seen in the territory. Similar telegrams have been received from various points in New Mexico.

Ways of Life.

When Fortune smiles its sweetest smirk
And Favor slaps us on the back,
When Fame's steep hill seems easy work,
And pleasures decorate the track
Along our rose-strewn youthful route
Life plays upon a cheerful lute—
When we are young.

When care has bent the weary frame
And Trouble marked the wrinkled brow,
When we must live, tho' halt and lame,
We sadly think of then and now.
When friends are scarce and dollars few
Life shows a very different view—
When we are old.

When death shall enter at our door
And grimly serve his summons bold,
When we shall suffer pain no more
And Mother Earth our form shall fold,
Ah! then will be our battle won
And brighter life but just begun—
When we are dead.

LOVE AND PRIDE.

Cecil and I were sitting in the big chair by the fire in the warm, dimly-lighted library. Just after dinner he had brought me here to tell him a story. Cecil was a spoiled child. We all recognized that fact, but as we had conspired to spoil him we could not blame him for insisting upon the privileges we had so unwisely accorded. Thus it came about that I was spending my evening here while the others amused themselves in the distant parlor.

"What shall it be?" I asked, prepared to thrill my small hearer with some wondrous tale.

"Anything," he said, drawing my arm about him. "You know so many, Dorothy."

"Anything," was very vague, but after hard thinking some impulse prompted me to tell him the story of Baldur, Baldur the god. I was not sure that he would like it, but he did. The little face grew flushed and earnest; he leaned forward, his eyes eager and shining as I told of the great deeds of the god and everyone's love for him. And when I came to Loki, describing his treachery and cunning, the scorn and anger on Cecil's face almost made me laugh. I finished with the grand funeral ship sailing out over the waters while the warriors mourned on the shore and he sank back with a deep sigh.

"Don't you like my story?" I asked, as he did not speak.

"Oh, yes, it is the best of them all!" Suddenly, after another silence. "Dorothy, are there any such men now?"

"No, dear, but there are good ones still," I answered dreamily, thinking of some lives I knew, not godlike, but so truly noble in the face of bitter circumstances.

He was very quiet after that, nestling cozily in my arms with his eyes on the fire, the little head full of thought.

"Dorothy," he said at last, "isn't Dr. Harcourt noble and brave?"

I felt the color flash to my face.

"I don't know, Cecil; I thought so once, but lately he has not acted very bravely."

"Why not, Dorothy?"

"Oh, I can't tell exactly—he is fighting a chimera and is allowing it to master him."

I spoke dreamily and to myself rather than to the child. At that moment, before he could ask any more questions, the door bell rang. I heard my sister Helen's voice, then the closing of the parlor door and all was still again; but a moment later there came a tap at the library door and Dr. Harcourt opened it and came in. The light was too dim for him to see us till I laughed and said:

"Good evening."

"What are you doing here in the dark?" he asked, coming over to the fire. "Has she been telling you ghost stories, Cecil?"

"No," scornfully. "I don't like ghost stories; Dorothy never tells them."

"I have been leading him 'through old mythologies gravely sweet,'" I explained as Dr. Harcourt sat down opposite us.

"Dreaming, as usual," he laughed. "I wonder if you will ever come down to practical life, Dorothy?"

Cecil lost his support then, for I drew myself upright; it was not pleasant to be called a dreamer, especially when I fancied myself growing so sternly practical.

"Have I made another blunder?" smiling at my angry face. "You must pardon my prosaic view of things." Then, his tone changing suddenly, "Helen tells me you have been out today."

"Yes."

But here Cecil interrupted; slipping down from my side he went over to the doctor's chair and climbed on his knee.

Something sent my thoughts back to the time, three years ago, when I had had an art craze, and this friend had patiently shown me all the treasures accessible to the public in the city.

We did not live in the grand house then, but in a small one on an old-fashioned street. There were five of us Brandons, Jack, Nan, Helen, Cecil and I, Dorothy, a large family to support on the very modest income mother derived from the property papa left her. Jack had been expected to follow papa's footsteps and study for the ministry, but the life was not suited to his pushing, energetic nature. Poor Jack! He had a hard struggle to bring mamma around to his way of thinking, but by-and-by she was forced to yield and allow him to abandon the idea of a professional career altogether.

He had a great scheme for making his fortune in the West, but it required capital, and we had very little of that. Nevertheless, Jack would not give up; the idea was a good one, and sooner or later he could make it work, he declared.

The two other girls, Nan and Helen, had their own congenial tastes and pursuits, and I—Dorothy—had my separate life. I read and studied, dreamed and planned, as every girl will do, laughed at generally practical Jack and the girls, but always helped and encouraged by Jack's friend, Philip Harcourt.

It was strange that such a strong friendship should have grown between us two, for Philip was much older than I, practical, sensible man, and I was only Dorothy, the dreamer, as they called me, a queer mixture of sense and nonsense, childish impulsiveness and girlish fancies. Yet he always sympathized with me, always drew me on to tell him all my fancies. He was Dorothy's friend truly—in those days before the change which altered all our lives.

Mamma's uncle, an old man who hated my father because he was a clergyman, "a creature of ideals, with no practical ability," as he characterized him, and who, since papa's death, had paid very little attention to us, died and left his entire fortune to me—to me, Dorothy Brandon.

Why not to Jack, who needed it so much? Why impose such a crushing responsibility upon me? It was strange to find myself risen from insignificant Dorothy to a person of substance, and I confess that at first I felt miserably nervous and frightened, instead of pleased at the prospect of my good fortune. It was useless to attempt to shift any of the weight of responsibility to Jack's shoulders, for beyond a moderate sum to enable him to develop his cherished schemes he would have nothing to do with my money.

But mamma and the girls were ridiculously happy. They didn't feel their dignity impaired, as Jack did, because the money happened to be left to me, and when mamma saw my perplexity she wisely undertook to help her burdened daughter.

But another thing troubled me greatly. Philip was so changed. The first time he called after the funeral I was alone in the parlor and ran to him at once, expecting help and sympathy as usual, but the moment I met his eyes full knowledge of the change in him and its cause flashed upon me. Another knowledge came as quickly—knowledge that gave me exquisite pleasure and quick, keen pain, that tied my tongue and made me for the first time in my life shy and constrained with him. All at once I knew the true meaning of our friendship. He was not my friend but my lover, and now this wretched money was to come between us. When I was poor he had meant to win me; now that I was rich he would not take advantage of my girlish liking, but would leave me free.

And what could I do? Nothing; only wait in silence while every day we drifted further away.

I grew nervous and irritable with the long strain; it told upon my health, too, and just before Christmas a severe cold, combining with the nervous anxiety of the last few months, made me really ill. For a day or two I dragged myself about refusing my mother's entreaties to see the doctor; all the time I hoped he would come without being summoned.

One afternoon I was lying on a couch in the library, wrapped in shawls, with my aching head buried in the pillow, when someone opened the door and came in. All the color left my face in the intense joy of seeing him. I know how my eyes were shining and the revelation my face was making—knew this because I saw the reflection of it in his. I saw his momentary struggle with himself, with his pride, and then my conquest.

"Poor Dorothy!" he said gently. "Poor little girl! We cannot have you ill."

We were just the old friends again after this, with perhaps a shade of difference, but of that I would not think. The happiness of the present was enough for me; the future could wait. This afternoon I felt so strong that I had ventured to go out for the first time since my illness.

Wrapped in thought I had been quite oblivious of the other two on the other side of the fire, but now with a guilty start I remembered Philip. I wondered if he had noticed my strange silence. Evidently not, for he and Cecil seemed engrossed in each other.

"And so Dorothy does not think me a brave man?" Philip was saying. "And why?"

My heart gave a quick throb of dismay and shame. I started forward to check the child's answer; but it was too late.

"She says you are fighting a chimera," said Cecil. "What is a chimera, Dr. Harcourt?"

"It is something that runs away with the happiness of silly people,' said Philip, after a short pause; and then there was a long, long silence.

At last I stole a glance at Philip. Cecil was fast asleep, his head on the doctor's shoulder, his yellow curls shining like gold in the firelight. But he was not looking at the child; his eyes were fixed on my face with a look that thrilled me; it was so different from any I had ever received from him before, triumphant and tender, strong and masterful.

Avoiding his eyes I hurriedly took the child from his arms. My hands were trembling, but I carried him to a sofa. This certainty of Philip's love had completely unnerved me and I could not encounter his [illegible]

"Dorothy!" He came over to the sofa and stood before me, but I did not lift my eyes. "Dorothy?" he said again, and this time he moved a step nearer.

With a half sob of gladness I stretched out my hands blindly and he drew me into his arms.

"My darling!" he answered, thankfully. "My wife!"—[Waverly Magazine.

Game on the Railroad Track.

Railroad engineers often see many incidents of a sporting and natural history character, while at their post of duty. Stories of bear, deer, wolves and foxes are related without number, and while locomotive engineers can exaggerate a story as well as anybody else, the majority of their items are of value. Not long ago two deer were run down by a locomotive on Long Island, and the engineer says that he did not see them on the track at all. He thinks that they must have deliberately run alongside of the locomotive with the train and then darted on the track, possibly with the intention of crossing.

A bear was struck by a Maine locomotive which was running at the rate of thirty miles an hour and yet Bruin only suffered a good bump, as the engineer expresses it, for he got up and looked at the flying train as if he would have willingly returned the compliment. One of the strangest stories of the railroad track is one that comes from Ohio and relates to the wily fox. As a locomotive was going along at a good rate, the engineer noticed a large red fox dashing alongside the front wheels and just behind the cowcatcher. Reynard's tongue hung out of his mouth and it was plain he was pretty well fatigued. Soon the cause of the fox's condition was discovered, for there soon appeared just behind the little animal a fox hound which also had the appearance of being pretty well worn down from running. When the hound got within ten feet of the fox, the latter suddenly bounded over the track within an inch or two of the plow. The hound followed, but was killed instantly. The fox climbed upon the opposite bank and there grinned until the train was out of sight.—[New York World.

Fighting Mice with a Bacillus.

Professor Loeffler's bacillary crusade against the field mice of the Thessalian plain, Greece, has ended in victory. The latest reports announce that the fields are strewn with the corpses of mice. It will be remembered that Professor Loeffler discovered some time ago a new bacillus, the "bacillus typhi murium," which has the power of producing a certain disease in mice, and in mice alone. A plague of field mice, threatening to destroy the harvest, having appeared in Thessaly, he was appealed to by the Greek government, and immediately started for Athens. He began his experiments by treating field mice in the laboratory with injections of his bacillus cultivation, and when these experiments showed his method to be undoubtedly the right one, he started for Thessaly with a staff of Greek doctors. Bread crumbs, saturated with the bacillary substance, were strewn broadcast over certain fields, and as early as a week later the results were visible. Success being now assured, Professor Loeffler will return to Germany, and the bacillus cultivation will be carried on at the seat of war itself. —[Scientific American.

"This milk tastes as if it was watered," said Mr. Brenson.

"I know it is, papa," said Tommy. "I saw the cow-takin' a drink myself."

The Pitcher Plant.

Among the many vegetable wonders, the pitcher plant, or huntsman cup, is the most interesting. The plant grows wild in peat bogs in Northern Ohio, and is much valued as a vegetable curiosity. The plant grows in clumps; leaves all radial and hollow, hence the name pitcher. The hollow leaves are most generally filled with water for the purpose of drowning insects; the inner face of the shield is beset with stiff bristles pointing downward, allowing the insects to enter, but by no means allowing them to escape. I have found as many as a dozen species of insects entrapped in one of these vegetable magazines.

The victims that fall prey to this plant soon decay and become a liquid form, which is imbibed through the inner coating of the leaf and assimilated. The proof that this plant does feed on insects is that the liquid never becomes very offensive. The plant drinks up the organic matter as fast as it dissolves. There is an insect that is a little too much for this plant. It enters into the pitchers or hollow leaves and feeds upon its relatives as they happen to fall victims to this plant. When he becomes tired of this life he makes a dart to the bottom of the water, drills a hole through the cup and escapes, allowing the water to pass away after his departure.—[Ohio Practical Farmer.

Why Do the Leaves Fall?

It is generally supposed that leaves fall in the autumn because they die. This is not a correct view. If we break off a leafy branch, the leaves will soon wither, but not drop off. In fact, they will cling to the dried branch with greater tenacity than when they were green and alive, requiring some force to wrench or twist them off. In tropical climates they remain green much longer than in temperate countries, and their fall, when it does take place, is not just before the cold season, but during the hot dry season. Many of our own trees, as oaks and hornbeams, retain their leaves dried and withered till the pressure of the new distending bud in spring displaces them.

As in man, the seeds of his decay are born with him, so in the leaf-bud there may be discovered the rudiments of a very delicate layer of cells, whose plane is at right angles to the plane of the leaf. When the time comes, this upright growth of cells enlarges, pushing from above downwards, cutting through the woody fibres of the stem like a knife blade. Thereafter, "At every gust, how the dead leaves fall!"

It Was No Go.

In a hall in Glasgow a few weeks ago there was a lecture on "Marriage and After." The lecturer said that men should kiss their wives as they did when they were a year or two married.

When the lecture was over an old man went home, put his arms around his wife's neck and kissed her. Meeting the lecturer next day he said:

"It's no go."

"What isn't?" said the lecturer.

"Weel," said the man, "when I kissed my wife she said, 'What's gone wrang wi' ye, ye auld fool, ye?'"—[Boston Globe.

Date Palms in Arizona.

Hall Hanlon, six miles below Yuma, has twenty date palm trees in his garden, the largest of which is fifteen years old. It is thirty feet high. Six of the oldest trees are in bearing. By actual count one branch contains 1500 dates. It weighs forty pounds. There are several much larger branches, so thick that the fruit on them cannot be counted correctly, but it is estimated that there are 5000 dates in each branch, and then they will weigh at least fifty [illegible]

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

He Believes Children are a Great Institution and a Blessing to the World.

Children are a good invention. Lord Bacon said they were imp-diments to great enterprises, but I'm not satisfied about that. Reading and observing teaches me that they are the promoters, the inspiration of progress and invention. Men work harder and think deeper when there are old dren behind them. I don't know any great enterprises that have been projected by men without them. Steamboats, railroads, cotton gins, telegraphs, printing presses, sewing machines were all invented by men who had families. Children are in the way of war, but not of peace. The world is working for them. To raise and maintain and educate them and see them settled is its principal business. Indeed, much of the lying and cheating and swindling that is perpetrated in trade is done on their account, and there are men in prison for larceny whom Heaven would discharge and say "go and sin no more."

I was ruminating about this because there is a lot of little chaps here in the house now, and they keep up a racket and inspire me to great enterprise. I am contriving an invention to regulate them. There are three little girls from over the hills, and a little rooster from Florida. They are sent here to get them out of the way of the new babies. There is a brand new one over the hill and she is a gurl—"a nuther gurl," as the Florida boy wrote his mother. Mrs. Arp is over there, of course, making catnip tea and sugaritta and "blessing" its little heart. Yes, the baby is a nuther gurl—that's four right straight along in a row, and the paternal puts on high tragedy and exclaims: "Hang out your banner—the cry is still they come." The number is all right and the quality is good, but the assortment isn't satisfactory, for there is not a boy to grow up with his sisters and look after them and protect them. It's bad but it can't be helped. Another one of our offspring has four boys and here are four girls, and the last is a beautiful child—looks just like her mother and her mother looks like me. That last is what I say, though it's not a common remark. Poor little innocent! She looks like she didn't have a friend in the world, and Mrs. Arp says she cried half the night and she reckons it was because she made a mistake. But she didn't mean to, and is sorry. The paternal ancestor steps around solemnly and looks away off like he was the injured person. Fond hopes and puerile expectations have been sadly disappointed, but the mother nestles the child to her bosom and with a tear in her eye whispers: "Mamma will love you." And she will. If the little thing had come cross-eyed, or deformed, there would have been one friend. As Coleridge said:

"A mother is a mother still—
The holiest thing alive."

There are four queens now—a pretty good hand for poker. Maybe four kings will come along and take them by and by, and it will be alright. Girls are worth more than boys anyhow. They are purer and better and keep nearer to heaven. It is mighty well that up there they neither marry nor are given in marriage, for if they did the girls would have a poor showing for husbands. It would be worse than Utah. There is more original sin in one little boy than in four little girls. Here is this Florida chap who hadn't been on the lot an hour before he had made friends with the dog, and was sicoing him on the cats and had them hiding under the house. He can turn a handspring, and a cart-wheel, and stand on his head, and cut the pigeon-wing (with a stone.) He has just finished reading the Young Marooners that tells so many useful and wonderful things, and now he wants somebody to fall in the creek and get almost drowned so that he can bring him to, and he wants the lightning to strike a boy so that he can throw water on him. I had to watch him on the train, for he thinks the platform on the hind car is the best place for a boy to ride. But give the little girls a doll apiece and something to make a play-house and they are happy. It's a wonder. It's a wonder to me that girls love boys anyway. That they will marry them and bind themselves hand and foot to trouble, and many a time to grief and misery.

But our Florida boy and these little girls are all right and keep things lively. I love to have them around. Last night we had music and song and a little dance, and even Anna Ann, who was cleaning up the dining room, was seen through the half-open door tripping and courtesying to the music on the sly, and we caught her at it and she was scared and apologized and said the music was so dancy she couldn't help it. She asked us not to tell Uncle Sam or the preacher, and I won't. Then our big girls played lit le plays with the children, and sold pawns "fine or very fine," or how many miles to miley bright," and made Miss Betsy out a bolster, and had a good time all round until bedtime. We have to keep them in the house because Mrs. Arp said so, for one is croupy, and the room is so full of cut papers, and picture books, and balls and marbles that I can hardly get about. I threaten to lick them sometimes, but they have long since lost confidence in me on that line. I used to make our children fear me, but as the parents grow older they become more indulgent, and when one by one the children grow up and leave the family fireside the parents cling the closer to those who are left and rule them with love instead of fear. Old folks have to surrender to the inviable and it is best to do it gracefully. But there is a way a heart-ache suffered that is never told. I wouldn't mind getting old if I could do so without losing sight and hearing blunders and putting others to trouble. I laughed the other day at an old man until I was tired. It was on the train and there was a nice little apartment at the end of the car and a water cooler and wash place, towel and soap. There was a long narrow mirror in the partition next to the cooler and as I was reclining on the seat the old gentleman came in to get some water. That tin cup had been carried away by each lady at the other end of the car. The old man looked around for it, then turned the faucet and satisfied himself that there was water there. It was a little dark in there and as he was looking around for the cup he thought he saw something of man standing at the other end of the cooler open by and so he addressed him and said: "Stranger, I'm mighty sorry to trouble you, but I've lost my cup and I'm mighty dry and would be much obliged if you would just hand me yours." Then he drank and drank and drank, and when he got through he looked around and said: "Stranger, I'm much obliged to you, but I'm afraid you've got the best of me." Then he looked around and saw the cup came back. I drew him some water but he couldn't hardly drink for laughing and as he sat down by me remarked, "I never was fooled so bad in my life; fact is, I thought the old fellow in the glass either deaf or very impolite—I liked to have hurt my own feeling! He left me after a few minutes but so long as I observed him he continued to smile. I reckon that if he ever sees this letter he will laugh again.—Bill Arp in Sunny South.

A Fine Rifle Shot.

"The best rifle shot I ever saw was an East Tennessean who acted as scout for the army of the Cumberland," said Major R. B. Beer at the Southern. "His name was Brownlow, but whether he was a relative of the fighting parson of that name I do not know. Brownlow was a tall, lank specimen of humanity and looked like a typical frontiersman. He wore a coonskin cap and carried a rifle a foot longer than himself, with which he could put half an ounce of lead squarely between a man's eyes at a distance of nearly half a mile. He fought for sheer love of it, was always hunting for victims, and used to boast that he averaged a dozen a week. He hung on the enemy's picket lines night and day, and when Old Tom,' as he called his lingering eternity of a gun, cracked there was certain to be a death. One day, during a sharp skirmish, Brownlow ensconced himself in a big cottonwood tree and was dropping Confederates as fast as he could feed bullets to 'Old Tom,' when a Mississippi sharpshooter made a sneak for another tall cottonwood about six hundred yards distant. The Tennessean spied him, there were two puffs of smoke from among the green leaves and the two killers came down head first, with their long deer rifles rattling after them.—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Spanish Laziness.

"One reason for the existence of the tremendous trees in California is the averseness of the Spaniards to felling trees or cutting live timber of any sort," said G. A. Satteries of Los Angeles, Cal., at the Southern. "The Spaniards, you know, two centuries ago pushed their way through Mexico to California, and save the clearing of paths through the dense forests not a twig did their axes chop down. Nor do the Spaniards transplanted to this continent ever destroy timber. With stubborn pertinaciousness strangely at variance with their lethargic dispositions they continue to build their houses of stone and mortar at great expense of money and physical exertion when timber in abundance surrounds them out of which they could construct log houses, as did other pioneers, at a minimum of cost and labor. Why, the Spaniard doesn't even fell trees for firewood, but picks up dead limbs as they fall to the ground, or pulls them from the trees with his lariat."—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Snake in Church.

The services at Grace Methodist Church were rather unpleasantly interrupted last Sunday evening by the appearance of a snake in one of the aisles. The reptile, the species of which cannot be agreed upon by members of the congregation, was about two feet long, and as it crawled along the passage with a wicked look in its eyes made things mighty uncomfortable for those in the immediate vicinity. One or two ladies were especially loud in their exclamations, and would probably be still standing in the pew in their attempts to get as far as possible from his snakeship had not a courageous young man picked up the serpent and carried it out. The ladies then regained their seats, also their breath, and the programme continued. The reptile was probably a harmless gopher snake, but some have been so bold as to say that it belonged to a more dangerous type.—[Santa Barbara (Cal.) Press.

We cannot but endorse the words of Gov. Fishback, of Arkansas, when he says:

"If there is a third party man or a Republican here I desire to say that I have no quarrel with them. I believe that the great mass of the people of all parties are honest and patriotic, and are aiming at good government just as I am. I don't want to scare you, but to take you by the hand and reason with you calmly."

Senator Teller, a Republican, who voted against the Lodge Force Bill, says of it:

"I have read that bill with care and attention more than twenty times. I have read it in the light of calm consideration. And repeat that if it were presented to me now with the alternative of party support or party dismissal I should not vote for the bill. A more infamous bill, in my judgment, never passed the threshold of the doors of the Senate. Avowedly in the interest of good government it was instigated, in my judgment, by men whose interest was to prevent a full expression of the will of voters at the polls."

The Birmingham Evening News has swapped places with the Age-Herald at last. The Age-Herald is toeing the mark and the News is astraddle the fence.—Opelika News.

Our Opelika contemporary is mistaken, the News and Age-Herald have been skipping and zigzagging about a good deal we confess, but the News is doing the best it can under the circumstances—it is hunting position only. It is the people who are doing the razzle dazzle act, not the journalist. When we lie down at night we can't figure it out which side of the fence the people will be on the next morning. The people are lost.—Huntsville Mercury.

It is a serious thing for a candidate to be even suspected of favoring a scheme to lower the morals of the people. Here is a warning to men who, in this day and generation, desire to "run" well before their fellow men. The Age-Herald says: Hon. James E. Hawkins, solicitor of Jefferson county and late candidate for democratic nomination for congress, ascribes his defeat in the congressional convention to Col. Hiram Hawkins, of Barbour, president of the state fair. Solicitor Hawkins says that he was getting on in his congressional canvass in a most satisfactory manner when Col. Hiram Hawkins, of the state fair, advertised that there would be bull fights at the state fair. The people confounded candidate James E. Hawkins, and on account of the bull fights the people resolved that Hawkins should not go to congress, and they carried out their resolve. Therefore, James E. Hawkins has a bitter feeling against Hiram Hawkins.

We are now in a period of the political campaign where the influence of politics is bound to be the greatest. From September 15th to the night before election in November politicians are the busiest trying to work up enthusiasm for their particular schemes. It is during that period when we hear so much about "the masses," who after the election, as some one once cleverly said are merely "them asses." But it is the six weeks preceding the quadrennial election that people are prone to project their foolishness upon the tympanums of men. Yet it is a fact that a man can talk like an idiot on politics one minute and transact business like a genius the next; and yet the American business man is not the fool he delights in making himself appear once in every four years. Business is not thrown to the dogs for the pleasure of helping to put one set of politicians in office to the exclusion of another set. Business men find some amusement in mixing with politics occasionally, and go in for more or less of it according as their inclination for sport leads them. But business is the first thing, and, with all the hurrah and fuss and feathers of politics to lure the weak-minded into insanity, the common sense of practical business men keeps them as attentive to their own interests as the politicians are to theirs.—St. Louis Spectator.

THE PLATFORM

Adopted by the People's Party at Birmingham.

The platform adopted reads:

Recognizing the sovereign power of the people of the United States and of each state and of each individual as a separate and component part of the sovereign power, the Jeffersonian and People's party of Alabama demand:

1. A free ballot and a fair count.

2. That the rights of the citizen shall be entitled to more consideration and be as fully protected as the rights of capital.

3. That free and untimited coinage of silver shall be authorized by law and enforced at the earliest date possible.

4. That the amount of circulation shall be increased to not less than $50 per capita, each dollar to be made the equal in value to every other dollar.

5. That a graduated income be authorized by law and enforced at the earliest date possible.

6. That the facilities for transportation and communication of the country shall be controlled in the interest of the people with justice and equity to their owners.

7. That Americans should own the lands of the country and alien ownership should be gradually extirpated so that every citizen should have a chance to own a home free from extortion and unjust exactions of alien or home monopolists.

8. That the tariff should be reduced to the lowest possible amount consistent with an economical administration of the government with such incidental protection as can be accorded to our industries by a wise levy of the same.

9. That charters of National banks shall be repealed and a means provided, by which money shall be issued direct to the people with safety in the security and full indemnity to the government.

The Best Basis.

However cheap money may be as to the amount of interest, pay day always comes, and the interest is a perpetual drain on the forces of productive industry. If a man borrows $100 at 2 per cent, he must yearly contribute from his earnings $2 to the lender and ultimately pay back the $100. If the people of Alabama could borrow $100,000,000 at 2 per cent from the Federal Government, they would be saddled with a yearly payment of $2,000,000 in interest, a sum twice the amount of all our state taxes on property. Ultimately they would be compelled to pay the $100,000,000 unless they could procure renewal after renewal, and thus become permanently liable for the $2,000,000 yearly interest account.

The point we make is that the opportunity to create wealth for ourselves out of the riches of nature and industry, is far better than any importation of money at however low a rate, to be ultimately paid back, and constituting a perpetual drain upon the people. We know of nothing that would go so far as to enable the people of Alabama to create wealth, to find remuneration for their industry and markets for their products, as the building of the Nicaragua canal. How it would help is not far to see.

In the first place it would give us control of the rapidly expanding markets of China and Japan, where 100,000,000 people are to be clothed and who ought to be clothed with cotton cloth. The farmers of Alabama are suffering to-day for want of markets that will absorb our cotton crop, and need not be told how a wider market would affect them.

In the second place the canal company itself and the ships as they enter the harbor at Greytown, would consume no less than 1,000,000 tons of Alabama coal independently of the millions of tons that would find a market in the Southern countries and the larger general commerce of the Gulf ports. An additional population of 25,000 people would be employed in the single item of coal digging. These are merely instances.

When the Democratic National Convention in its platform endorsed this great enterprise, and when Mr. Cleveland in his letter gave it a cordial approval, they declared in favor of the prosperity of the people of Alabama on a permanent and sound and wealth creating basis.—Age-Herald.

A BREEZY LETTER.

FROM DR. CAMBRELL OF MISS.—HE IS PREACHING,

And Has Observed a Few Political Straws Which Show the Way of the Wind.

From Meridian Tribune.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 23, 1892.

Editor Tribune:

A Southern man in these parts is to the people an object of interest and in turn finds much to interest him. This is a beautiful city of 200,000 souls. Ten miles below it is St. Paul with 150,000 people. They are called the twin cities. Everything is thoroughly modern and Western. Many of the buildings are magnificent. Enterprises are projected on a colossal scale.

This city is in the center of the wheat region of the Northwest. The mills here have a daily capacity of 43,000 barrels. The power to move these mills is furnished by the Mississippi river, which, in a mile falls 80 feet. The lumber interest here is likewise immense. A gentleman tells me that the annual output is 45,000,000 feet. The logs are floated down the river.

The people here walk fast, live fast, and, I am told, die fast. They are remarkably fine looking. The women are bright and beautiful having a Southern caste quite noticeable. The climate is perfect just now, and I am told always bracing. It is furiously cold in the winter, but dry.

Politics in all this Northwestern country seem to be running with the bridle off. The editor of the Prohibition paper, here tells me that between the Prohis and the People's party, the enormous Republican majority in Minnesota may disappear. Republicans in Iowa, as I came through, confessed that their chances are slim in that State. Wisconsin has been given over by many to the Democrats and populites, and the States in the Rockies have fallen from Republican grace. The Democratic press is notably aggressive, and the Republican press is apologetic. The force bill is a burden on its inventors. Steve Elkins in his West Virginia speech threw it overboard. I have not found a man to endorse it, and this is more remarkable when it is considered that the great church I am supplying has but two or three Democrats in it. The force bill is a Godsend to the Democrats up here.

Great interest is taken in Southern politics and strong hopes entertained that Cleveland would lose enough to even up Harrison's prospective losses in the West. Yesterday a company of gentlemen questioned me very closely about the new movement in the South, especially in Alabama. They take (the Republicans do) every word that Kolb says about fraud. And, furthermore, lying is not one of the lost arts among politicians. They thought that the fusion with the financial help the Republicans can give the movement would surely carry that state, and some of them seem a good deal disgusted when I told them that Chris McGee's visit to his check book about made Alabama for Cleveland. "It's a good place to put Republican money, no doubt. Many of the negroes in Alabama are short of funds and Kolb has but very little for them; but if Mr. Harrison wants his money to count votes, he had better try it on blocks of five in Indiana again or Vermont or Illinois," I said. In explanation of the deathless opposition to the Republican party in the South, I said: "From the first, every move of the party in the South has been to outrage the instincts and aspirations of the white race. It has imperiled every interest of both races, and the South will never have any of it. Your boast in the North is that you stand for intelligence and morality; in the South your party is allied with ignorance and vice, so much so that decent Republicans have long since abandoned the effort to give even a semblance of respectability to the party. No, gentlemen, there is nothing for the Republican party now or hereafter in the South." One loves to have a chance to turn himself loose on that subject now and then to the right crowd. The Republicans are much interested in Weaver's Southern trip. They want him to do all his mighty works in the South. A Republican in Iowa, returning from a soldier's re-union, said: "I know Weaver, I am glad he has gone South. He is a smooth, slick rascal. A bigger liar never lived. He went over Iowa deceiving the farmers and sold our party all to pieces." He was very bitter against the General, but thought it well enough for him to go South and stay, especially as he could not make things worse. I have been asked a great deal about our new constitution, and it is gratifying to find that everybody approves it when it is explained. And it is gratifying too, to find that the impression is general now, that the South is on the eve of a great development which will rival, if not outstrip the miracle of Western development. In this case, thinking so will go a long ways toward making it so, and the future of the South will be helped greatly by the almost universal feeling that Secretary Elkins said a wise thing the other day when he said "The South must be trusted to regulate the suffrage for herself."

J. B. GAMBRELL.

The Money War of Thirty-Four.

Col. Willis Brewer, writing of the past history of this country, gives the following reminder:

"For ten years the war over money raged, evolving the fierce commotions of 1833 and 1837. The present agitation is, so far a mere skirmish when compared to those desperate struggles. All the actors in those scenes and their animated followers have passed from earth. But the earth is still here. The sun yet makes dust and the grass yet grows green. The shadows come and go! the winds sport with the boughs; flowers bloom as they did in Eden; the grain tosses its plumes of golden promise; and the streams yet sing on their journey to the sea. Perhaps it will be like this after our own fever'sh time. At least the eloquent triumvirate, Clay and Webster and Calhoun lived to see that their forebodings of 1834 were "words, words, words." I believe if we all had a good, fat office things would go on better in this country.

Albany Argus: During the fifteen years of the low tariff era—from 1846 to 1860—there were but seventy-four strikes reported in an official way. During the fifteen years from 1878 to 1892 there have been over 6,000 strikes, involving a very large portion of the entire body of workingmen in the United States.

There is one farmer in Pickens who has on hand one bale of cotton of the crop of 1890 and fourteen bales of the crop of 1891. He is out of debt and says he will never sell his cotton until he needs the money, unless he can get a better price. He has gone into win, and here is good luck to the man who has the courage to face the combined cotton producers of the South. The fact that he makes cotton a surplus crop is to be commended: his policy of holdings would be good, if his competitors were not each year increasing the supply on hand, which has to be held by some one, either for a better or lower price. But a planter in Pickens has as much right to hold his crop for an advance as the speculator.

A Startling Statement.

(Union Springs Herald.)

One of our most prominent business men was in the Herald office Tuesday, and in talking over the financial situation made the startling statement that at the present crisis $10 would pay debts to the amount of a thousand dollars. He said that the trouble is largely due to the fact that the people are holding on to what money they have. Thus a man may get hold of a ten dollar bill and instead of paying a debt of ten dollars he will put the money in his pocket and wait. So there may be a hundred men owing a debt of ten dollars each. If number one would take the money out of his pocket and pay number two, the latter might pay number three, and so on until every one of the hundred men had paid his debt of ten dollars, aggregating in the whole one thousand dollars. But so long as the one man keeps the money in his pocket, ninety-nine other men have to be cramped with a debt they cannot pay. This hoarding of money and its effect upon trade is more plainly seen if you multiply the ten dollars by ten in the case above supposed. In these hard times be more prompt than ever to pay your debts.

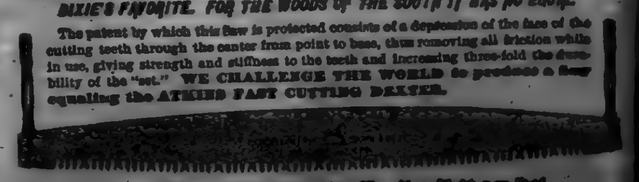
Atkins' Patent Concave Tooth Dexter.

DIXIE'S FAVORITE. FOR THE WOODS OF THE SOUTH IT HAS NO EQUAL.



The patent by which this Saw is protected consists of a depression of the face of the cutting teeth through the center from point to base, thus removing all friction while in use, giving strength and stiffness to the teeth and increasing three-fold the durability of the "set." WE CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a Saw equaling the ATKINS FAST CUTTING DEXTER.

PRICE: {Silver Steel, Including Handles, $1.00 per foot. Special Steel, Without Handles, .70 per foot.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The large demand for the ATKINS CONCAVE TOOTH DEXTER Saw has led competitors to make inferior Saws which they claim "as good as the Dexter." These imitation Saws are made from a lower grade of steel, inferior workmanship, and without the patent concave tooth.

Ask your hardware dealer for the "ATKINS DEXTER" and take no other. If the dealer will not order it for you, remit amount with order direct to us.

The Arch Enemy of Labor.

The following information is sent out by the N. Y. Typographical Union and Labor Bureau for dissemination:

Now read the record of Whitelaw Reid's dealings with organized labor, as represented by Typographical Union No. 6, and the testimony in proof of the charge that he is the arch foe of every movement intended to improve the condition of workingmen.

In June, 1877, soon after Whitelaw Reid had so worked his schemes as to be in full control of the Tribune, he had printed and posted in the composing room a "Memorandum" which ordered:

First—A reduction of about twenty-five per cent. in the price of composition.

Second—A refusal to pay for time lost during working hours through failure of the office to furnish "copy."

Third—That the management should have the right to call out preferred matter and have it set by the hour.

The operation of the last three clauses is the notice meant, with the twenty-five per cent. reduction in the price of composition, a difference of more than forty per cent. in the earnings of the compositors. The whole force, eighty-one compositors, joined in signing a reply to the "Memorandum," in which they said:

"We have deliberately and dispassionately considered the four propositions submitted to us, and have decided that we cannot accede to any of them. Declining your propositions, we hereby tender our resignations, to take effect immediately."

Reid then issued the following boycott against all Union printers:

"It is expressly ordered under no circumstances, and at no time, shall any member of Typographical Union No. 6, or of any Printer's Trade Union, or any one known to be in sympathy with such organization, be employed in the Tribune composing or proof rooms; and, especially, that no man whose signature was attached to the paper hereto appended (the eighty-one referred to in the foregoing) shall ever again, under any pretext, be employed in any capacity in the Tribune composing room, or permitted to enter it."

The Tribune fought fiercely the movement for the abolition of the Contract System of employing convict labor in New York, a system which has brought about such disasters as those in Tennessee. The paper opposes the adoption by congress of the law prohibiting the importation of foreign labor under contract. During the eight-hour strikes of 1886 Reid published editorial after editorial denouncing the the strikers as anarchists.

The country was never more happy and prosperous, since the war, than under the administration of Grover Cleveland. Our future prosperity depends upon his election. His defeat would be a national calamity. We cannot afford to waste our energies and votes upon a man whose sole recommendation is a chronic office-seeker and disturber of the peace. CLEVELAND'S ACCEPTANCE

Of the Democratic Nomination for President of the United States.

Party Reform Paramount—His Views on Financial and Other Questions.

New York, September 20.—The following is the letter of Grover Cleveland accepting the nomination as the Democratic candidate for president of the United States:

To Hon. William L. Wilson and Others, Committee—Gentlemen: In responding to your formal notification of my nomination to the presidency by the national democracy, I hope I may be permitted to say at the outset that continued reflection and observation have confirmed in me my adherence to opinions which I have heretofore plainly and publicly declared, touching the questions involved in the canvass. This is a time, above all others, when these questions should be considered in the light afforded by the sober apprehension of principles upon which our government is based and a clear understanding of the relation it bears to the people for whose benefit it was created. We shall thus be supplied with a test by which the value of any proposition relating to the maintenance and administration of our government can be ascertained, and by which the justice and honesty of every political question can be judged. If doctrines or theories are presented which do not satisfy this test loyal Americanism must pronounce them false and mischievous. The protection of the people in the exclusive use and enjoyment of their property and earnings concededly constitutes the especial purpose and mission of our free government. This design is so interwoven with the structure of our plan of rule that a failure to protect a citizen in such use or enjoyment or their justifiable diminution by the government itself is a betrayal of the people's trust.

Tariff Reform.

We have, however, undertaken to build a great nation upon a plan especially our own. To maintain it and to furnish, through its agency, means for the accomplishment of national objects, the American people are willing, through federal taxation, to surrender a part of their earnings and income. Tariff legislation presents a familiar form of federal taxation. Such legislation results as surely in a tax upon the daily life of our people as the tribute paid directly into the hand of the taxgatherer. We feel the burden of these tariff taxes too palpably to be persuaded by any sophistry that they do not exist, as they are paid by foreigners. Such taxes representing a diminution of the property rights of the people are only justifiable when laid and collected for the purpose of maintaining our government and furnishing means for the accomplishment of its legitimate purposes and functions. This is taxation under the operation of a tariff for revenue. It accords with the professions of American free institutions, and its justice and honesty answer the test supplied by a correct appreciation of the principles upon which these institutions rest. This theory of tariff legislation manifestly enjoins strict economy in public expenditures and their limitation to legitimate public uses, inasmuch as it prohibits absolute extortion and exaction, by way of taxation, from the substance of the people beyond the necessities of a careful and proper administration of the government.

Opposed to this theory, the dogma is now boldly presented that tariff taxation is justifiable for the express purpose and intent of thereby promoting especial interests and enterprises. Such a proposition is so clearly contrary to the spirit of our constitution and so directly encourages disturbance by selfishness and greed of patriotic sentiment that its statement would rudely shock our people, if they had not already been insidiously allured from the safe landmark of principle. Never has an honest desire for national growth, patriotic devotion to country and sincere regard for those who toil, been so betrayed by the support of a pernicious doctrine. In its behalf, the plea that our infant industries should be fostered, did service until discredited by our stalwart growth; then followed the exigencies of a terrible war which made our people heedless of opportunities for the ulterior schemes afforded by their willing and patriotic payment of unprecedented tribute; and now, after a long period of peace, when our overburdened countrymen ask for relief and restoration to the fuller enjoyment of their incomes and earnings, they are met by the claim that tariff taxation for the sake of protection is an American system, the continuance of which is necessary in order that high wages may be paid to our workingmen and a home market be provided for our farm products. These pretenses should no longer deceive. Truth is such that the system is directly antagonized by every sentiment of justice and fairness, of which Americans are pre-eminently proud. It is also true that while our people defend themselves against the harder home life, which such tariff taxation decrees, the workingman, suffering from the laperations and employment of pauper labor instigated by his protectionist friends and seeking security for his interests in organized cooperation, still waits for a division of the advantages secured to his employer under the cover of generous solicitude for his wages, while the farmer is learning that the prices of his products are fixed in foreign markets, where he enters from competition invited and built up by the system he is asked to support. The struggle for unearned advantage at the doors of the government tramples on the rights of those who patiently rely upon the assurance of American equality. Every governmental concession to clamorous favorites invites corruption in political affairs by encouraging the expenditure of money to debauch suffrage in support of a policy directly favorable to private and selfish gain. This in the end must wreak strangle patriotism and weaken popular confidence in the rectitude of republican institutions. Though the subject of tariff legislation involves the question of markets; it also involves the question of morals.

We cannot with impunity permit injustice to infect the spirit of right and equity, which is the life of our republic, and we shall fail to reach our national destiny if greed and selfishness lead the way. Recognising these truths, the national democracy will seek, by the application of just and sound principles, to equalize to our people the blessings duo them from the government they support, to promote among our countrymen a closer community of interests, cemented by patriotism and national pride, and to point out a fair field, where prosperous and diversified American enterprise may grow and thrive in the wholesome atmosphere of American industry, ingenuity and intelligence. Tariff reform is still our purpose.

We oppose the theory that tariff laws must be passed having for their object the granting of discriminating and unfair governmental aid to private ventures. We wage no exterminating war against any American interests. We believe a readjustment can be accomplished in accordance with the principles we profess without disaster or demolition. We believe that the advantages of free raw materials should be accorded to our manufacturers, and we contemplate a fair and careful distribution of necessary tariff burdens, rather than the precipitation of free trade.

We anticipate with calmness the misrepresentation of our motives and purposes, instigated by a selfishness which seeks to hold in unrelenting grasp its unfair advantage under the present tariff laws. We will rely upon the intelligence of our fellow countrymen to reject the charge that the party comprising a majority of our people is planning the destruction or injury of American interests, and we know they cannot be frightened by the specter of impossible free trade. The administration and management of our government depend upon the popular will. Federal power is the instrument of that will—not its master. Therefore the attempt of the opponents of democracy to interfere with and control the suffrage of states through federal agencies, develops a design which no explanation can mitigate, to reverse fundamental and safe relations between the people and their government. Such an attempt cannot fail to be regarded by thoughtful men as a proof of a bold determination to secure the ascendency of a discredited party in reckless disregard of a free expression of the popular will. To resist such a scheme is an impulse of the democracy. At all times and in all places we trust the people. As earnest the disposition to force the way to federal power, we present to them as our claim to their confidence and support, a steady championship of their rights.

The Silver and Gold.

The people are entitled to sound and honest money, abundantly sufficient in volume to supply their business needs. But whatever may be the form of the people's currency, national or state—whether gold, silver or paper—it should be so regulated and guarded by governmental action or by wise and careful laws, that no one can be deluded as to the certainty and stability of its value. Every dollar put into the hands of the people should be of the same intrinsic value or purchasing power. With this condition absolutely guaranteed, both gold and silver can be safely utilized, upon equal terms in the adjustment of our currency. In dealing with this subject no selfish scheme should be allowed to interfere and no doubtful experiment should be attempted. The wants of our people, arising from a deficiency or imperfect distribution of money circulation, ought to be fully and honestly recognized and efficiently remedied. It should, however, be constantly remembered that the inconvenience or loss that might arise from such a situation, can be much easier borne than the universal distress which must follow discredited currency.

Civil Service Reform.

Public officials are agents of the people. It is, therefore, their duty to secure for those whom they represent the best and most efficient performance of public work. This plainly can best be accomplished by regarding ascertained fitness in the selection of government employees. These considerations alone are a sufficient justification for an honest adherence to the letter and spirit of civil service reform. There are, however, other features of this plan which abundantly commend it. Through its operation worthy merit in every station and condition of American life is recognized in the distribution of public employment, while its application tends to raise the standard of political activity from spoils plotting and unthinking party agitation to the advocacy of party principles by reason and argument.

The Pension Roll.

The American people are generous and grateful, and they have impressed these characteristics upon their government. Therefore, all patriotic and just citizens must commend liberal consideration for our worthy veteran soldiers and for the families of those who have died. No complaint should be made of the amount of public money paid to those actually disabled or made dependent by reason of army service. But our pension roll should be a roll of honor, uncontaminated by ill desert and invitated by demagogic use. This is due to those whose worthy names adorn the roll, and to all our people who delight to honor the brave and true. It is also due to those who, in years to come, should be allowed to hear, reverently and lovingly, the story of American patriotism and fortitude, illustrated by our pension roll. Preferences accorded to veteran soldiers in public employment should be secured to them honestly and without evasion, and when capable and worthy, their claim to the helpful regard and gratitude of their countrymen should be ungrudgingly acknowledged.

Against Sumptuary Laws.

Assurances to the people of the utmost individual liberty consistent with peace and good order is a cardinal principle of our government. This gives no sanction to vexatious sumptuary laws which unnecessarily interfere with such habits and customs of our people as are not offensive to the just moral sense and not inconsistent with good citizenship and the public welfare. Such a principle requires that the line between subjects which are properly within governmental control and those which are more fittingly left to parental regulations, could be carefully kept in view. An enforced education, wisely deemed proper preparation for citizenship, should not involve the impairment of wholesome parental authority nor do violence to the household of science. Paternalism in the government finds no approval in the creed of democracy. It is a symptom of misrule, whether it is manifested in authorized gifts or by an unwarranted control of personal and family affairs. Our people, still cherishing the feeling of human fellowship which belonged to our beginning as a nation, require their government to express for them their sympathy with all those who are oppressed under any rule less free than ours. The generous hospitality, which is one of the most prominent of our national characteristics, prompts us to welcome the worthy and industrious of all lands, to homes and citizenship among us. This hospitable sentiment is not violated, however, by careful and reasonable regulations for the protection of public health, nor does it justify the reception of immigrants who have no appreciation of our institutions and whose presence among us is a menace to good peace and good order.

The importance of the construction of the Nicaragua ship canal, as means of promoting commerce between our states and with foreign countries, and also a contribution by Americans to enterprises which advance the interests of the world of civilization, should commend the project to the government's approval and endorsement.

Our countrymen not only expect from those who represent them in public places a sedulous care for things which are directly and palpably related to their material interests, but they also fully appreciate the value of cultivating our national pride and maintaining our national honor. Both their material interests and their national pride and honor are involved in the success of the Columbian exposition, and they will not be inclined to condone any neglect of effort on the part of their government to insure in the grandeur of this event a fitting exhibit of American growth and greatness, and a splendid demonstration of American patriotism.

In an imperfect and incomplete manner I have thus endeavored to state some of the things which accord with the creed and intentions of the party to which I have given my life-long allegiance. My attempt has not been to instruct my countrymen nor my party, but to remind both that democratic doctrine lies near the principles of our government and tends to promote the people's good.

I am willing to be accused of addressing my countrymen upon trite tonics in a homely fashion, for I believe that important truths are found on the surface of thought, and that they should be stated in direct and simple terms. Though much is left unwritten, my record as a public servant leaves no excuse for misunderstanding my belief and position on the questions which are now presented to the voters of the land for their decision. Called for a third time to represent the party of my choice in the contest for the supremacy of democratic principles, my grateful appreciation of its confidence, less than ever, effaces the solemn sense of my responsibility. If the action of the convention you represent shall be endorsed by the suffrages of my countrymen, I will assume the duties of the great office for which I have been nominated knowing full well its labors and perplexities, and with humble reliance upon the divine being, infinite in power to aid, and constant in watchful care over our favored nation. Yours very truly,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

DEATH ON THE RAIL.

A Disastrous Wreck on the Western Railway of Alabama.

A special from Opelika, Ala., says: A terrible wreck occurred on the Western Railway of Alabama at 1:54 o'clock Tuesday morning at a little trestle one mile from Opelika. Passenger train No. 51, due in Atlanta, Ga. at 6:30, collided with two loose freight cars, running at a speed of 40 miles an hour. The engine, tender, baggage and mail cars and passenger coach, together with the two loose freight cars, which were loaded with merchandise, jumped the track and tumbled over a steep embankment into the stream below.

Mr. Lew Willis, engineer, and Tom Willis, fireman, were killed. Those injured were: Mr. R. L. Harrison, baggagemaster; J. L. McLean, of Atlanta, passenger; Conductor Zack Martin, Atlanta; Jim Crawford, of Opelika, passenger; Edgar L. Landrum, of Atlanta, mail clerk; James Carter, colored, of Opelika, mail clerk. Some of these were seriously injured. There were several others who received slight wounds.

CAUSE OF THE ACCIDENT.

It is hard to get at the exact cause of the disaster. Several contradictory reports are in circulation, the most reliable and authentic of which is that Conductor Woodal was making up a freight train in the yards at Opelika and switched ten cars on a side track near the compress. He then went to deliver another car to the Columbus and Western road, at the upper end of the track, and by some means

In some way two of the cars started on a down grade and reached the mainline and started down a grade at a rapid rate. They met the passenger train just as it was in the act of reaching the little trestle with the above result.

DASHED TO DEATH.

Four Unfortunate Miners Hurled Two Hundred Feet Down a Shaft.

Four men fell 200 feet down a shaft in Eureka mines in Bessemer, Mich., township Sunday and were killed. They were: F. Reader, J. Leord, Julius McKaley and John Readom. Two of them are married and leave families. Four men with two others employed in the mines started to ride up the skip. When 200 feet from the bottom the skip dumped, four of the occupants being hurled to the bottom of the shaft, where they were crushed to death. It was contrary to orders for the men to ride in skips and the coroner's jury, therefore, exhonerated the company from blame.

TELEGRAPHIC GLEANINGS.

The News of the World Condensed Into Pithy and Pointed Paragraphs.

Interesting and Instructive to All Classes of Readers.

A news special of Thursday says: The Western Coal Sale Agents have adjourned at New York without making any change in prices and without taking any action regarding October tonnage.

A New York dispatch says: The body of Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore arrived at the Grand Central depot Tuesday morning. Mrs. Gilmore has agreed to a military funeral for her husband.

San Diego celebrated the 360th anniversary of San Diego bay Wednesday. Nearly all business houses and many private residences were tastefully decorated in honor of Cabrillo celebration.

A New York dispatch of Thursday says: It is reported that mills controlled by the paper trust, of which Warner Miller is president, will be closed next week until the middle of November, rendering idle about 50,000 men throughout the country.

The westbound express on the Vandalia line due at St. Louis at 7:45 p. m. Tuesday evening, dashed into a hand car on which were six section men and hurled it from the track. Three of the men were instantly killed and others seriously injured.

A Chicago dispatch says: The grand jury Wednesday afternoon decided to indict M. C. Donald, a widely known sport for bribery. The alleged bribery was the payment of $300 to Justice of the Peace Charles W. Woodman to influence a decision in favor of the Garfield park race track cases.

The liberals of the city of London, Thursday, selected Stewart Knill for lord mayor. There were six candidates. When Knill's name was mentioned it was received with loud cheering. Councilor Moore protested against the selection of Knill because he was a Roman Catholic. The protest was received with mingled hissing and cheering.

A Washington Special says: Under the authority conferred by the last naval appropriation bill, providing for the construction of two new vessels for the navy—one seagoing battle ship of 9,000 tons displacement and one armored cruiser of 8,000 tons displacement—proposals were issued Wednesday, by the department for their construction.

The Lima car works at Columbus, O., burned Wednesday with the exception of the foundry and foundry offices. Loss, $50,000; insurance, $40,000. Two hundred and ten cars were destroyed. The gross loss is estimated at $100,000. Three union tank line cars, loaded with oil, exploded, shaking the town and giving rise to the rumor that an explosion of nitro glycerine had occured.

The People's party convention at Lansing, Mich., Wednesday afternoon, nominated Judge William Newton, of Flint, for Justice of the supreme court. Judge Newton had previously received the nomination from the democrats and will probably be appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Justice Morse, democratic candidate for governor.

In the police court at Albany, N. Y., Thursday morning an examination into the matter of the alleged burning of public records by Labor Commissioner Peck and his stenographer was to have proceeded. At 10 o'clock, the hour set for the case to go on, the court was informed that the counsel for defendants, was out of town, and the case was adjourned until October 7.

The large factory of the Singer Sewing Machine Company at Elisabeth, N. J., was damaged by fire Wednesday morning to the amount of between three or four hundred thousand dollars. About seven hundred men are deprived of employment, but the factory is not entirely closed. The main part of the same factory was destroyed a year ago. The origin of both fires remains a mystery.

A special of Wednesday from St. Louis states that there is every probability that the differences between the Missouri Pacific and the telegraphers employed by that road will be amicably settled. A committee of operators has been in consultation with General Manager Smith for two days. The latter says there is not the slightest doubt but that everything will be agreeably settled in a few days.

Three small children—Charles Brown, George and John Bogart, were choked to death at Bordenton, N. J. Tuesday. The deed was done at the residence of Bogart, by the mother of Charles Brown. The woman is believed to be insane. After killing the children she went to Marshal Hall and told him that he would find three dead babies in the house on Chestnut street. She admitted that she had killed the children, but said she could not tell why she did it.

A special dispatch from Sioux Falls says: At 2 o'clock Thursday morning, when the Minnesota democratic state central committee broke up, they had a stormy time over the fusion question, but the motion to delegate the power of the committee, so far as the fusion was concerned, to the executive board, was carried by a vote of 14 to 8. It was proposed to trade the democratic electoral ticket for state auditor and treasurer. The executive board of the state democratic committee is composed of nine members, all fusionists.

The supreme court at Madison, Wis., rendered a decision Tuesday morning in the second gerrymander case. It holds that the court has jurisdiction in the case and overthrows the demurrer of Senator Vilas, based on the claim that the suit should have been brought by the attorney general instead of by the petitioner, Lamb. It holds that Lamb is entitled to bring the suit, and that the bill of the plaintiff contains sufficient ground for action. This is practically an overthrow of the last gerrymander. The defense will answer the bill of the plaintiff at once.

The Fayerwether Bequest.

One-fifth of the Fayerwether bequest of $100,000 to the University of Virginia has been appropriated to athletics and will be expended in erecting a new gymnasium, which will have all the modern conveniences in the way of apparatus, also a swimming pool, running track and baseball diamond. Great interest is being manifested in athletics.

COMPELLING.

He—"You do not love me; then farewell forever. I shall commit suicide tonight."

She—"Don't, George. Beam though papa will not let me marry you, perhaps he will lend you a little money."

COTTON CROP OUTLOOK.

Reports of the Condition of the Staple in Several States.

A news special of Saturday from Austin, Texas, says, regarding the cotton outlook: The cotton crop situation in this section has changed since the last report. Many planters who calculated on half of a bale to the acre now say they will hardly make a third of a bale. Most of the cotton has been effected by worms and excess of rains during the last few months.

IN ALABAMA.

A dispatch from Anniston, Ala, says: The outlook for cotton in this section is very gloomy and planters are discouraged. Rust has attacked the plant and the crop is placed by conservative estimates at 30 per cent below the average. Young bolls are either falling off or opening prematurely, and picking will be completed early.

REPORT FROM ARKANSAS.

A special from Morrilton, Ark., says: Men who have made a careful examination say that in the lowlands of this section cotton is growing all to stalk and no bolls are being formed, while in some localities the army worm is stripping the stalk of everything except the bolls.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Reports from Charleston say: Terrible rains the past week throughout the entire state have caused almost incalculable damage to the cotton crop. The rainfall since September 1st in this section has been nearly twelve inches. Drouth and rust are playing havoc with the crop and it looks as if estimates must be reduced at least 30 per cent from those formed in July.

TWO-THIRDS IN VIRGINIA.

Cotton production in Virginia is confined to few counties. The acreage this year has been reduced 25 per cent. The plant is small and backward. With a late autumn it may make two-thirds of a crop.

TENNESSEE'S CROP.

Cotton authorities state that the Tennessee cotton crop will fall short of last year's total about 10 per cent, provided the season continues as at present for picking.

IN GEORGIA.

In Georgia the largest grain crop since the war has been raised this year, consequently cotton acreage has been materially reduced. The reduction conservative estimates place at from 20 to 30 per cent. In the Augusta cotton district 20 per cent is the reduction as compared with the last crop. Forty per cent less of fertilizers has been used than last year.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK.

Some Improvement Noted for the Past Week.

Dun & Co.'s review for past week says: The alarm about cholera has vanished and trade in every direction shows all the improvement that was expected. The south is a little dull because cotton is low in price and late, but a little improvement has been seen during the past week. The volume of business continues larger than last year's, although unprecedented crops then made it much greater than in any previous year. The unavoidable conclusions that in the distribution of manufactured products, the increase this year has been extraordinary. Collections are exceptionally good on the whole and although money is in active and increasing demand at nearly all points, the supply is ample for all legitimate necessities. Gold exports have ceased, foreign exchange has declined, and the money market is at present without disturbing features.

Wheat has covered 1 3 8 cents for the extremely low price of a week ago, but sales at New York have been 6,000,000 bushels.

Speculation in cotton has been large, sales reaching 780,000 bales, and the price has been advanced 8-16 by the covering of short sales. The crop is late, and the movement thus far much behind last year. At Baltimore, business is satisfactory, though quiet with the south, but exceedingly good in shoes, lumber and cattle.

At Memphis, trade is improving though of small volume, and at New Orleans cotton is in better demand and sugar strong and active. Pig iron is firmer, some Alabama furnaces advancing the price 25 cents, but bar iron is slightly easier, some slackening is seen in plates, and on the whole, the prospects for finished products is not quite as favorable. Coal is active in the retail trade, and shipments for the year show an increase of 6 per cent, but it is freely offered by the outsiders at 15 to 40 cents below the scheduled prices, and actual sales in August by Lehigh Valley average 24 cents below the schedule. The demand for men's fall woolens is surprisingly large, old stocks being rapidly cleared off, and it has been a big season for cloaking, while in dress goods the the trade is very heavy. Cotton goods are full of activity, some qualities having advanced. Prints are in pressing demand, and print cloths quoted at 3½ cents for 64's. In wool, increasing actively is seen, sales far exceeding last year's and carpet wools are especially firm and scarce.

Business failures throughout the country, during the last seven days as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., number 188, against 210 last year.

A STATUE UNVEILED.

Greenville, S. C., Honors the Heroes of the Lost Cause.

A Greenville, S. C. dispatch says: After two postponements on account of bad weather, the monument to the confederate dead of this city and county was unveiled before an immense audience at 12 o'clock Tuesday. The monument stands on upper Main street between North and College streets. The design is a handsome and graceful one representing a confederate soldier in full uniform and equipments, standing at parade rest and facing the south. The figure is ten feet high and rests on a pedestal twenty feet in height. The whole is of white marble. It was erected by the Ladies' Memorial Association of Greenville, who have been working for it for nearly twenty years.

A notable feature of the occasion was the appearance of the old flag of the Fourth South Carolina volunteers. As the veil was pulled aside on a rope stretched across the street the old flag was suddenly drawn until the statue on the monument was in its shadow. It was greeted with a yell by the large crowd of veterans present. This flag was presented by some Virginia ladies to the Fourth South Carolina regiment, and was carried by them through the war.

Professor Gilmore Dead.

Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, the world-renowned proprietor, manager and leader of the band bearing his name, died Saturday evening at St. Louis, of heart disease. Professor Gilmore was sixty-three years of age. His remains will be taken to New York city for interment.

Burning Women in the Veil.

The western custom of men kissing in society except by the wife's aide. The man who "runs" the theatre are seldom seen at the parties, which are managed by their unmarried clerks. In the old country days a man and wife had a social individuality; but when a man attends a social gathering in the west he is expected to seat himself beside his wife and behave as well as he can, to the end that people may understand that he is not only fond of the women at his home, but is company as well.

If a married man should attend a western social affair without his wife he would be very apt to be approached by a married woman who would ask him in an audible whisper, "Where is your wife?" and there would be a certain something in the woman's tone indicating that he ought to be ashamed of himself for being there under such circumstances. I once knew a gay young husband to exhibit a paper, signed by his wife, to the effect that he was at the party alone with her knowledge and consent.—E. W. Howe in Forum.

The Sultan's Poisoner.

Among the Turks the usual method of trying and punishing a poisoner is to make him drink his own concoction, if any can be found. Otherwise the accused is half strangled or beaten into a confession. A poisoner who survives the preliminary ordeals, but is convicted nevertheless, is tortured to death by being spread eagled in the heat of the sun. It is said that up to a recent period the sultan's list of palace employees included a Turkish doctor, expert in poisons, whose duties were not confined to attending the sick and tasting the sultans food. It has been known in Constantinople that the skill of the sultan's poison expert was called into service whenever his master wished to get rid of some one who had offended but who had been guilty of an open violation of the sultan's wishes or decrees. The present sultan, Abdul Hamid, among other reforms, has dispensed with the court poisoner.—Pittsburg Leader.

The Way to Catch a Porcupine.

The porcupine climbs the tree as readily as a squirrel would, provided you don't slip up and cut his tail off while he is going up. Somehow or other he can't climb the tree without his tail, nor he won't come down without it. If you catch one of these porcupines climbing a tree and chop his tail off he will stop right where he is, and will stay there until he starves to death, unless he is taken away.—Philadelphia Times.

The Phonograph in a Hen Coop.

M. du Haudray, following the method of Professor Garnier's studies of the Simian language, has carried his phonograph into the henroop. He places it in one henhouse where the "family" are at home, and when the receiver has been cackled into for a half an hour it is taken away and made to repeat all the gossip in a neighboring henroop. The results of the experiments are said to be marvelous.—New York Journal.

A Far-Seeing Boy.

First Boy—"Why didn't you get a Safety like mine?"

Second Boy—"Huh! Wouldn't have a Safety, that's why."

To Sell at Double Price.

The souvenir half dollars to be issued in support of the World's Columbian exposition are to be sold at the rate of one dollar for each of the coins. The board of directors has decided to sell the souvenirs direct to the public instead of placing the entire issue in the hands of some syndicate.

Easy Enough Apparently.

Miss Bagley—Yes; but how you must forgive and forget.

Miss Fareway—Oh, I can forgive, but it's not so easy to forget.

Miss Bagley—Nonsense! I can tell you a hundred things I've forgotten.—London Tit-Bits.

A Thin Querest.

Sunday School Superintendent—Tommy, can you tell me why the lions didn't eat Daniel when he was in their den?

Tommy—I guess it must er b'en, mister, 'cause he was like you and hadn't any meat on him.—Boston Courier.

Breathe There a Man

Who can inhale malaria-breading air with impunity? No, not unless he be fortified against its insidious poison with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Then, indeed, is he defended. Not only is this medicine most thorough as a bulwark against chills and fever and bilious remittent, but it thoroughly relieves dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, biliousness, nervousness and kidney trouble.

A historic collection of railway tickets will be exhibited at the World's fair.

Many persons are broken down from overwork or household cares. Brown's Iron Bitters rebuilds the system, aids digestion, removes excess of bile, and cures malaria. A splendid tonic for women and children.

A Cholera Cure.

General Jordan of the Albany Journal says: "A tablespoonful of chloroform in about four times as much water is an infallible cure for cholera. A doctor who had lived in Mobile, Ala., and had great success in curing people during a cholera epidemic there, told me about it. When, in the Cuban revolution, I went to Cuba to help organize the insurgent army, I had a chance to try the remedy, for a cholera epidemic broke out among the troops. My first experiment was on a negro, who was in the last stages. I cured him and hundreds after him. When we marched the officers carried bottles of chloroform, and if a man fell out sick with the cholera, the remedy was applied, and he was able to resume his place. I have seen men lying by the roadside in a state of collapse, almost dead. An officer would ride up, dismount, and apply the remedy, and before the column had passed the man would be in the ranks again."

Something of Vital Importance.

Do you know that the state of the blood running in your veins is the cause of your sickness or your health? This is a most important matter, although overlooked by people who show a great deal of good sense otherwise. Your blood has to be kept pure, or your whole system gradually becomes a wreck. It costs very little to check disease and correct the state of the blood if the matter is taken up in time; but it costs a great deal, and is often impossible, if taken up after disease has gained a foothold.

If you are troubled with Syphilis, Itch, Humors, Swellings, Skin Disease, Rheumatism, Pimples, Scrofula, Malaria, Catarrh, Fevers, Liver and Kidney diseases, Old Sores, Eruptions, or any other disorders resulting from impure blood, write at once to Dr. B. C. Parsons, Savannah, Ga. His Blood Purifier is a wonderful remedy, and only costs one dollar per bottle. Send 2c stamp for pamphlet containing a lot of private and valuable information. "Keeping Company."

Sweet homely phrase, so often spoke
Among the kinder country folk.

When youthful love they smile to see—
"These two are 'keeping company.'"

In fuller and in higher sense,
Through years of rich experience,

Dear love, 'tis true of you and me—
We've kept each other company.

In joy we've sought each other's eyes
To share the gladness and surprise.

In pain, life's utmost test of ill,
Our hearts have clung together still.

In absence—word with anguish fraught—
We have kept company in thought,

And learned that leagues of distance may
Serve but to spur love on its way.

In death—I pause with bated breath
Before the mystery of death.

Yet love is great! I seem to know
That where thou goest I shall go;

And in God's great eternity
Our souls shall still keep company.

A SHARK IN THE SURF.

BY LIEUT.-COLONEL THORNDIKE.

A wild sea was running high in the open harbor of Madras. The sea always runs high there, and the last two miles must always be made in surf boats. The morning when the steamship Tigress dropped anchor and ran up her signal for the boats, great angry waves were blowing along before a fresh monsoon, and even the surf boats found it hard to keep dry.

Among our passengers from Ceylon for Madras we had a dapper young fellow, who was as good a judge of pearls as I ever saw. He had been to Ceylon buying for an English house, and was now on his way to the Persian Gulf to complete his stock. He was to leave us at Madras and go overland to Bombay.

He knew how to buy pearls, but he did not know how to take care of them. Before he had been on board a day he had told me all about his luck in Ceylon and had showed me his entire assortment. One of the pearls was simply gorgeous. Had it not been for a faint dot of blue upon one side it would have been worth a small fortune.

He was delighted with my appreciation and enjoyment of the stones, and he showed me his treasures several times during the short voyage. Twice he left me alone with them. It was not, however, through any particular confidence in me, for I suspect he made quite as free with his treasures among several of the passengers. One was a Parsee, who was forever going between Ceylon and Madras; for what purpose I could never discover, though I had met him several times.

Whatever else he was I was sure that the Parsee was a great rascal and was surprised and sorry for the young pearl man to find him making a most intimate friend of the fellow.

Together they stepped down the ladder to enter a surf-boat as we neared Madras. The young man went down first with his case of precious pearls in his hand. The Parsee was stepping into the boat, when he paused and spoke to its black captain.

"I have forgotten something," he said, turning to the younger man. "I must come by another boat. I will meet you at the hotel."

He gave the surf-boat a push with his foot and began to climb the ladder.

A sailor who was standing by me muttered:

"There's a shark in the surf yonder." But instead of looking away over the water he looked directly down upon the Parsee and then at the young pearl man.

Of course there was a shark in the surf. There are always sharks in that surf, but to me the sailor's sentence meant something more than that.

The Parsee already poised behind the saloon-house, stood there two or three minutes, then left the steamer by another boat. My curiosity was thoroughly aroused. Glass in hand I watched the two boats, a quarter of a mile apart, still wondering what the sailor meant by a "shark in the surf."

Presently one of the great waves lifted the first surf-boat, but instead of taking the usual advantage of it to dip their oars and pull, I noticed the boatmen sitting like statues. The almost naked fellow standing in the stern, with a long oar to guide the craft, suddenly leaned upon the oar and the boat turned, was caught broadside on the wave and the next instant was capsized. I saw the passenger, with the pearl case still in his hand, plunge head first into the water.

Like so many eels the black boatmen wiggled about in the water till they righted their boat, then clambered over the side and began to bail it out.

The next moment a piercing shriek sounded even as far as our steamer, and to my horror I saw the young fellow's body lifted out of the water not 10 feet from the surf-boat. It made one whirl in the air, disclosing the head of a shark holding it across the back, then sank again.

As the next boat passed the place I saw the Parsee throw something overboard that left a white spot on the water, which remained as long as I watched it, convinced me that it was a buoy of some sort set for some purpose.

A few days later we were anchored in the Hoogly River, off Calcutta.

"I was walking down the principal English thoroughfare when I saw the Parsee emerge from the door of a lapidary. He evidently recognized me, but he turned quickly in the opposite direction and walked away.

"A shark in the surf," I muttered, and with only a vague idea half formed in my mind I entered the shop and inquired of the dealer if he had an assortment of pearls on hand.

"How fortunate!" he exclaimed. "I was never so low as this morning. Pearls are in very great demand. But I have just purchased a large lot of the finest pearls I ever saw. I purchased them very low, for cash, and I can not only give you the first choice of this magnificent collection, but a great bargain beside. They are beauties! Yes."

"Yes," I replied, "they are beauties. Especially this large one with a dot of blue on one side. Too bad that it has the flaw."

I knew then why the Parsee went down to the surf-boat and spoke to the captain, but went ashore by another boat. I knew why he left the white buoy in the water. I knew why he continually journeyed between Ceylon and Madras, and I knew what the sailor meant when he watched him and muttered: "There's a shark in the surf."—[St. Louis Republic.

Hard to Counterfeit.

"The paper money of the United States is the least handsome in the world," said the proprietor of a money exchange. "That is because this government depends entirely upon the intricacy and elaborateness of the designs on its notes and certificates for protection against counterfeiters. In foreign countries, on the other hand, much effort is directed to making their currency beautiful with pictures and arabesques in the classical style. Not only are the results pretty to look at, but they serve their chief purpose better, for any engraver will tell you that real art work on a bill is far more difficult to imitate than any purely mechanical effect, no matter how complicated the latter may be made by the geometric lathe and other devices.

"Most beautiful of all paper notes are those issued in France and Prussia. Here is a pretty Austrian bill for 100 florins, printed in blue ink, with the design mainly composed of two large standing figures of cherubic children and an oval of children's heads. That seems a queer notion from our point of view for the ornamentation of currency, but it is certainly both interesting and handsome. This is a Russian bill for 100 rubles, done in pink and green. Here you have a Scotch note, issued by the British Linen Company, which promises to pay £5 on demand. In Great Britain the privilege of issuing paper money can be obtained by corporations other than banks from the government.

"You will need a magnifying glass to examine this note with. It is Irish. The words 'one pound' are printed across it in big letters, but this broad stripe extending from one end to the other of the document is a curiosity. To the naked eye, even upon scrutiny, it seems to have no significance, but when magnified you will perceive that it is wholly made up of the words 'one pound' in microscopic letters. From the superficial appearance of the Bank of England notes you would suppose that they could be readily imitated by photography or otherwise, inasmuch as their designs consist of very little more than lettering in black that is almost severely simple. But that great financial institution depends altogether upon the water marking of its paper, which is wonderfully elaborate, as you can see by looking at the light through it. This water marking has been imitated, but never with success."—[Washington Star.

Simple Diet in Obesity.

The Journal de la Sante attributes to a medical officer of the French Army the latest "cure" for obesity, which is strangely simple in its carrying out. The form of diet was simply a restriction to one dish at each meal. Irrespective of what that dish might be, and no matter whether the quantity consumed was greater or smaller, it was made to satisfy the desire for food to the full at each meal. No supplementary dishes, such as soups, desserts, or condiments, were allowed; one single dish, and that taken plain, was found to satisfy the appetite much sooner than a variety of dishes, even if the quantity was apparently smaller and on almost an abstemious scale. This regimen was employed also in the case of a lady whose embonpoint threatened too rapid increase, with good results and without any discomfort in the observance of the restrictions. In fact, in one or two instances the reduction of corpulence has seemed to go on too rapidly, and it has been deemed best to take means for restoration, in a measure, of that which has been lost. Under this system, as under most others, adds Popular Science News, the excessive imbibition of liquids has to be forbidden, care being taken not to enforce the abstinence from water, especially to the point where symptoms of circulatory depression arise from insufficiency of volume of blood in the vessels.

Children Must Sleep.

Young people should have more sleep, asserts a German specialist. A healthy infant sleeps most of the time during the first weeks, and in the early years people are disposed to let the children sleep as much as they will. But from six to seven, when school begins, there is a complete change. At the age of ten or eleven the child sleeps only eight or nine hours, when he needs at least ten or eleven, and as he grows older the time of rest is shortened. He believes that up to twenty a youth needs nine hours' sleep and an adult should have eight or nine.—[New York World.

In an Alligator's Jaws.

Richard Burnham, a white boy, 15 years old, has had a very narrow escape from death in the jaws of an alligator. Richard and a half dozen other boys were bathing in Crescent Lake, near Crescent City, Fla. He swam out into deep water 100 feet from the shore line. Suddenly he felt something moving about in the water beneath him. He let his legs down perpendicularly, and was horrified to feel his feet touch the scaly back of an alligator. He was thoroughly frightened, but struck out boldly for the boom of logs near a sawmill.

The alligator came up nearer the surface and made for the boy as he swam along rapidly. Opening his huge jaws, he was about to close them upon the trunk of the boy's body, when Richard made a dive and swam 15 or 20 feet under water in the direction of the logs.

As the boy came to the surface the alligator got his bearings again and gave chase. Richard was nearly winded and the reptile gained on him. When the boy was within three feet of the logs, the reptile closed his big, ugly jaws on the boy's thigh. He was pulled under, and his companions thought he was gone. They yelled for help, but Dick rose to the surface again in about half a minute, the alligator having evidently let go of him in order to get a fresh hold and a better one.

Dick reached for a log and caught it with both hands, the alligator rising up from beneath him as he did so. The boy was weakened from his exertions and by fright, but he held to the log. Before he could get his feet out of water the reptile seized one of Dick's legs in his jaws and began to pull. Dick pulled, too. It was a question of which would pull the harder to win. The animal kept loosening his hold and the grabbing hold of the leg again, and just when the boy was about to fall back into the water, screaming with pain and half dead, some men from the mill appeared upon the scene and rescued him by beating the animal off with clubs.

Richard had over twenty wounds on his leg, one of them very deep. Two hours afterward the alligator was killed not far from the scene of the struggle. It measured 11 feet 3 inches in length.—[New York Sun.

$50,000,000 in Matches.

The oldest and it is said the largest match manufactory in the world is in Sweden. Matches were made there long before the old, roughly trimmed splinter of wood tipped with sulphur was discarded with the tinder boxes, for which they were used. In 25 years the export trade of Sweden in modern matches increased 1,000,000,000 boxes a year, says the Philadelphia Times.

Some of the machines for making matches which we use in these days make 200 revolutions a minute each and turn out about 2,500,000 matches daily. Rather more than five matches per head for the whole population are used daily in the United States. Strange to say, the quality of these Swedish matches, in many cases, is so bad that the state intends to resume the manufacture, and computes that the profits will produce a revenue of $1,000,000.

Altogether there are in Europe about 50,000 factories, and they yearly produce matches valued at $50,000,000.

A Juvenile Retort.

Charley, to his papa, who has just come into the room—Papa, what makes you look so cross?

"Because I heard mamma scold you just now, so you must have been naughty."

"Ha! papa, suppose I spoked cross every time mamma scolds you."—[Chesterfield.

A Chicken-Eating Cow.

Mr. Daniel Bush, near Hounksville, Md., is the owner of a cow that bids fair to rival the bovine in the state of Washington that feeds on hops and yields beer instead of milk, says a Baltimore American special. Mr. Bush's cow, contrary to the natural habit of the genius, has developed carnivorous propensities, and is displaying a fondness for spring chickens as an article of diet. Her owner was, until recently, possessed of a fine lot of the feathered bipeds, which were kept in coops, probably as a measure of protection against the peculiar appetite of the cow.

In spite of this precaution, however, the milk-giving animal recently succeeded in making a feast of a number of the fowls. She accomplished her purpose by breaking the coops with head and horns, and then deliberately devouring the poultry, feathers and all. The first coop attacked contained eleven fine broilers, which were speedily transferred, feathers and all, to the maw of the quadruped, and might have been regarded as a good, square meal for even a hungry cow. But the appetite of Mr. Bush's cow was not easily satisfied, and she promptly demolished another coop and gobbled seven more bipeds.

It is needless to remark that steps were immediately taken to guard the remaining poultry from a similar fate, and since the occurrence related the ruminant animal has been compelled to chew the cud of disappointment and wait another opportunity. Some curious people are anxious to know what effect a diet of spring chicken is likely to have on the lacteal fluid of the animal.

Some of them read the story of the Washington cow eating hops and yielding beer instead of milk, and they imagine that the least Mr. Bush's milker can do, under the circumstances, is to supply him with a first class article of chicken soup.

What Salt Will Do.

For nasal catarrh, make a weak brine of salt and tepid water and snuff up the nose, allowing it to run down the throat. If persistently used it will in a sufficient length of time cure the nasal catarrh.

Common rock salt, dried in the oven and then pulverized, mixed with an equal part of spirits of turpentine. Keep a rag wet constantly with this preparation for twenty-four hours. It will surely cure a felon in that time.

The simplest remedy known for this terrible trying affliction, nervous headache, is a pinch of salt taken on the tongue and allowed to dissolve slowly, followed in about ten minutes with a drink of water. Salt, in its pure state, has virtues not to be scorned, because it is an article within the humblest means.—[Hall's Journal of Health.

Cold Storage.

Cold storage is a preserving process for fruits only so long as they remain under its influence. It has now become so common, and in most instances useful, that its disadvantages are seldom taken into consideration. By the use of ice the small fruits are kept in a fresh condition much longer than they can be by any other method. When taken out, however, and exposed to the warm atmosphere, decay sets in very rapidly. Hence, fruits taken out of cold storage will not endure transportation for long distances as well, or remain palatable when exposed for sale as well as when they were fresh picked.—[New York World.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

He Flies Himself Once Again to the "Wild and Wooly" West.

He Has Some Very Interesting Things to Say on the Eve of His Departure.

By the time this reaches your readers I will be in the Lone Star State again. It is no fun for me to leave home for a month, but I like Texas and am going back to perform my promises and see the bright side of her country and her people. We always see the bright side when we go visiting. When people come visiting us at our house we are on our best behavior and everything is slick and lovely, and when they go home they tell everybody what a delightful time they had and what a charming family and what good cooking and what good beds to sleep on, and somebody tells us what they said and that pleases us and makes us all so loving as a mutual admiration society.

But it won't do for folks to stay too long anywhere, for it is impossible for us to keep the bright side in view more than a few days at a time. There is a dark side occasionally in every family and it will come to the front every now and then, for man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward and woman is, too. It is a good thing to visit and be visited, for it breaks up the monotony of domestic affairs and improves our behavior and sharpens our wits and loosens the old gentlemen's purse strings and makes him more shifty in providing something to eat or to wear.

I like Texas—I reckon for the same reason that Mr. Stephens liked his little snarly, unfriendly dog. When asked what was the secret of his attachment for the brute, he said: "Well, I like the little dog because he likes me and that is reason enough." I am going to Texas this time in search of the end of a rainbow that is over there. It stretches from Texarkana to San Antonio, and I shall peruse the country all along the line and will of course see the bright and beautiful side and write about it; and your readers must take it with some allowance for I am an invited guest, and it would be very bad manners for me to find fault with her country or her people. I am sorry I won't be here to vote for pure unterrified democray, but will try to do like Mr. Blaine did in the Maine election—I will pair off with some third party friend if I can find one! Mr. Blaine had to publish a card and explain why he didn't vote and he said he was 900 miles away from home on election day but he paired off with a "democratic friend." I liked that! I liked Mr. Blaine because he liked Ben Hill and was the first man to send a check for $50 for his monument. I like him because he is opposed to the force bill—I don't like him for many other things too tedious to mention. But I don't reckon my one vote will be needed no how, for the third party is kick in Georgia and getting sicker every day and will be quarantined before the election. Weaver and Field and Mrs. Lease are quarantined already.

About nine years ago I visited Texas for the first time and noted the state of public morals and found all the new towns in a wild, reckless, unsettled condition. Fort Worth had about 10,000 people and it seemed to me the devil was running the whole business, for the Sabbath was a gala day and the saloons were all open and the billiard balls were cracking and the fare banks in full blast and Bogardus was shooting pigeons in the suburbs and the church bells rang feebly and few and they had just finished a four-story jail that was 200 feet long and wasn't half big enough, they said. But the devil don't run the business now. Good men and women banded together, and more of them kept coming and churches were built and Sunday schools established and the Y. M. C. A. became a power and they drove the devil out and now it is an orderly, God-fearing city. Young men who are dissipated and reckless care nothing about the morals of a town, but when men of families who are raising up children around them move to a new place they want a Christian morality for their children's sake, if nothing else. A man may have no religion, but if he has children he won't a file in a Godless town.

Texas is now as much a land of churches as any state in the union and is emphatically the land of schools. I remember when it was supposed that it was the land of outlaws and refugees from justice and my wonder now is what became of all the rascals who were said to have run away to Texas? When I was out there last summer a man came up to me and said "howdy, major." "Well, tell me who I am," said I. He whispered his name and said, "I knowed you over in Georgia. About twenty years ago I happened to kill a man over there accidentally in a fight and I didn't have no money to fee a lawyer and so I just stepped over here to save trouble." He told me his name and I promised to keep his secret, for they said he was behaving himself. I don't believe in hunting a man down after ten, fifteen or twenty years and breaking up his family and carrying him back a thousand miles and locking him up in jail. But it is done continually by these detectives and reward hunters just for the reward that was once off red and never recalled. We read every little while of the arrest of some man who ran away and changed his name long years ago, and behaved himself and married a good woman and was raising up respectable children when suddenly a detective found him and rudely tore him from those who loved him and carried him away to a distant state to prison. It is all wrong and does no good. He had carried the burden of his crime like a nightmare for years and years. He had suffered enough.

Thinking about Texas reminds me of what Henry Grady said to me some years ago when I told him I was going there. "Are you not afraid?" said he. "Afraid of what?" I asked. "Why of robbers—train robbers—those fellows that hold up a train and go through it and put the muzzle of a Derringer to a man's head and keep it there until he disgorges. I would like to see that done. I would give $20 to be on a train when it was held up. If I was travelling out there and knew what route they would take I would take it just to see the fun. The idea of two men attacking the engineer and fireman and conductor and baggage man and express man and forty-seven or fifty passengers and compelling every one of them to throw up his hands and submit to being robbed by two men! Why, I would be ashamed to tell it. I would be afraid to tell it, not grandeur, but it is certainly very extraordinary. There is not a car full of passengers on any western train that has not got half a dozen loaded pistols in it—perhaps a dozen either in hip pockets or grips and why some fellow don't squat behind his seat and shoot the robber before he gets to him. I don't understand." "Paralyzed," said Grady, "the very audacity of the thing paralyzes them and I want to realize it. I would look the fellow right in the eye and smile and say 'My friend, let's compromise this business—let's divide—you take half and I'll take half,' and I'd look so smiling and unterrified that he would pass on. Don't you know that when three of the commune went into Rothschild's bank in Paris, during the revolution, and demanded his money under the cry of liberty, equality and fraternity the old Jew never quailed nor trembled, but said, 'how much money have I got?' And they said, 'Forty millions of francs.' 'That is right,' said he, 'and there are 40,000,000 people in France.' Then he threw three francs on the counter and said, 'here are yours—tell the rest to come and get theirs.' They took them sheepishly and went out. Now nobody ever stops to talk to these robbers or to reason with them, but they become paralyzed and surrender. I would like to meet them and try a few broken remarks upon them. They are desperate fellows, no doubt, but they are men like we are and have their good points. Jesse James was no brute; he had some chivalry about him and if he had had a fair chance would have made a splendid citizen. I would like to command a regiment of such men in a war—wouldn't they whip an army?" "No," said I. "they wouldn't make good soldiers. The best soldiers we had were men who would not rob anybody, or impose on anybody—nor be looking out for an insult. They were men who were more peaceable than quarrelsome. The fellows who want about with pistols in their pockets before the war didn't make good soldiers and they deserted every battle on some pretext." Henry pondered awhile and said: "Maybe you are right, but I would like to be on a train when it was held up."

Grady had great admiration for heroism of any kind, whether it was in William Tell or a newsboy—whether in a general or a pugilist or an outlaw. How eagerly he used to listen to the story of Forrest with his 300 men following Streight with his 1,500 for a week and overtaking him near Rome and demanding his surrender and compelling it by his audacity. What a hero he made of Lewis Graves, the saloon keeper at Rome, who jumped into the swollen river and saw a poor boy from drowning when nobody else dared do it!

But I am not going to carry much money on the train—nobody does now except the express, and there is no more danger in Texas than in Alabama or Florida. There is not as much down south as there is north and west.

I believe that the hard times have done their worst and better times are coming. Cotton is going up and politics will soon subside and the third party vanish away and if we do elect Grover Cleveland and put Mrs. Frankie and Ruth in the White House we will see the dawn of a new era and everybody will be calm and serene.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

Lord Tennyson is dead.

The VIEW offers space to any third party man who can produce a single argument why people who are seeking financial relief and lower taxes should vote for Weaver.

We believe there are fully a thousand Cleveland Democrats in Chilton. But if the party gets them all to the polls in November the campaign committee will have to go to work here.

We have been told by several farmers in this section that they planted no cotton at all this year, and they feel better than some who have been throwing away time and labor on the staple.

Georgia and Florida State elections were won by Democracy. The People's party was thought to be strong in each State, but in Florida the majority for the Democratic ticket was nearly double the majority of two years ago. Verily, most of the people seem ready to deny that the People's Party is the people's party.

Like a good many other things that are too good for this wicked world the people's party is sure to die young. Those who doubt this need only study the election returns in Arkansas, Georgia and Florida. In Florida every member of the Legislature elected is a Democrat excent one. Poor fellow! He got a majority of fifteen.

Marion county, Fla., in which the city of Ocala is located has been considered the stronghold of the people's party in that State. At the election there last week the county gave a handsome majority for the Democratic candidate for Governor, in face of the fact that the people's party had a candidate in the race who had made a most active canvass.

"The administration of President Cleveland was an honest and able one. It reflected credit upon the Democratic party and upon the whole country. He fulfilled the pledges which the party made to the people and gave us a wise and economical administration of public affairs. The more the people see of the present administration of President Harrison the better the administration of Grover Cleveland appears before the intelligent people of the nation."—David B. Hill.

The Philadelphia Telegraph is concerned for the Republican party on account of the Populite-Magee deal in Alabama, and asks whether President Harrison has "seriously considered the whole matter.". "Is it necessary, is it wise, is it right, is it even expedient," it asks "for Republican management to load itself with such a scheme as this Alabama business?" Don't be uneasy sonny, Chris and Carter aren't going to scatter much money in Alabama. They haven't got any too much to use in New York and Indiana.--Birmingham News.

James W. Scott, editor and proprietor of the Chicago Herald and the Chicago Evening Post, both influential Democratic papers, is a man of keen foresight and observation. He was opposed to the nomination of Mr. Cleveland, as was Howell, of the Atlanta Constitution, and Watterson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, but like them, he now believes that the Chicago Convention exercised wisdom in its choice of candidates. Such is his recent view of the situation in the West that Mr. Scott recently told the Democratic National Committee that Cleveland and Stevenson can be elected without the vote of New York, and he assumes to know what he is talking about. Nevertheless, the Democrats are going to have the New York vote to swell the majority.—Birmingham News.

Hard Work or Steal.

Eufaula Times.

There are some med who believe that "free" coinage of silver means a free distribution of it. There are some others that have an idea that $50 per capita means a free gift of that much and a good many people are waiting for the gift show to open and it won't open. What a man gets in this world he must work for or steal.

How You See It and How You Don't.

In his latest story Joel Chandler Harris (Uncle Remus) makes "Brer Rabbit" explain to "Brer Fox" how he came by so much bright new money. "Brer Rabbit" directs "Brer Fox" to watch the first wagon that comes along the road and he will see that the front wheel of the vehicle is so much smaller than the hind wheel that the hind wheel will soon catch up with the front wheel, and when the wheels come together they grind out dollars. He suggests to "Brer Fox" to follow the wagon and be prepared to fill his pockets with the dollars as they drop. This story evidently has a timely application, with Weaver representing the hind wheel, Harrison the front wheel and the fox, the populite voter. When Weaver catches up with Harrison there will be a grinding out of specie, and "Brer Fox" will be on hand to fill his pockets. "Brer Rabbit, who has so generously explained how wealth may be secured by his less fortunate "Brer Fox," is no other than Dr. Moseley, chairman and office-holder.

MONSTROUS.

Why the Republican Party Wars on the Rising South.

It is all very well to rejoice in the prosperity and growth of the new northwest, for their sound views upon the tariff generally prevail, and their progress does not interfere with ourselves, but the advance of the south is to a great extent at our own expense. Her cotton mills will compete with those of New England and the middle states, and her furnaces are supplying pig iron at rates which make it impossible to run those of Pennsylvania. If the Democrats had never been allowed to regain control of the State Governments of the South, northern capital would never have embarked in the development of Southern coal and iron; and the surest and steadiest way to put a stop to this competition from men who are our political enemies, as our commercial rivals, is to carry through and enforce measures like the lodge election law. They won't like it, and some of them will be fools enough to try to make trouble about it; and if we can once more get them into the condition they were before 1876 we won't hear any more about cheap iron and cheap cotton goods from the south. They will have other things to think about.

Object Lesson for One Farmer.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

There is one farmer in Minnesota who will not vote the Republican ticket this year. When he went to buy a plow the dealer told him the price was $16. He went over into Manitoba and bought the same kind of a plow for $8. The collector of customs, however, met him on the border and charged him eight dollars duty on the eight dollar implement, leaving him just as poor as if he had bought the protected article for $16. That agriculturist will not need any campaign speeches to convince him.

Dr. R. A. Moseley, and a negro from Montgomery, are now canvassing the State for Harrison and Reid. In a contemporary we find the following concerning a speech made by the negro at Marion last Wednesday.

The negro Jones also made one utterance that should have been heard by every white man in the State who has been lending himself to the Third Party movement. He called the Republican reinforcements "damned mossbacks" and "poor country devils." That sort of language on the stump by a negro shows to what a pretty pass the Moseley-Bowman "confusion" movement has brought politics in this State. No matter how misguided any Alabama citizen has been heretofore, such insults should open his eyes and make him turn away in disgust from the alleged Weaver ticket. He is being played for a sucker by political adventurers, and is being ridiculed by their negro haranguers.

Senator Stewart wants free silver and he naturally comes over to the democracy. The Times respectfully points a lot of people who believe their salvation is wrapped up in free silver to the action of this silver senator from the silver state of Nevada.—Eufaula Times.

GOVERNMENT RAILROAD OWNERSHIP.

Senator Daniel Smith, of Mobile, Gives His Reasons Why He Will Not Vote For Weaver.

MOBILE, Oct. 4.—Some injudicious friends of ex-Senator Daniel Smith pretended at the last election that the Senator was a candidate for re-election and he being in North Carolina at the time, quite a vote was cast for him as against Judge H. Austill. The latter was, however, elected.

Mr. Smith promptly repudiated the action of his alleged friends, who are Republicans, but thinly disguised. To-day he writes to the Register, and defines his position on Independentism. Being a leading Alliance man of this part of the State, what he says is of importance.

In substance, he declares he has voted the Democratic ticket for forty-three years. He can't vote for Weaver, a man who has inexcusably villified Southern people, the man who said all Democrats ought to be hanged or shot, and all Confederate soldiers hanged.

Were Weaver a better man he could not vote for him, because of principles he represents. The most objectionable plank is that of demanding government ownership of railroads and telegraph lines; for the government to own simply the railroads in Alabama, the State loses the tax on a valuation of railroads amounting to $46,406,650 and would at the same time be taxed to buy railroads in and out of the State $157 per capita or $237,067,000, which is more than all the property in Alabama is worth. Such a system would bankrupt the State and saddle on the people about 18,000 additional government employes. If you look into postoffices of the South you will see the complexion of your railroad officials when Republicans manage the railroads.

Mr. Smith repudiates Weaver also because of his endorsement of the force bill.

The Alliance does not undertake to enquire into a member's political or religious faith and he does not see how any legitimate affection can be had between the Alliance and the People's Party or any other political party.

He concludes as follows: "I have been asked what I think of the National Democratic platform. My answer is I think it is the best platform ever built by any party and I endorse every plank in it."

The Republican campaign corruption fund from the single city of Philadelphia was as follows. Perhaps some of it will be distributed in Alabama by Chris. Magee:

Drexel & Co., subscribed $10,000, Thomas Dolan $10,000; Hamilton Disston $10,000; Postmaster-General Wanamaker $10,000; John and James Dobson $10,000. There is another $10,000 subscriber whose name I did not obtain. Coffin, Altemus & Co., pledged $50,000, as did Strawbridge, a clothier. One firm has conditionally subscribed $200,000, while another company has pledged $150,000. Much of this money will be spent in New York.

In every case these subscribers were protected manufacturers or speculators who have become millionaires by the aid of Republican paternalism. With these nabobs the tariff is the all important issue. In Alabama it is derided as no issue at all, and thousands of poor men will be deluded into voting to retain in power a party that makes such fortunes possible for the few.

The Scottsboro Age thinks thusly of the new party:

If the populite political force continue to dwindle down till the November election as rapidly as that would-be party has been losing adherents since the August election there will not be enough of them left to tell the story. Ever since the establishment of political parties in this country there has been at all times an element dissatisfied with both parties, out of which has always sprung an attempt to organize a third party movement. In the case of the populite party of the present time, history has only repeated itself, and it is only a matter of time when things shall swing around into position again, and the career of the third party will be forgotten.

Peyton G. Bowman, leader of the Alabama Republicans, came to town yesterday. It was reported that he was here to confer with the Republican National Committee. He is loud and confident. "Mr. Cleveland, he said, may carry Alabama fifteen years from now, but he will not do so this fall. There is not the slightest doubt that Harrison and Reid will get Alabama's electoral votes." Further than this prediction Mr. Bowman was not inclined to discuss the situation in Alabama.

So it is now plain as to who Bowman is working for.

Georgia on the East of us and Florida on the South of us sound the death knell to the Third Party movement and will bring many of our deluded people to a realization of what they are about to do. They are asked to vote against the Democracy for a party which has oppressed and throttled them for years, retarded our progress, desecrated our homes and firesides, and taxed the poor until they can hardly get bread to eat, in order that a few might fill their pockets with gold. Stop and consider, white men of Alabama, what the enemies of the Democracy would have you do and vote to save your homes and firesides.—Exchange.

ALA. STATE FAIR.

Magnificent Exhibits—Great and Varied Attractions.

Besides the almost numberless exhibits of individuals and corporations at the Alabama State Fair which opens at Birmingham on the 9th of November and closes on the 19th, the State will make a splendid display of its wonderful and varied resources under the auspices of State Agricultural department. There will also be an extensive line of exhibits by the Agricultural and Mechanical College. The Stock show will be the largest and best ever witnessed in the south. The entries up to date indicate that there will be at least three hundred horses to take part in the trotting, pacing and running races, some of the best stables in the country being in the ring. There will be six days of trotting and running races, and four days of the great running races there being not less than three or four races each day during the Fair.

Greene's Liver Tonic is sold under a positive guarantee. Use one-half bottle and if not satisfied with results, return the balance, and money will be refunded. Sold by W. H. Phillips.

G. F. P. Woman's greatest boon.

There are the brightest indications that the approaching State Fair will far eclipse any other State Fair in the South in point of attractions, attendance and general merit. Everybody is "going to come."—Birmingham News.

A Startling Statement.

(Union Springs Herald.)

One of our most prominent business men was in the Herald office Tuesday, and in talking over the financial situation made the startling statement that at the present crisis $10 would pay debts to the amount of a thousand dollars. He said that the trouble is largely due to the fact that the people are holding on to what money they have. Thus a man may get hold of a ten dollar bill and instead of paying a debt of ten dollars he will put the money in his pocket and wait. So there may be a hundred men owing a debt of ten dollars each. If number one would take the money out of his pocket and pay number two, the latter might pay number three, and so on until every one of the hundred men had paid his debt of ten dollars, aggregating in the whole one thousand dollars. But so long as the one man keeps the money in his pocket, ninety-nine other men have to be cramped with a debt they cannot pay. This hoarding of money and its effect upon trade is more plainly seen if you multiply the ten dollars by ten in the case above supposed. In these hard times be more prompt than ever to pay your debts.

Atkins' Patent Concave Tooth Dexter

MIXED PURPOSE. FOR THE WOODS OF THE SOUTH IT HAS NO EQUAL.

The patent by which this Saw is protected consists of a depression of the face of the cutting teeth through the center from point to base, thus removing all friction while in use, giving strength and stiffness to the teeth and increasing three-fold the durability of the "set." WE CHALLENGE THE WORLD to produce a Saw equalling the ATKINS FAST CUTTING DEXTER.

PRICES: {Silver Steel, Protecting Handles, $1.00 per Saw. / Special Steel, Without Handles, .75 per Saw.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The name designed for the ATKINS CONCAVE TOOTH DEXTER Saw has led competitors to make inferior Saws which they claim "as good as the Dexter." These imitation Saws are made from lower grades of steel, inferior workmanship, and without the patent concave tooth.

Ask your hardware dealer for the "ATKINS DEXTER" and take no other. If the dealer will not order it for you, remit amount with order direct to us.

Reasonable.

It is a tiresome thing to the young, their elders must confess, to be told often that the last generation read better books and knew much more, at the same age, than the present generation.

A boy of thirteen, in a public grammar school, was reproached by his master for his slowness.

"When I was your age," said the master, "I was at least two years further advanced than you are. How do you account for that?"

"I've heard my father say," replied the boy, "that they use to have great deal better teachers than they have nowadays."—Youth's Companion.

Fire did $75,00 damag at Paragould, Ark., Thursday.

General Weaver and Mrs. Lease spoke to 400 people at Hopkinsville, Ky., Thursday.

A switch engine backed into a street car on Harrison avenue, Cincinnati, Tuesday, and two passengers were killed.

Patrick Egan, United States minister to Chili, was a passenger on the steamer Newport, which arrived at New York Tuesday.

The Nickel paper mills at Richmond, Ind., were burned early Wednesday morning. The loss of the stock, machinery and building is almost total, aggregating $100,000.

Snow fell in Buffalo N. Y., Wednesday and the real estate men from Georgia, Tennessee, Texas and Kentucky shivered and made uncomplimentary remarks upon the northern climate.

A news special of Thursday says: Type founderies have formed a trust with a capital of $9,000,000. Robert Allison, of Cincinnati, is president and W. B. Mackeller, of Philadelphia, vice president. Farmer & Son and Bruce refuse to join it.

Passenger rates between Chicago and southern points continue to grow beautifully less. The Illinois Central has announced a reduction to New Orleans to take effect next Saturday. The Monon also applied the knife again Tuesday and announced a further reduction of $3.50 in the round trip rate between Chicago and Cincinnati and Chicago and Louisville.

The Traveling Passengers' Association met at Washington Wednesday in annual convention. Thirty-eight members were elected. They transacted no business of special importance. Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, Joe W. White, of the Georgia railroad; W. J. Leahy, of the Rock Island railroad, vice president; and H. C. Holabird, Erie railway, secretary and treasurer.

The Indiana supreme court, at Indianapolis, Wednesday, refused to advance the suit to test the gerrymander acts of 1885 and 1891 without further consideration. The court ordered that inasmuch as the case was one of great importance to the people of the entire state, the attorney general should appear in their behalf. The action in postponing the hearing of the motion is taken by the politicians to mean that the case will not be decided before the election.

William M. Runke, of the extensive dry goods firm of Darlington & Runke, at Philadelphia, committed suicide Thursday by shooting himself. The reason assigned is that he had recently become smitten with a mania for speculating in stocks and had, in his partner's absence, used the funds of the firm for that purpose to the amount of $80,000. He was a director of the Pennsylvania Mutual company, of Philadelphia and at the time of his death carried an insurance of $525,000 upon his life.

A Chicago special of Wednesday says: The Illinois National Guard will not participate in the dedication of the world's fair buildings. Although the President of the United States will be the guest of Chicago, not a single man of her citizen soldiers will turn out to do him honor. The trouble arises over the refusal of the state authorities and the world's fair directors to defray the transportation expenses of troops. They insist that the men shall foot the bills, which would amount to about $16,000.

LORD TENNYSON DEAD.

England's Poet Laureate Passes Over the River.

A London cablegram brings intelligence of the death of Lord Tennyson at 1:35 o'clock, Thursday morning.

Immediately after the death of Lord Tennyson, a reporter of the Associated Press had an interview with Sir Andrew Clark, one of the physicians who attended the poet laureate. Sir Andrew said that Lord Tennyson's death was the most glorious he had ever seen. There was no artificial light in the room, and the chamber was almost in darkness, save where the broad flood of moonlight poured in through a western window. The moon's rays fell across the bed upon which the dying man lay, bathing him in their pure light and forming a rembrant-like background to the scene. All was silent save the soughing of the autumn wind, as it gently played through the trees surrounding the house, a fitting requiem for the gentle poet, who sang of nature. No doubt as to the future was in his wan face and when the end came he appeared to fall asleep. So restful was he and so calmly did he respond to the beckoning hand of the angel of death, that those who stood beside him scarcely knew that he had passed away.

Motionless, Lord Tennyson lay upon his couch, the tide of his life gently and slowly ebbing out into the ocean of the infinite. No rack of pain or sorrow checked its course or caused a ripple upon the outgoing tide. As peacefully and as gently as he had lived, so he died, looking until the end into the eyes of those dear to him. All members of the family were by the bedside.

Alfred Tennyson was born at Somersby, Lincolnshire, England, in 1809. His father, the Rev. George Clayton Tennyson, was the rector of Somersby and vicar of Bennington and Grimsby, while his mother was the daughter of Rev. Stephen Fytche, vicar of Louth. He was the third of a family of twelve children. The title which gained for him the title of Poet Laureate of England began to develop itself in his early youth, for when 18 years old he, with his brother Charles, who afterwards became vicar of Grasby and assumed the name of Turner, published a small volume entitled "Poems by two brothers." The poems attracted some attention, those signed "A. T." receiving the highest praise, Coleridge declaring that they alone of the selections in the volume gave hopeful promise of a coming poet. Subsequent events proved the correctness of the assertion, and Tennyson's name became a household word the world over.

NO THIRD TICKET

Will be Put Out by the Democrats of New York

A published interview Tuesday with ex-Mayor William R. Grace, of New York city, quotes that gentleman as saying: "While I believe that the nomination of the third ticket in the city of New York would bring out a large democratic vote, and consequently be favorable to the national ticket, yet seeing the opposition which is being manifested by many good democrats who differ from me in my opinion, I have come to the conclusion that it would be better to put no third ticket in the field."

ARRESTS AT HOMESTEAD.

A great sensation was created at Homestead, Pa., Friday night by the arrest of a number of members of the advisory committee, of the Homestead strikers, for treason. Those arrested were Chairman Thomas J. Crawford, William Baird; George Ryland, John Dierken and T. W. Brown. The arrest came like a thunderbolt to the strikers, they were so suddenly made and so unexpected. The prisoners were chatting at the street corners, when they were taken. The officers were Detectives Mills and Fowl and deputies Young, Brady, Delvin, Krept and Ward. It was late in the afternoon when the warrants based on information of Chief Justice Paxson, reached Homestead and were placed in the hands of officers to serve. They started out at 9 o'clock, and first caught Crawford and Dierken, who were hurried to the provost guards tents. The others were caught in quick succession, before the strikers had time to realize what was happening.

As the prisoners were speeded to the prison tents, an alarm was taken and many strikers hastened toward the guard, but were held back and denied all information. Indeed, some of the prisoners did not know why they were arrested until safe behind the bayonets of the soldiers. It was intended first to keep the prisoners all night and hunt for others, but through fear of an attempt at rescue they were taken to the city farm station, placed on a train and hurried to Pittsburg at 11 o'clock and landed in jail.

The information for treason upon which the men were arrested were made by County Detective Beltzhoover Friday afternoon before Chief Justice Paxson, of the supreme court of Pennsylvania. The petition charges Hugh O'Donnell, Thomas J. Crawford, John McLuckie and thirty others, all members of the strikers' advisory committee, with treason. It states that the defendants, who are inhabitants and residents of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, did arrange, prepare and levy war against the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, to the end that the constitution, law and authority were defied, resisted and subverted, and that said defendants on July 1st, with hundreds of others, armed and arrayed in a warlike manner, that is to say, with guns revolvers, cannons, swords, knives and clubs, did unlawfully, maliciously and traitorously assemble together in the borough of Homestead in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania and then and there with force and arms did falsely and traitorously and in a hostile and warlike manner array themselves in insurrection and rebellion to the commonwealth of Pennsylvania contrary to the duty of allegiance and fidelity of said defendants.

Chief Justice Paxson at once pushed the warrants for the arrest of the accused and officers were dispatched by the sheriff to Homestead to serve them. The action of the county authorities was entirely unexpected and carried consternation into the camp of the strikers. This is the first time in the history of the state that any resident has been charged with treason against the commonwealth, and the entrance of the cases will be watched with interest. The penalty, which was formerly death, is twelve years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

COMPLAIN OF DISCRIMINATION

Third Party Delegates to Omaha After The Railroads.

A Washington special of Tuesday says: "A complaint of unjust discrimination in passenger rates has just been filed with the inter-state commerce commission. The complainant in the case is Thomas V. Cator, of San Francisco. The defendants are the Southern Pacific Company, and the Union Pacific Railroad Company. The complainant alleges that when the Republican and Democratic national conventions were held in June last, at Minneapolis and Chicago, respectively, delegates from the state of California, were carried over the railways of defendants from San Francisco and other points at an agreed reduced rate, amounting to about one-half of the regular rates charged for travel from San Francisco to Omaha. When, in July last, the people's party held their convention at Omaha, to nominate candidates for the presidency and vice-presidency, and delegates from California to the Omaha convention applied to the same line of railways for the same rates that had been granted to the republican and democratic delegates from California, they were refused any reduction whatever, and were charged and compelled to pay the usual and full rates, about double the sum charged the democratic and republican delegates, over the same railway and the same points. It is also alleged that the number of delegates from California to the Omaha convention was greater than was carried by the defendant companies to either the republican or the democratic convention.

DIRECT TAX FRAUDS.

A special dispatch of Thursday from New Orleans states that fraud in the matter of the direct tax refunded to the State of Louisiana, by the general government is proved by researches by state officials here. Governor Foster has in his possession rolls containing a list of the direct tax refunded to citizens of the state by the federal government and a comparison of these rolls with receipts given at the time of payment by the collectors show glaring discrepancies. In nearly every instance there is a difference of two, three or four dollars between the face of the tax receipts held by citizens and the sum entered on the rolls. It is believed from a cursory examination made that the people of the state were robbed of hundreds of thousands of dollars by this manufacturing during reconstruction days.

THE DALTON GANG KILLED.

They Make a Raid on Coffeyville but Met Their Match.

Citizens Were Warned and Were Prepared for the Robbers.

A special from the town of Coffeyville, Kansas, states that the Dalton gang has been exterminated—wiped off the face of the earth. Caught like rats in a trap, they were, Wednesday, shot down like dogs; but not until four citizens of the place yielded up their lives in the work of extermination.

Six of the gang rode into town in the morning and robbed the two banks of the place. Their raid had become known to officers of the law and when the bandits attempted to escape they were attacked by the marshal's posse. In the battle which ensued four of the desperadoes were killed outright, and one was so badly wounded that he has since died. The other escaped, but is being hotly pursued. Of the attacking party, four were killed, one was fatally and two were seriously wounded. The dead are:

Bob Dalton, Grant Dalton, Emmet Dalton, Joseph Evans, John Moore, alias "Texas Jack," T. C. Connolly, city marshal, L. M. Baldwin, bank clerk, G. W. Cubine, merchant, C. J. Brown, shoemaker. Thomas G. Mays, cashier of the first National bank, was fatally wounded. T. A. Reynolds and two other citizens were seriously wounded.

It had been rumored a month ago that the Dalton gang was contemplating an immediate raid upon the banks of the city. Arrangements were made to give them a warm reception.

BURIED LIKE DOGS.

A special from Coffeyville, Kan., says the streets were packed Thursday with crowds of excited people from all parts of that section, attracted by the terrible Dalton tragedy of Wednesday. On every street corner, in every alley stood groups of citizens eagerly discussing the attempted bank robberies of the day before with the attendant tragic results. At the city jail an awning was improvised, under which was laid the four dead bandits in coffins provided by the county, with a guard to see that they were not disturbed.

Among the thousands who viewed the bodies were many who had known the Daltons for years and while their crimes deserve to place them beyond the pale of sympathy, there were to be found people who could scarcely suppress a sigh of regret for the fate of the dead men.

Emmet Dalton, who still lives, though desperately wounded, lies in a room at the jail, and his room is at all times surrounded by a crowd of men and women who do their utmost to pursuade the guard to let them pass up to the presence of the wounded man. All sorts of reasons are advanced by these people for their request, but without exception they are not complied with.

EMMET DALTON'S STORY.

Through the courtesy of Sheriff Callahan, a reporter was allowed to enter the room. Emmet was weak from the loss of blood, and talked little. He said:

"I met the boys Saturday near Tulsa and in the course of their talk, they asked me how much money I had. I replied $20. They said they had $900 and then told me of their plan to rob both banks of Coffeyville in one day. Bob said he wanted to lower Jesse James' record. I tried to persuade him not to try it, but did not succeed, as he had a grudge against the town, and wanted revenge for what he had heard people here were saying and trying to do about us.

"I had no money to leave the country on and I did not think I could get away if we came. I finally consented. We knew the lay of the land thoroughly, and it was agreed that Bob and I should take the First National and the other three boys Condon's bank. Bob thought he and I were better than any six of the others and knowing the First National to be the hardest to rob we selected that and assigned Condon's to the others."

Emmet stated that he was an own cousin of the Younger brothers and until he knew that the other boys were dead, he refused to say anything, but when their dead bodies were carried up to him for inspection, he identified them as Bob and Grattan Dalton, Tom Evans and Jack Moore. He shed tears as he gazed on his dead brothers. The names he gave to the two latter men are not the names they were know by in that section but they are not their real names. These are withheld from the public for good reasons, but their names are known.

The dead bandits were buried Thursday evening in the city cemetery in a lot owned by the Dalton family. The bodies were carried to the grave in transfer wagons without a single mourner or sympathizing friend to assist in the last rites.

Emmett is wounded in the right hip and right arm by Winchester bullets and in his back are twelve buckshot, the latter being the shot which knocked him off his horse. He had reached his horse and mounted with the bag of money from the First National bank on his arm, when, seeing Bob fall, he turned back to assist him, and it was then that he received the fire that brought him down.

The money secured from the First National amounted to $20,240 and that from Condon's $8,000. The amount turned over to the bank exceeds this amount and serves to verify the statement made by Emmet that they had $900 when they came to town. It is now said that only five men took part in the robbery, and if this be true the entire gang was exterminated.

AGAINST THE FUSION.

Action of the Stalwart Democrats of Kansas—Declare for Cleveland.

A news special from Topeka, Kan., says: After a consultation that lasted six hours, the leaders of the stalwart democrats prepared a statement for publication Friday morning, declaring for Grover Cleveland and appointing a central committee of five to arrange preliminary details for a convention to be held in Topeka, on October 6th. It has been virtually decided not to place a ticket in the field, but to squelch the old time democratic leaders by defeating the combination ticket. The reconstructionists claim that they will bring 20,000 democrats to the polls who will vote for the fusion electors and who would otherwise remain at home.

A Lucky Farmer.

W. A. Freeman, a farmer in very moderate circumstances, living near Charleville, Tennessee, has received a letter from William Moore, a lawyer in London, informing him that a suit had been decided in his favor which would net him $2,000,000.

GEORGIA'S WEALTH.

The state of Georgia is carrying balances in its treasury which would make many a man feel well as do if he had it.

Captain Furlow, of the comptroller general's office, made up a statement Monday of the state's receits and disbursements for the year ending September 30th, and the balance on hand amounted to $748,851 68, nearly three quarters of a million dollars. On October 1st, 1891, the state's balance was $730,989.96, or about $17,000 less than the amount on hand now. Georgia's total revenues for the past twelve months, including the amount on hand at the beginning of the fiscal year, were $3,876,840.64. The principal items of revenue and the sources were:

REAL ESTATE CONGRESS

In Session at Buffalo, N. Y.—Delegates From Every Section Present.

The real estate congress opened at Buffalo, N. Y., Tuesday, in Music hall with an address by Governor Flower, who welcomed the guests from every section of the land to the "Grand old state of New York and the queenly city of Buffalo." Judge E. B. Hatch also welcomed the dealers on behalf of their local brethren and Mayor C. F. Bishop did the same office on behalf of the citizens.

To this triple welcome Colonel Henry L. Turner, of Chicago, responded humorously and felicitously. A telegram was read from Francis T. Wright, of Nashville, founder of the National Real Estate Association, presenting to President Benjamin Weil, of Milwaukee, a gavel cut from one of the logs hewn by general Jackson in 1804, and used in erecting his cabin home, still standing near Nashville.

Mr. Weil, thus equipped, declared formally the congress open for regular business and himself contributed the first number on the programme in the shape of the annual address which was full of progressive ideas, sagaciously expressed.

LILLIE JOHNSON OUT ON BOND

Until Alice Mitchell is Cured or Released from the Asylum.

In the Shelby county criminal court at Memphis, the case of Lillie Johnson, charged with being an accessory to the murder of Freda Ward by Alice Mitchell, was called. Miss Johnson's attorney asked for special venire from which to select a jury to try the case, but the motion was overruled. In rendering this decision, Judge Dunnow said that Miss Johnson would not be placed on trial until Alice Mitchell had either been cured of insanity or pronounced an incurable lunatic. The case was ordered stricken from the docket and Miss Johnson was released on $10,000 bond until the asylum authorities could be heard from. Letters received recently from the superintendent of Bolivar insane asylum state that Alice Mitchell shows no symptoms of insanity, and will probably be discharged or cured before many months. As soon as she is released she will be arrested on an indictment for the murder of Freda Ward and tried jointly with Lillie Johnson.

The Paynewether Bequest.

One-fifth of the Paynewether bequest of $100,000 to the University of Virginia has been appropriated to establish and will be expended in erecting a new gymnasium, which will have all the modern conveniences in the way of apparatus, also swimming pool, running track and baseball diamond. Grant Johnson is to be the machinist in charge.

Entirely Different.

While the truth is always to be commended, yet frankness is sometimes attended with deplorable results. Among the prices quoted on a sign in front of a Hudson street coal dealer's are two that were never intended to go together. They are: "Per bushel basket, eighteen cents." Per bushel, twenty-five cents." New York Evening Sun.

Two Cases of Absentmindedness.

The two most absentminded men on record are the fellow who thought he had left his watch at home and then took it out to see if he had time to go back and get it, and the man who put on his office door a card saying, "Out; will be back soon," and on his return sat down on the stair step to wait for himself.—London Tit-Bits.

Poor Railroads Overlooked.

"Strange that four railroads, one a belt line, and two coal-oil pipe-lines, nine miles from Chicago, should have been overlooked," said Jay A. Dwiggins & Co., when they laid out the town of Griffith. Four factories located, houses and stores sprung up at once.—Chicago News.

Something of Vital Importance.

Do you know that the state of the blood running in your veins is the cause of your sickness or your health? This is a most important matter, although overlooked by people who show a great deal of good sense otherwise. Your blood has to be kept pure, or your whole system gradually becomes a wreck. It costs very little to check disease and correct the state of the blood if the matter is taken up in time; but it costs a great deal, and is often impossible, if taken up after disease has gained a foothold. If you are troubled with Syphilis, Itch, Humors, Swellings, Skin Disease, Rheumatism, Pimples, Scrofula, Malaria, Catarrh, Fevers, Liver and Kidney diseases, Old Sores, Eruptions, or any other disorders resulting from impure blood, write at once to Dr. S. The mist floats up before our eyes
To form cloud draperies to the skies.

And when the sky goes down at even
His rays light up their underfold;
We see the curtain shades of heaven
Before the gates of light unrolled,
With crimson lined and edged with gold,

And later, when the stars are set
Upon that field of azure blue,
Like daisies or like lilies wet
With crystal drops of morning dew,
That misty veil their light shines through.

Those vapory folds the landward breeze
Fills like a spectral fleet of sail,
Strong convoy on aerial seas—
Over the mountain's crest they trail,
At moorings swing above the vale.

But what shall hold these cloud-forms up
When they shall see on hill and plain
Each flower lift its empty cup?
Rather, through sympathy with pain,
Will they dissolve in tears of rain.

Nathaniel's Love Story.

BY DAISY RHODES CAMPBELL.

Nathaniel Morrison swung his scythe with a will. Each stroke seemed timed. The fact was, it moved to his thoughts. The young farmer was not given to day-dreams, but nowadays everything was changed. Today his thoughts ran on, though his work never faltered. If only the Winthrops hadn't turned their place into a summer resort last year, everything might be as it was in those delightful days, which seemed now like a past Arcadia. Never had the meadows or orchards looked so beautiful—never had the wild flowers and ferns grown as they had when he and Hetty, free and unrestrained, wandered together to the woods, or, mounted on their fleet horses, dashed down the road for a canter. Every day was full of Hetty.

His work was planned to give the evenings to her, and he had hoped that she, child as she was, was learning to care for him. The Stanfields lived the simplest of lives, and Hetty had been brought up to lend a helping hand to all kinds of domestic duties. But now since summer boarders had invaded their beautiful countryside all was changed. Innocent, industrious, simple-hearted Hetty no longer cared for such a quiet, even round of duties and pleasures, as had hitherto been her lot. How soon she had become intimate with the Carters and Valls! How quickly she had learned new ways and those coquettish turns of her pretty head; and that little trick she had of dropping her eyes and raising them, which seemed nowadays more conscious than of old.

Then how quickly she had learned to dance! And what a belle she had been at the parties at Winthrop's. And here it was June again, and already the season's raid upon Winthrop had begun. But Hetty still lingered in the city with her new friends, the Valls. And handsome Arthur Vall, was, he supposed, her faithful shadow, and in the same city was that cool, cynical Philip Carter, who has paid the little country girl so much attention.

He supposed they would all come back—Hetty among them—but why did he want her to come? He surely did not enjoy heartache and maddening doubts and constant pain—oh, why couldn't he give her up? His work was a farmer's, and, if Hetty longed for a more varied and changeful life, and cared for men more polished and versed in the world's ways than he, why couldn't he let her go and settle down to his loved domain and be content?

"How, mother, your lawn is improved, and John has cut over it with the mower, and the grass sha'nt get so tall again," he said.

Nathaniel's mother, a sweet-faced, white-haired, yet singularly youthful woman of her age, stood on the broad piazza watching her son. He was noted the country over for his tender care of his widowed mother, as well as for his success as a farmer. He had all the newest improvements in implements and architecture for his land and buildings. Only the old homestead remained the same, with the addition of bay windows and piazzas to its rather plain exterior.

"Thank you, Philip, it must look its best for the summer boarders," Mrs. Morrison replied, smiling. Philip frowned and turned away. He strode off and down the road to speak to one of the men. A quarter of a mile away was a lovely spot with tree and wild flowers everywhere. Here Philip had planned to build a new home some day—the homestead must be for his mother, Aunt Jane and his younger brother, now away at college. But here was to be a modern cottage to suit Hetty's tastes.

And there was Eleanor Carter, mounted on a fine new thoroughbred, and smiling upon him. He liked Miss Carter—she was so intelligent and original. They had exchanged books and thoughts. He was glad to meet her again. She was a stately, fair girl, with golden hair and deep gray eyes. Nathaniel thought her a beauty. He longed yet feared to ask about Hetty, but Eleanor replied to his unspoken wish: "The Valls came with us, and also Miss Stanfield. We're to have a little dance tonight. You must be sure to come. I want to see if you're forgotten my lessons of last summer. There comes my brother now. I cut across country and reached this pike before he did." The gentlemen vaulted; Miss Carter nodded a gay good-bye and was gone.

Should he go and see Hetty? No, he would stay at home and count the cost of cultivating those new acres. It would be much more sensible than joining that gay party of city people. Yet, in spite of his resolution, Nathaniel was at the Winthrops. He danced with Miss Vail and Miss Johnson and Eleanor Carter. He asked for a dance with Hetty but she blushed and told him her card was full. It was only another excuse, he felt sure, yet Hetty had always been so truthful, so frank. He went home early, cursing his folly in not obeying his reason and staying at home.

The next few days were full of hard work, and Nathaniel's labors were never half done. He felt grateful for his unusual strength, his large, well-proportioned body, his perfect health. What more could a man ask for than to be the owner of so many broad acres, a pleasant home, and plenty to do, that he must be sighing for a wilful woman?

One day a lamb was missing and Nathanial set out to find it. At last a low bleating came to his keen ears. He ran on, and there, down a steep ravine he saw the missing creature, lame from its fall and bleating forth its pain and trouble. In a moment he was by its side. He had provided himself as usual with ointment and linen. The legs were treated and bound. He picked up the trembling creature in his strong arms and climbed the steep ascent. When nearly at the top he felt a sharp wrench. He tried to put the lamb on a shelving rock, then lost his footing, and, slipping and falling, helpless with that keen pain in his foot, his head struck something and he knew no more.

When Nathaniel's consciousness returned he thought at first that he had entered paradise, for bending over him was Hetty's face, pale and frightened. She was holding his head with water. As he looked into her eyes the color flashed into her face. "I thought—I thought you were dead," she faltered, and turned away. Nathaniel was not yet sure whether he was on earth or in heaven, but he was a man, and the sight of Hetty's agitation decided him to follow up his advantage. He seized her hand; "Hetty, did you care?" he demanded.

"Of course I cared; haven't we been friends all our lives?" she asked reproachfully, and trying to withdraw her hand.

But he held it fast. "Tell me, are you to marry Arthur Vail or Carter?" he questioned eagerly.

"Tell me are you to marry Miss Eleanor?" Hetty asked saucily, for answer.

"Oh, that is nonsense—you know very well that I never cared for any one but you, Hetty; but you are so changed, you seemed so tired of our country life." A sharp pain in his ankle made him pause. He knew now that he was still on earth, yet even the pain seemed as nothing to Hetty's reply:

"I thought you had tired of me; you know I am not clever or wise, and there were others who could talk to you so much better," faltered Hetty with downcast eyes.

Nathaniel's eyes opened wide in genuine astonishment: "Why, Hetty! I supposed that you always knew that I loved you, but I thought you liked those other fellows," he said. "If you care for me now, just let us go back to those old days when we were such good comrades, and perhaps in time you might care for me; do you think you could, Hetty?"

Again the lovely eyes were downcast.

"No, I couldn't," murmured the girl.

"Oh, Hetty!"

"Because—oh, Nat, you are so stupid for such a great splendid fellow—because I love you already."

"Oh, Hetty!" But in what a different way that same exclamation can be uttered!

Later, a demure young woman sent two of the men to help Mr. Morrison home, as he had met with an accident—sprained his ankle. She carried a lame lamb whose bleating first led her in her fern hunt to the spot where Nathaniel lay helpless.

People wander why Nathaniel Morrison and his pretty wife never would fill up the ravine when it interferred so with the field west of it, but the ravine never betrayed its secret, even to me.—[Country Gentleman.

An Indian's Last Hunt.

Postmaster Peacock tells us that a son of Indian Billy Jewel, better known as Billy Key West, a young man twenty-one years old, met his death in a singular manner while hunting last week in the India hunting grounds in Dade County. Billy, who is a good hunter, went out and shot a large buck. Thinking him dead he stooped down on coming up to him to cut his throat. The buck in his last agonies made for him and drove his horns into the abdomen of the Indian, ripping him open. After three days, Billy not returning, a party was made up, and, attracted by the buzzards, both hunter and hunted were found dead together—the Indian still impaled on the horns of the buck. Dangers of Boating.

Clara—When George and I are married, I'm to have my own way in everything.

Dora—Guess you won't.

Clara—Indeed I will. That's the bargain. Don't you remember I told you he proposed to me in a rowboat, and asked if I'd float through life with him just that way?

"Yes."

"Well, he was rowing, but I was steering."—[New York Weekly.

Bringing the Dead to Life.

We don't hear of as many deaths from asphyxia now as we did 10 or 15 years ago, when many of the private houses of our cities and all of the hotels were lighted by gas, but there are still thousands of deaths every year from drowning and from the inhalation of poisonous gases and other fumes which science really ought to be able to remedy. A few years ago, in 1888 or 1880, Professor Poe of Bridgeport, Conn., invented what the papers called "a pair of artificial lungs," intended to be used in case of apparent death from drowning or asphyxiation. What has become of Poe's great invention? In testing it the Professor is said to have completely drowned a pet rabbit and restored it to life 11 different times. His mode of restoration was to apply his patent bellows to the animal's mouth and force oxygen into the lungs. The reaction of the apparatus, which was provided with a powerful suction, drew out the water (Poe said it would act the same with poisonous gases), and the artificial respiration produced a muscular contraction and expansion of the lungs until life was finally fully restored. If he has given up his valuable experiment and his invention it is time for someone else to take the matter up.—[St. Louis Republic.

Boston's Milk Laboratory.

Boston has a milk laboratory where infants' food is prepared according to the physician's prescription as accurately as drug prescriptions are filled at a pharmacy. The milk comes from a herd of cows, carefully selected as to breed and systematically fed, so that the milk will have as nearly as possible an unvarying percentage. The milking is done in vessels of glass, kept exquisitely clean, is cooled rapidly and taken to the laboratory. There the air is changed and kept pure by a large fan that keeps up a "constant outward current of air." The room is lined with white tiles and, by means of a separator, an unvarying sixteen per cent. cream can in a short time be obtained from the milk. A large sterilizer, into which steam can be introduced, exposes the milk to a high or low temperature according to requirement. The elements used to make up the prescription are then a pure, clean-skimmed milk, cream of a "stable percentage," and sugar obtained from milk-sugar and distilled water.

The cost of food prepared in this way is said to be very moderate, and after the physician's prescription is filled all that the nurse has to do is to warm it before giving it to the baby. —[New York Post.

Chinese Dentistry.

"Chinese practise dentistry to a considerable extent and with remarkable success in Chinatown, San Francisco," said G. C. Cochrane, of that city, at the Leland yesterday. "There is one of the tooth-pulling craft among them who has a string attached to the upper window of his house and reaching to the lower, in which is set an array of the white teeth, with a notice to the effect that they have all been extracted in a certain space of time. The Celestials claim that they have in their own country a powder a pinch of which will cause an attack of sneezing, during which the aching tooth will drop out. A voyage across the ocean, they say, destroys its effect. But they have introduced something in this country which puts away the tissue of the gum and causes swelling, suppuration and eventual destruction of the tooth. Arsenic for one thing will do it, but it is exceedingly dangerous. It is curious that the Chinese, who look sensibility, should devise an operation which the victim must undergo without any dissimulation."

Mistaken Ideals.

The ideal woman of every man is the "womanly woman." The ideal man of every woman is the "manly man." And the expression, "a womanly woman," means pretty much the same to every man who uses it just as the "manly man" of one woman expresses a certain combination of qualities well known to every other woman.

The man's "womanly woman" is gentle, amiable, quiet and domestic. She loves to sit on a low chair and hem things, with the lamp-light falling over her hair. It is unnecessary to say that although in theory this is the sort of a woman a man prefers, in practice he may choose one entirely her opposite. She does not exist in large quantities, which is lucky, as she might prove dreadfully insipid if she did.

The woman's "manly man" means a man strong, brave and daring. He must perform easily bold deeds which she dare not attempt. She likes that—in dreams. In actual life she may find that a man neither daring or bold has satisfactory and endearing qualities which make him more after her heart than the ideal of her dreams could ever be.

We are not all alike, thank Heaven! but various. And the spark of originality which is implanted in each of us all is the thing to cherish and develop and not distort ourselves into ideal forms.—[Harper's Bazar.

The Velocity of a Cannon Ball.

The first firing was done on the new proving grounds of the Bethlehem (Penn.) Iron Works on the 28 th of July. Screens were arranged in connection with electrical instruments for measuring the velocity with which the shots traveled. In the test made, the object was to obtain the velocity of a 250-pound shot fired from an 8-inch gun with a charge of 81 pounds of hexagonal prismatic powder. The standard set down for these conditions is 1700 feet per second, or at the rate of about 1200 miles per hour. The instruments showed a velocity of 1702 feet for the first shot fired; this came so close to the standard that further tests were considered unnecessary. This is considered to be one of the most satisfactory tests made in the history of modern ordnance.—[Scientific American.

Pets for the Young Folks.

Children naturally take to pets, and if given a charge of small animals a taste for stock raising may be developed at an early age. Of course they must be instructed how to feed and manage at first, and after that they will take pleasure in the work and be on the watch for improvements. A man who gives no thought to his children except to get work out of them will not be apt to keep them on the farm after they become of age. —[New York Observer.

The Seminoles.

The meaning of the word Seminole is "straged off" or "wild." The Seminoles were originally a part of the Creeks, in old Alabama. One day a party of Creeks or Muskogees left the tribal home and went on a hunt to Florida. They were so charmed with the country and the abundance of game found that they never returned to their people, and so the Creeks termed them the "straged off," or Seminoles.—[New York Journal.

Quite Superfluous.

Mr. Spooning—May I give you some little token which will help you to remember me?

Miss Turtle—It isn't necessary. I have that dead feeling.—[Detroit Free Press.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

The Philosopher Booming Texas Right Along.

Progress, Thrift and Industry Noted All Around

Just think of it—Georgia has been settled over 200 years—has been in the Union 116 years. Texas achieved her independence in 1835 and was admitted into the Union in 1845 and here she is in her full manhood and abreast with any of her sister states in the east. Her progress has been wonderful, for she has no seacoast to speak of and for years was settled with savages and speckled with outlaws and desperadoes who had fled from justice in the older states—where they have all gone I do not know, but you can't find a more peaceful, law-abiding population anywhere than you now find in Texas. More than that, you can't find a people more advanced in civilization, more hospitable, more willing to give and take. The press and pulpit are the best indices of a community and you can't find better editors or preachers anywhere. Somebody laid the foundations of this commonwealth broad and deep and I am proud to know that Georgians had a good deal to do with it. Mirabeau Lamar and Rusk were both Georgians. Miss Virginia Trontman, of Macon, made the first lone star flag and presented it to the company who came out here to avenge the massacre of Fannin and his comrades, who were Georgians. From that flag Texas took its name as the lone star republic in 1835. Mirabeau Lamar was the hero of San Jacinto. To him Santa Anna delivered his sword where he surrendered. He gave it to his nephew, Larrimier Lamar, who lived at Cedartown and whom I often saw in Rome. He died in the house of Judge Borders at Cedartown, and through gratitude for his kindness gave him the sword. Judge Borders refused to part with it, though often importuned, but now he is dead, and as some of his sons have settled in Texas it is believed that the sword of Santa Anna will be presented to the state by them. That is right. They ought to do it and I believe they will.

Of course eastern Texas became settled first for it was more like Georgia and Alabama and Tennessee. There were woods and running water and the soil was mixed with sand and clay, but in later years the settlers ventured into the prairies and railroads followed them and more immigrants followed the railroads. The cry is still they come. Every train brings them but the broad acres seem boundless and the influx of thousands seem to make but small impressions. The capabilities of a single county are just immense for there are no mountains no hill sides, no poor lands no waste. At Mexico they market 80,000 bales of cotton and it is all made in Limestone county. At Ennis they market 60,000 bales and it is made in Ellis county. A cotton man told me that nobody need depend on a short crop in that region for it never happened. For fear somebody may be deceived let me say that Mexia is pronounced Mahayer with accent on the second syllable—and Bexar is pronounced Bayer—and Slano is pronounced Yanno—Mexia has only 3,000 people but you would think it had 10,000 from the signs. The town is crowded with wagons and the cotton bales cover acres of ground. The railroad can't take it away half as fast as it comes. Every store is occupied and everybody at work. They have the best of schools, and teachers and don't owe their preachers a dollar. Their cemetery is adorned with gravel walks and flowers and evergreens. Trinity college is not far away and I met about fifty of the young men and their honored President, Dr. Cockerell. It alarms me and humbles my pride to stand up before such cultured audiences as I find in Texas.

But cotton is not all you find in these cotton regions. There was a county fair in full blast at Minneapolis and the exhibits of corn and oats and hay and potatoes were splendid. The horticultural display surpassed anything that we can show in the east, and as for pollution it as thick as the leaves on the trees or the grass on the plains. Everybody reads it and talks it, but nobody gets mad. The Dallas News and the Fort Worth Gazette and the Houston Post are everywhere. I heard Farmer Shaw speak at Athens to a large crowd of Hoxgites, I don't think there were a dozen Clark men present. They won't go unless there is a joint discussion. Farmer Shaw made a capital speech and I congratulated him and said it was the best speech I had heard since I had been in Texas. He thanked me—and then asked who else I had heard and I said "nobody." Next day I heard a negro preacher talk for Clark. He said he was born in Scotland, educated in Canada and naturalized in Texas. He tore his hair and gesticulated around smartly and used big words like Shekana and Cherubic and Seraphim and said that nobody who said he was speaking for revenue only was a liar.

One thing he said was impressive. "I thank God," said he "that the time has come, the long expected time, the first time in the history of our race where the negro's vote will be counted. Whether we vote for Rose or for Clark or for Nugent our vote will be counted. Where a southern negro votes for a republican it is now with a notch on a stick for it will not be counted, but now we negroes have no republican candidate in Texas, we have met in convention and resolved to support Judge Clark and our votes will be counted. Then let us stand by our southern friends hereafter and hold the balance between them. The north has never done anything for us and never will.

This reminds me of the quarrel I overheard in the cars between two darkies. One was a Methodist and he said "the Methodist was the oldest religion in America and Mr. Wesley brought it over here in a ship and started it all over the country." The other was a Baptist and he said, "I say de oldest religion, God knows when you don't know what your talking about. De Baptist religion is de oldest in de world. Old Bush was de first Baptist. He baptized all over him and under him and all round him for 10 or 40 days and I only wish he were a Baptist about he stands de ground where he once walked de earth or dey pass." He said the other "word he kept on talkin' 'bout Bush for when he couldn't get no water, he walked up and down and around and out in de woods and prayed and sung and when he got ready he went down to de water and baptized himself." Well, I don't know about that, but I do know that both parties, negroes and all are for Cleveland and so Mr. Cleveland and I have concluded to keep heads off of the fight as I let the procession proceed.—BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

THE LABOR WORLD.

WORKERS in wheat-fields in India receive $3 a month.

AFTER ten weeks' vacation the green glass blowers have resumed work.

THE mule spinners up in Dover, N. H., are "doking" for a fifty-eight-hour week.

ON English street railways the hours of work are from thirteen to fifteen and a half daily.

OFFICIAL statistics show that in 1891 wages were reduced in 229 towns in Germany.

MEN going to Chicago to find work in any trade will find about five applicants for every situation in the city.

THE Chicago Seamen's Union has succeeded in raising the wages of its members from $2.50 to $3 per day.

THERE are about 800 women employed in the postal telegraph service of London, or about twenty-five per cent.

THOUSANDS of building trades workmen are out of employment in Vienna, Austria, where building has almost come to a standstill.

THE National German Typographical Union now has twenty-two local unions in different parts of the country affiliated with it.

THE Supreme Court of Rhode Island has handed down a decision affirming the constitutionality of the Weekly-Payment Law in that State.

GERMAN artificial flower makers who got $15 a month a short time ago now only get $10 per month. Their wages have been reduced all around.

ANNA PAWLIK, a factory girl, of Czernowitz, Austria, has been sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment for trying to organize a union of her trade.

STATISTICS given out by the Bureau of Labor Statistician show that the daily wages of coal miners in Illinois have increased during the year 15.6 per cent.

AN Employers' Union has been formed in South Australia. Its constitution says that the object of the organization is "to protect employers against the ever growing opposition shown by employes."

NOTICES were posted at the Crescent Steel Works, Pittsburg, Penn., announcing a reduction of ten per cent. in the wages paid to the employes. The company employs about 800 men and makes all the finer grades of steel.

THE NATIONAL GAME.

PRESIDENT HARRISON is fond of baseball.

CINCINNATI has released Pitcher Mullin.

THIS has been a year of bitter disappointment.

JOYCE, of the Brooklyns, is a failure as an outfielder.

PITTSBURG now has a very fast outfield—almost equal to Boston's or Cleveland's.

ANSON, of Chicago, has been in active service on the diamond for eighteen years.

HARRINGTON, Cincinnati's cast-off catcher, has the best average of all the League backstops.

CHILDS, of Cleveland, has made more runs than any other League player, and Beauchamps, of Brooklyn, more hits.

BROUTHERS has lost a great share of his popularity in Brooklyn, and may not cover first base there next season.

RICHARDSON leads all the short stops of the League in fielding, and is the only Washington player who leads in any position.

IT is a long time since the big League has seen a left-handed throwing first baseman such as New York's new man, Kasier, is.

ANSON, of Chicago, is in favor of doing away with bunt hits and gloves for everyone except the first baseman and catcher.

NEW YORK has five remarkable base runners in Fuller, Doyle, Keefe, Burke and Lyons. McMahon is the only real slow runner on the team.

CAPTAIN CONSIDINE has had the laugh on his old team this season. In each half Cincinnati has won six out of seven games from St. Louis, or a total of twelve out of fourteen games played.

ONE feature of the make-up of the Cleveland team to which credit enough is not given is the number of all-around players. Davis, O'Connor and Tebeau are three particularly valuable men in this respect.

UNOFFICIAL averages show that Keefe, of Philadelphia, and Young and Cuppy, of Cleveland, are the most effective pitchers in the League. Boston's great pitchers, Nichols and Stivetts, rank as eleventh and twelfth.

DANIELS, of Chicago, in batting averages is head and shoulders above all the third basemen in the League, but Shindle, of Baltimore, leads them all in the fielding, with Nash, of the Bostons, and Farrell, of Chicago, next.

BASEBALL interest everywhere seems to flag the game in New York is receiving an extra Anson's transplantation from Chicago to the metropolis would in the present mode of managing such a result, not be necessarily pernicious with New York partisans of the Manhattan game.

If you are sured on Cleveland and want to vote a good ticket vote for Bidwell and Cranfield. That is the crystal fount ticket.

Cleveland will be our next President and times will then improve. Don't throw away your vote in Chilton by voting against him.

Why throw your vote away in an effort to help Harrison? There is consternation now in the camp of the "Grand Old Party of scoundrelism and corruption" for Cleveland is going to win.

Mrs. Lease says that there is no prospect of dividing the solid South, so she has stopped trying to fool the people and is now making speeches for Harrison. She has been frightened at the fact that the ½ party will elect Cleveland by taking western states from Harrison.

The VIEW could not desire a higher compliment than the following from the Age-Herald:

We congratulate Editor Haywood Lawrence, of the CHILTON VIEW, on having conducted his paper to its eleventh birthday. It is one of the most useful weeklies in Alabama and has always preserved a delightful independence in its tone.

The Democratic and Republican parties are charged with being corrupt in their methods. We do not attempt to defend the methods of any political party, having lived long enough to observe that every human organization contains some bad people and is more or less corrupt. We believe also that if all the wicked people were crowed out of the world there would not be enough folks left to attend to business.

Kolb's majority in Chilton county was 1092. Chilton is one of the counties in which the Chicago Inter Ocean says great fraud was perpetrated at the August election. In view of the fact that the Chicago Inter Ocean is the leading republican paper of the northwest, it is now in order for J. Crank Manning to wire the editor of that paper his views regarding such a statement being made by one of his own household.—Shelby Chronicle.

One result of Mr. Whitelaw Reid's effort to capture the votes of the Typographical Union through the purchase of the Union Printer is the formation of a Cleveland Printer's League, which reports over 1,000 signatures already on its rolls, and which has adopted resolutions like the following:

Resolved:—That we look on any recognition given labor by Whitelaw Reid under extreme pressure of political expendiency as an insult to Unionism when used as a bait for votes.

About the slickest looking individual we saw during a recent visit to Birmingham, was "Sumpter's old pest" and Alabama's new post, P. G. Bowman, the third party idol, the great pretended deliverer of the horny-handed sons of toil. He was in a gropp of nicely dressed gentlemen but was decidedly the most fastidiously attired of any in the group. The only one having on kid gloves and carrying a cane. And this is the man whose great heart is swelling, almost to bursting, with sympathy for the poor wool-hat, jeans-breeches farmers. Bah! As long as the campaign boodle holds out, and no longer, can they count on such as he.—Northport Breeze.

There are a good many white men in our county who do not want to vote for either Weaver or Cleveland. In such case they can vote the prohibition ticket. But they should remember that Mr. Kolb says he will vote for Cleveland. He no doubt expects to be in the race for Governor as a Democrat two years hence and only those who voted the Cleveland ticket will be in the party to help him get the nomination. The third party will be dead after the 8th of November, Weaver and Mrs. Lease having already stopped trying to fool anybody on that score. The people whom Weaver will fool are all in the South. Chilton county might possibly go for Weaver but he will never know it, and it will do him no good. Cleveland will be elected.

Flying Against Providence.

That was a happy argument used by Congressman Moses in his Cullman speech. He said the third party wanted to make everybody rich, but if they did, it would make Christ a liar, for He said, "The poor ye have always with you." Congressman Moses has a Biblical name, and naturally his thoughts turn toward Biblical illustrations. The one just quoted is certainly a knock-down argument. It would overthrow the plan of salvation to do away with the poor people. The third party is flying in the face of Providence in this blasphemous business. If there were no poor people, there would be nobody in heaven, for a rich man can no more enter the kingdom of heaven than a camel can go through a needle's eye. Then what would the preachers and the moralist and the newspapers do if there were no poor people? They would have nothing to talk about. The third party itself would be wiped off the face of the earth. The moralists now tell us that the prevalence of poverty shows it is a blessing, for the Almighty wouldn't allow it to be so universal if it was a curse. This pleasing plausibility would be overthrown if poverty was abolished. We beseech the third party to stay its hand ere it is too late. Do not attempt to overturn the Divine plan, as did Beelzebub, or you will perish with all the nations that forget God.—Age-Herald.

He Did Nothing.

Longshore, fusion candidate for Congress in this district, was a member of the last Legislature, and the editor of the Jacksonville Republican, who was also a member of the body, has the following to say concerning Longshore's work or rather neglect to work while there:

Longshore said here that he was out of the House when the bill passed to put poor men in the chaingang for getting into debt. He ought not to have been out when so important a bill was under consideration. The bill was set as a special order for a certain hour that day and the House calendar for that day showed that, and Longshore knew it and he should have been present to have protected the tenant farmers and working people, whose votes he is now seeking. The House Journal says he was present that day and working on other bills. Besides the Judiciary Committee, of which Longshore was a member, reports the bill favorably. Being a lawyer, he must have seen the terrible effect and monstrous injustice of the bill. Why did he not fight it in the committee? Why did he, on the contrary, join the other members of his committee in recommending its passage? The bill involved both the honor and the liberty of the working people of Alabama. It was cunningly framed and few members of the House understood its import. But Longshore knew it and he failed to sound the note of warning. His excuse now is too thin. When the bill reached the Senate it was denounced as infamous, and was defeated, but the people owe Longshore no thanks for its defeat. If the matter had depended on him, the tenant farmers of Alabama would be to-day practically in peonage. And he claims to be one of the deliverers!

Buying the Presidency.

Pittsburg Post.

One of Harrison's leading newspaper supporters in Pittsburg, the Dispath, announces with evident glee that, while money has been plentiful during the campaign with the Republican National Committee, "next week the goodly sum already at their disposal will be swelled by a round million of good crisp dollars, which can be used to great advantage during the latter days of the campaign, and especially on the last (election) day." If it had been added for the purchase of voters to stay away from the polls or vote the Republican ticket the full meaning of the boast could not have been made plainer.

"This big sum," the same authority adds, "is the donation of protected manufacturers. It will be expended in New York in an attempt to carry the State for Harrison."

Here we have evidence of the bargain that makes itself. The protected manufacturers are voted tariff subsides on condition that they disgorge part of their enormous profits to aid in carrying elections for the Republican party. "Vote us into power, and we will vote you prohibitory taxes that will enable you to maintain prices to suit yourselves and protect your trusts and monopolies." That is what the Republican bosses say to the manufacturers. They reply with the cash, a million dollars, "to be used on election day."

LEGISLATING FOR FARMERS.

Almost without any exception the men in Alabama who have left the Democratic party, and joined the party whose victory means perpetuation of high tariff taxation, and enactment of force bill legislation, are farmers. As a rule they have always been conservative, and no one can doubt the honesty of their motives, no matter what position they take. They are unreasonable, however, who hold the Democratic party responsible for any lack of legislation, in which they are interested. That party has not been in a position to pass a law since 1860. The best they have been able to do was to prevent a great deal of vicious legislation. By its persistent advocacy of lower taxes, of economy in administration and of the rights of the States and individuals it has been growing in power and influence until now all the signs point to such a sweeping victory as will give it the Presidency and both Houses of of Congress. Then the era of belief will come. It can not come before and will never come through such a political movement as that which put out Weaver as a Presidential candidate.

Alabama farmers and workingmen have no cause of complaint against the Democratic party and for them to turn against it would be the basest ingratitude. Last summer Judge Oliver J. Semmes, of Mobile, who is very careful, conservative and accurate in statement, made a speech in Mobile county, which every farmer and workingman disposed to grumble at the Democratic party ought to read. In it he recited various acts of the General Assembly in aid of our agricultural interests. He showed conclusively that the farmers have always been in possession of the State government, and have invariably secured their demands at the hands of the Democratic party. He set out and commented upon the following provisions of our constitution and statutes enacted at various times:

Article 10, Section 1 of the Constitution of this State to the value of $1,000, to be selected by such resident shall be exempted from sale or execution, or other process of any court issued for the collection of any debt.

Section 2.—Every homestead, not exceeding eighty acres and the dwelling and appertenances therein to be selected by the owner thereof and not in any city, town or village, or in lieu thereof at the option of the owner, any lot in the city, town or village with the dwelling and appertenances therein owned and occupied by any resident of this State and not exceeding the value of $2,000 shall be exempted from sale or execution or any process from a court.

Section 2512 of the code—The wages salaries or other compensation to laborers, employes, residents of this State for personal services to the amount of $25 per month shall be exempt from garnishment.

Sections 4519—The following property, to be selected by the head of each family: Household and kitchen furniture, not to exceed in value $150, one cart or wagon, two cows and calves, twenty head of stock hogs, all poultry, all agricultural products of the preceding year which are on hand, in the hands of the producers, on the first day of January thereafter, provisions or supplies on hand for the current year, for the use of the family and the making of the crop, all looms and spinning wheels kept for the use of the family, all wearing apparel of the family, farming tools to the value of $25, one sewing machine in each family, where the taxable property does not exceed $250.

Section 2890.—No execution or other legal process must be levied upon a growing or ungathered crop of any description except for the purpose of enforcing liens upon such crop for rent, advances or labor.

Section 2546.—In favor of widow $1,000 to be selected and set apart from administration.

Section 2545—Additional articles—All the wearing apparel of the decedent and the widow and the minor children all yarn and cloth on hand intended for their use and consumption, all books kept for use in the family, all family portraits and pictures, all grain, stores and groceries on hand necessary for the support of the family for twelve months after the decedent's death, and all bedding and household and kitchen furniture necessary for the use and comfort of the family.

Any person who steals any horse, mare, gelding, colt, filly, jack, jenny, ewe, or animal of the cow kind, hog, sheep, goat, or any part of any outstanding crop of corn or cotton, and any person who knowingly, willfully and without the consent of the owner thereof enters upon the lands of another and cuts and carries off any timber or rails of the value of $25 or more, with the intention to convert the same to his own use, is guilty of grand larceny, and on conviction must be imprisoned in the penitentiary for not less than one or more than ten years.

Any person who buys, sells, receives, barters, or disposes of any cotton, corn, wheat oats, peas, or potatoes, after the hour of sunset or before the hour of sunset of the next succeeding day is punishable by fine or imprisonment.

Any person who knowingly takes, receives any cotton or other farm produce upon which there is a lien for rent or advances is similarly punishable.

Any person who cuts down, deadens, girdles or destroys or takes away, if already cut down or fallen, any cypress, pecan, oak, pine, cedar, poplar, walnut, hickory, or wild cherry tree, or sapling of that kind, on lands not his own, willfully and knowingly, without the consent of the owner of the land must pay to the owner $10 for every such sapling and for every other tree or sapling hereinbefore described so cut down, deadened, girdled, destroyed or taken away, $5.

Acts of 1890.—That all State, county and municipal taxes on privileges are admitted and released to all agricultural fairs which may hereafter be granted or sold by them and conducted on the grounds during the exhibitions of such fairs on which a tax is levied, or may hereafter be levied by the State, county or municipal authority, provided no game of chance shall be licensed.

Act of 1890.—That the sum of $2,500 be appropriated out of any money in the treasury to the credit of the department of Agricultural Society of the State for the year 1891 to be used by the Executive Committee of said Society for promoting the objects of said Society.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation or association to collect money from any person or persons for storage or as storage, upon cotton, grain or farm produce of any kind not actually produced or controlled by the person obligating himself to store the

ALABAMA WESTERN RAILWAY.

Articles of incorporation have been filed in the secretary of state's office by the following parties who propose building the Alabama Western railway.

W. P. Jackson and W. H. Jackson, of Salisbury, Md; H. B. Phillips, of Suffolk, Va., George B. Robertson, of Maplesville, Ala; D. B. Cannon, of Whaleyville, Va; Wilber F. Jackson, of Baltimore; Isaac N. Jackson, of Washington; Lester C. Smith, of Montgomery.

Said railroad is proposed to commence near the line of the South and North Alabama railroad at or near Clanton, Ala., and run towards Maplesville, and in the counties of Chilton, Bibb, Perry and Hale, to a point on the line of the Alabama Great Southern railroad, at or near Cincinnati junction. The Capital stock to be $1,000,000 in shares of $100 each.

Hon. Gaston A. Robbins was in Chilton last week and made a speech at the county Alliance meeting. Dr. Groce, of Talladega, was also present and addressed the assemblage. Mr. Robbins was in fine spirits and reports that his prospects of election by a handsome majority are very bright indeed.

The "print." in the VIEW office saw a picture of Gen. Weaver the other day stealing hens from a poor woman and it inspired him to produce the following:

"James B. Weaver is a d——l and guilty of many sins,
'Twas he who robbed defenseless women of hogs and hens."

Persimmons are ripe, and are abundant all around Clanton. Persimmons are said to be a great thing in hard times—they draw one's stomach up to fit his rations, serving this purpose better when not quite ripe.

There is a citizen of Clanton who does some work besides his regular vocation, and what he has done at his home during the past six months will be mentioned. Noticing at the State Fairs what a variety of products Mr. J. R. Beard managed to obtain from the soil of Chilton, he started into see what he could do for himself. In the spring he had all the strawberries, fruit and vegetables that his family could use, during the summer in addition to vegetables he had a crop of melons and enough peaches, pears and apples to meet family wants and put up forty quart jars of preserves and jellies for winter use and several gallons of pickles. At the present time his family are getting from the same garden a sufficiency of butter beans, tomatoes, okra and egg plants for table use. He did not plant turnips because they are not relished, but has an ample supply of collards for the winter and early spring. This citizen does not care to have his name mentioned, and the matter is given publication merely to hint that there is no reason to starve in this country. This gentleman only gave about two hours work a day to a garden of less than half an acre. Any one else can do as well. Time given to politics, base ball or loafing can be spent in this way and with equal pleasure and diversion, and far more profit. The gentleman mentioned that his wife would have raised a large number of chickens but hawks managed to raise most of them before she could.

There is no better medicine for family use than Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Their sugar-coating makes them easy and even agreeable to take, and as they contain no calomel or other injurious drug, they are perfectly safe for patients of any age.

The farmers are taking advantage of the pleasant weather in gathering very good crops of corn, peas and potatoes.

Mr. Beaden is adding to our growing town by building a new house.

Ex-Gov. Jackson, of Maryland, his brother, a large banker, and another brother who is worth three million dollars, all of the same State, honored our town the past week with a visit in the interest of their large lumber mill, which will be built at the old ford of Byrd's Creek. An immense body of splendid pine timber has been purchased of Mr. Howison, which will require the largest mill that has ever been in this county. And with a new railroad in prospect, we think nothing can hold back our state foundation towns this time. Rambler.

INVITES YOU.

EDITOR CHILTON VIEW:—An meeting will be held with Chestnut Creek Baptist Church, on Sunday, the 30th inst., for the purpose of undenominational religious exercises, a full notice of which appeared in the VIEW of last week, and as I am pastor of the church I know that I am not trespassing by extending an invitation to our friends at a distance to visit us on that occasion, and I hope that good results to us all will grow out of our meeting.

DEDICATORY EXERCISES

Of the Great Columbian Exposition at Chicago.

Immense Throngs Take Part in the Services.

A chicago special says: The program of the celebration proper commenced Wednesday morning with the arrival of eminent officers, diplomats, etc. In the afternoon the last of the militia arrive and the celebration by the public schools takes place, followed in the evening by a reception and banquet at the auditorium. Thursday morning is the civic parade, with 75,000 people in line. Friday morning the procession of the guests of the day will start from the auditorium for Jackson park.

The parade will be reviewed in Washington park by Vice-President Morton. At noon the dedication exercises take place. In the evening will be witnessed the inaugural ceremonies of the world's congress at the auditorium, with an oration by Archbishop Ireland. In the evening, the fire works display. Saturday morning, dedication of the state buildings, and in the afternoon military manoeuvers.

Sixteen hundred tickets to the dedicatory ceremonies were stolen from the office of Secretary Culp, of the Ceremonies' committee and are on the market and a large number of forged tickets also.

The school children, Wednesday morning, celebrated "Columbus Day." Youthful enthusiasm was given the widest play. A committee representing the state and city superintendents had arranged a programme for the celebration in the public schools, and the children executed this order of exercises with vim when school opened.

No union or concentration of pupils was attempted, but exercises began simultaneously in scores of school buildings. The rooms were all decorated appropriately to the occasion, and was to commemorate the great discoverer. The first exercise was the reading of President Harrison's proclamation.

This was followed by a flag raising, and the pupils saluted the colors. They also pledged their allegiance to the flag in a concert, and sang "America."

The next few hours of the programme was the reading of the Scriptures or some acknowledgement of the Divine Being. The schools then joined in singing "Columbus Day," after which the programme was varied according to grade. In the primary grade the little ones recited patriotic verses and sang songs, while in the grammar and high school grades historical essays were read, declamations delivered and also singing.

THURSDAY'S BIG PARADE.

In glittering sunshine and bracing air the people assembled in Chicago enjoyed a magnificent parade Thursday. Hundreds of thousands crowded the town. The people in town were early astir though the booming of cannon to signal the start of the procession was not heard until 11 o'clock. Out from the crowded hotels and from boarding houses on the outskirts, the people came—even before sunrise. They brightened the streets with movement and with the color of countless vivid badges. The police at 7 o'clock closed all bridges which cross the city's turbid and filthy river. At 10 o'clock the line of march was clear. It was several miles long. Vice President Morton, under a civil escort, took his position on the reviewing stand at 11 o'clock. Soon after 11 o'clock three guns spoke out the signal for the parade to move, various bodies falling in from the streets opening in the route of march. On the streets the crowd was something fearful. Chicago has at different times handled many throngs of visitors, but this one was away beyond anything she ever dealt with. It is estimatimated that at least 300,000 viewed the parade.

HEAD OF THE PROCESSION.

At the head of the parade, to hold in check the dense crowd which thronged the sidewalks and forced itself into the streets, came the police mounted. Directly behind came Sousa's Marine band. The visitors from beyond the Rio Grande were given a hearty welcome. As quickly as the last strains from one band died away another took it up and from the beginning to the end of the march was continuous martial music. At the heels of the Mexican band was Major General Miles, grand marshal of the parade. Behind him clattered a swarm of aides. The Chicago Hussars, in black with white trimmings, was the escort to the mayor of Chicago. The city council in carriages followed and then came the governors of the different states, each surrounded by a brilliant staff.

The second grand division was led by the Independent Order of Foresters, 1,200 strong, who made a fine appearance. In their rear was a gigantic float representing "Columbus Discovering America." Behind the float tramped three hundred Grecians, wearing decorations of their nation's flag, blue and white. Eight thousand men of the Patriotic Order of Sons of America were over an hour going past. Then came the descendants of the men who had won the battle of Boyne, their persons and banners bearing knots of their favorite orange ribbons. Three thousand five hundred of the Chicago Turner Society, headed by the national commissioner of the order, looked exceedingly well. Following came 700 men of Bohemian Turner Societies and 500 German veterans who marched proudly beneath the red, white and blue of their adoption and the red, white and black, under which they had marched in less peaceful times. There was a strong reminder of the heather as 1,200 bonnie Scots hove in sight. Every man wore a tartan and bag pipes shrieked shrilly. Two hundred and fifty men of the Royal Scots regiment, clad in royal Stuart plaid, called for loud cheers of approval. The black and gold of the Sons of St. George followed the Highlanders. Then came Croatvan and Polish societies, about 2,000 strong. After them came ten times as many in ranks and with its proportionate number of men, and every man a Swede.

In four carriages were sixteen pretty girls representing the various national female costumes of Sweden and Norway.

The next division was made up of 2,000 boys from the city grammar and high schools. Then tramped eight representatives of every Grand Army post in Chicago and Cook county, reinforced by numerous delegations from neighboring cities. The veterans were not above 800 strong and in their rear a fleet representing the famous old Monitor as she appeared before fighting the Merrimac. The Sons of Veterans, the Modern Woodmen of America, the uniformed rank of the Royal Arcanum and Knights of Pythias, 2,000 men in all, closed this division.

The third grand division, under the command of Chief Marshal Cahill, was led by the marshal, surrounded by a large staff in whose wake came fifty mounted men, members of the uniformed Knights of St. Patrick. A second sub-division of this portion of the parade was the uniformed rank of the Catholic Order of Foresters, 800 strong, and comprising ten separate commanderies. A third sub-division, headed by the Third Cavalry band had 4,440 men in line and showed banners of forty-five courts and contained ten bands.

A fourth division had 2,500 men and thirty-six courts. A fifth division contained 2,644 men in thirty-one courts. Seven hundred men of the Hibernian Rifles came after the Foresters and behind these were 2,000 men of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and then 3,000 more men of the Archdiocese Union, thirty-three societies being represented. St. John the Baptist Society, with 1,000 men, were next in line. Miscellaneous Catholic societies, numbering 1,200 men in the aggregate, closed the grand vision and the parade.

The line of march was as follows: Michigan avenue north to Van Buren street, west on Van Buren to Wabash avenue to Lake street, west on Lake to State street, south on State street to Adams street, west on Adams to Franklin, south on Franklin street to Jackson, east on Jackson to State street.

THE COTTON INDUSTRY.

Interesting Statistics Sent Out by the Census Bureau.

Georgia Leads in Cotton Manufacturing in the Southern States.

The census bureau at Washington issued a bulletin Friday on the cotton industry of the United States. The growth of the cotton manufacturing industry of the United States, says the bulletin, has been constant. One of the most gratifying features of the situation is the extension of this industry in the south, where a marked addition is shown in the number of cotton mills established and successfully operated. The magnitude of this movement is demonstrated by the fact that the consumption of raw cotton in the southern states in 1890 exceeded that of 1880 by 166,308,899 pounds, while in New England, the chief seat of this manufacture, the excess of consumption in 1890 over that of 1880 was only 172,714,884 pounds. Nevertheless, the development of cotton manufacture throughout the country, measured by any test, was large and healthy. The tables given do not include returns of special mills employed in working raw cotton, waste or yarn into hose, webbing, tapes, mixed goods or fabrics, which are not classed as specific manufactures of cotton.

A COMPARATIVE STATEMENT.

The general facts attending the increase are shown in the following comparative statement: Number of establishments reported in 1890, 904; in 1880, 756; percentage of increase 19.58. Capital invested in 1890, $354,030,843; in 1880, $208,280,846; percentage of increase 69.97. Employes, including officers and clerks in 1890, 221,585; in 1880, 174,659; increase 26.87. Wages paid in 1890 to operatives, $66,024,588; in 1880, $42,040,510; increase, 57.05. Wages paid officers and clerks in 1890, $3,464,748. Miscellaneous expenses $17,996,135. No comparisonsup on the last two items. The cost of materials used in 1890, $154,593,868; in 1880, $103,206,347; increase, 51.26. Value of the product in 1890, $267,981,724; in 1880, $193,090,110; increase, 39.51. Number of spindles in 1890, 14,068,108; in 1880, 10,653,435; increase, 32.24. Number of looms in 1890, 324,866; in 1880, 225,759; increase, 43.90. Pounds of raw cotton used in 1890, 1,117,945,776; in 1880, 750,843,981; increase, 48.99 per cent.

The public is cautioned, however, touching certain items that more thorough inquiries employed at the present census will cause the increase to appear greater than it really is. Especially is this the case in regard to wages, which have increased 57.05 per cent, while the number of hands employed has increased 26.85 per cent. In both instances the number of and amount paid to officers and clerks are excluded. When compared with all hands employed, not including officers and clerks, it will be seen that the annual earnings in 1890 were $301.65 as against $243.65 in 1880, an increase of $58 a year, or 23.80 per cent. There has undoubtedly been a positive increase in these earnings during the decade. The increase in wages may not have been so great as indicated by this comparison, as the excess of increase in the number of operatives between 1880 and 1890 was in a large measure in the class earning the highest rate of wages, namely men, while the number of children employed has hapily decreased.

IN THE SOUTHERN STATES.

In the southern states the number of establishments reporting was, in 1890, 239; in 1880, 161. The capital invested in 1890, $88,827,308; in 1880, $17,375,897. Number of hands employed in 1890, 87,168; in 1880, 16,741. Wages paid in 1890, $7,817,060; in $2,750,986. Cost of materials in 1890, $37,708,857; in 1880, $9,999,145. Value of products in 1890, $41,513 711; in 1880, $16,356,508. Number of spindles in 1890, 1,554,000; in 1880, 542,048. Looms in 1890, 36,-; in 1880, 11,898. Bales of cotton used in 1890, 533,818; in 1880, 182,349.

Georgia stands first in these statistics, reporting in 1890 fifty-three establishments, in 1880, forty. Capital in 1890, $17,664,675; in 1880, 6,848,657. Employes in 1890, 10,580; in 1880, 6,849. Bales of cotton used in 1890, 145,859; in 1880, 71,360.

South Carolina stands second with thirty-four establishments in 1890 against fourteen in 1880, and $11,141,888 capital in 1890 against $2,855,800 in 1880. Bales of cotton used in 1890 38 849, against 28,694. Employes 8,199 against 2,053.

North Carolina stands third in capital, the number of bales used and value of products being but a little behind South Carolina; but she reports ninety-one establishments in 1890 employing 8,742 hands against forty-nine establishments and 3,843 hands in 1880.

Seven Men Killed.

Seven men were killed and injured by an explosion of gas at the Philadelphia and Reading company's Sterling Run colliery at Shamokin, Pa., Friday. Of these five are dead and the remaining six so badly burned and mutilated that small hopes for their recovery are entertained.

TELEGRAPHIC GLEANINGS.

The News of the World Condensed Into Pithy and Pointed Paragraphs.

Interesting and Instructive to All Classes of Readers.

Colored people of Delaware have put out an independent republican ticket.

Three distinct shocks of earthquake were felt in Martinsville, Ind., Wednesday.

Denver, Colorado, has been selected as the place for holding the next general Episcopal convention.

The Telegraphers on the Cotton Belt railroad will be given the same schedule agreed upon by the Missouri Pacific.

C. Burkhalter & Co., wholesale grocers, New York, assigned Thursday. Preferences were given aggregating $183,166.

August Belmont, on Wednesday, bought the great stallion Rayon D'Or, from the estate of the late W. L. Scott for $32,000.

The international geographical congress, held in connection with the Columbus exhibition, was opened in Madrid, Spain, Tuesday.

Joseph Horne, the well known dry goods merchant and philanthropist of Pittsburg, Pa., died in Danville, N. Y., Wednesday night, aged 64, of apoplexy.

Fifteen buildings, dwellings or stores were burned at Chicago Tuesday morning. Two persons, at the least, lost their lives during the conflagration. The loss is $80,000.

A special from Boise City, Idaho, says: The supreme court has unanimously sustained the constitutionality of the Idaho test oath law. The decision will prevent the Mormons from votiug.

A Washington dispatch says: The supreme court, by Chief Justice Fuller, Monday, sustained the constitutionality of the Minor law providing for the election of presidential electors in Michigan by congressional districts.

A Philadelphia special of Tuesday says: The stockholders of the Bristol, Penn., rolling mills have decided to make an assignment. The liabilities of the company are about $110.000 and the assets are estimated at $70,000. It is said a new company will soon be formed.

The city of Paris broke the record from Queenstown, arriving at New York Wednesday, making the voyage in five days, fourteen hours and twenty-four minutes, the distance being 2,782 miles, an average of over 500 miles a day. This vessel soon becomes an American ship,

Columbus day was celebrated in all the public schools of New York City Thursday. The president's proclamation was first read and then the flag unfurled. Three cheers and a salute were given "old glory," after which allegiance was pledged to the flag, national airs sung, Bible selections read and patriotic addresses delivered.

A St. Louis dispatch says: The difference between the telegraphers of the Missouri Pacific system, some 975 in number, and the management was amicably adjusted Tuesday, by mutual concessions. The operators have secured and accepted the minimum of $50 per month on the main lines and $45 on the branches. All danger of a strike is now averted.

A Pittsburg, Pa., special says: The Carnegie Steel Company, limited, issued a circular Tuesday announcing the resignation of John A. Potter, as general superintendent of the Homestead mills, and his appointment as chief mechanical engineer. Chas. M. Schwab, general superintendent Edgar Tompson, plant, will succeed Potter at Homestead.

A dispatch has been received at the ministry of marine, in Paris, that removes whatever little anxiety was felt regarding the safety of the French force in Dahomey. Colonel Dodds, the commander of the expedition, telegraphs that the progress of the troops in the direction of Abomri, the capital of Dahomey, has been delayed by heavy rains. The French operations will therefore necessarily be more difficult than when good weather favored them.

A special of Wednesday from Toledo, O., says: Councilman Frank Tanner, the second of the boodlers, was arraigned for trial Wednesday afternoon and entered a plea of guilty, throwing himself on the mercy of the court. This has thrown the remaining five boodlers into consternation, and it is believed that all of them but one, Manchester, will also plead guilty. The indictment against Swain, who turned state's evidence, will be nol prossed.

A Washington special of Thursday says: The question of eligibility to congress of retired army officers, as presented in the case of General Catlin and General Sickles, nominated by the democrats in New York for congress, appears to be a new one and excited much interest at the war department. Legal officers of the department say that the question has never been presented to the department in a like form, and consequently there is no precedent to serve as a basis of opinion.

According to a New York dispatch of Wednesday, specialists in southern state securities say there is nothing new to be said relative to the refunding of the South Carolina state debt due July 1s, 1893. Gov. Tillman, who has just returned home, did not accomplish anything in the matter and certain southern capitalists are now trying to see what they can do, and say it might as well be understood first as last that nothing of value can be accomplished until some provision is made for the non-fundable bonds of the state. This, of course, must be settled by the legislature.

FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT.

A Gang Plank Gives Way, Hurling Many People Into the Water.

A London cablegram of Thursday says: "The Iaman steamer, "City of New York" was floating in her berth at the Alfred dock Wednesday evening when a frightful and peculiar accident occurred. Seven cabin officers started across the gangway toward the vessel. At the same time thirty of the crew started by the same gangway for the shore. The two parties met in the center and collided with crushing force, bursting the hand rails of the gangway, and the whole of the two parties fell into the water. The spectators succeeded in saving all the custom officers and a number of the crew. Some had been severely crushed and otherwise injured and one has since died. Nine are missing and a diver is searching for the bodies.

REID'S ACCEPTANCE

Of the Republican Vice-Presidential Nomination.

A special from New York says: Whitelaw Reid's letter of acceptance, addressed to the chairman of the republican notification committee, was made public Tuesday night. It is about five thousand words in length. He begins by saying "When the nomination with which the national convention has honored me, was formally announced by your committee, I accepted it at once. In doing so I accepted also the principles set forth in the resolutions adopted by the convention as the basis of my appeal to popular suffrage. To do other or less than this is, to any honorable man, an impossibility. A political party is an association of citizens seeking to have the government conducted in accordance with its views and presenting candidates whom it strives to elect for that purpose. To accept its nomination without intending to carry out its principles would be as dishonorable and as criminal as to procure goods under false pretenses.

"There will be no misunderstanding as to the purposes of the republican party in this contest, and no doubt as to the attitude of its candidates. What it intended has been set forth in language that cannot be mistaken, and they will strive by all lawful means in their power to enforce its plainly expressed will."

He points to the tariff and currency questions as the vital ones in this campaign. On the former question he uses the republican argument that the democrats favor free trade. He quotes Commissioner Peck's report at some length, and he dwells at some length upon the reciprocity features of the republican platform. On the subject of currency he says: "The lamented Garfield proudly claimed in 1880 that our paper currency is now as national as the flag; the purpose of our opponents is to sectionalize it again." He dwells on this as a "time of great prosperity and general contentment." Of the force bill question he says, "The clamor against this principle, if it means anything, means a purpose to nullify the fourteenth article of the constitution."

PORT ROYAL TO EUROPE.

A Direct Line of Steamers Between the two Points Proposed.

Mr. Pat Calhoun, of Georgia, Mr. Ernest Bigland, of London, and Mr. D. Steinmann Hghe, of Antwerp, were in Atlanta, Thursday in conference with prominent railroad officials upon the subject of establishing a direct line of ocean steamships between Port Royal, S. C., and London and Antwerp. These gentlemen have just completed an inspection of Port Royal and the harbor there, and they are assured proper encouragement by the railroads of the south, a direct line of steamers will at once be put on between that port and Europe. Mr. Bigland and Mr. Steinmann Hghe came to America to consumate such an enterprise. They have associated several prominent southerners with them—Mr. Pat Calhoun, Major T. P. Bianch Colonel Charles H. Phinizy and Mr. W. J. Craig. The party visited Port Royal, and every gentleman in it was highly pleased, especially the two European visitors. They were rather surprised that he port had never been utilized by Americans.

Mr. Bigland said, in regard to the establishment of the proposed line: "The company which I represent already has a freight line to America. It is the Cuban Steamship company, which has a line of freight steamers between London and Antwerp and Cuba. If we are given the proper encouragement by the southern railroads we will at once put on a line of freight steamers between Port Royal and Europe. The steamers are now being built for that purpose."

The gentlemen connected with the movement appear quite reticent, and have very little to say. They evidently mean business and it is easily apparent that the accomplishment of their plans means a great deal for the south. They have no connection with the movement to establish direct trade between Brunswick and Europe, and it is probable that both of these great projects may be realized in a short while.

MRS. LEASE TALKS.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean Has a Three Column Interview With her.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean of Monday morning publishes a three-column interview with Mrs. Mary E. Lease, the Kansas orator and third party organizer, in which she gives her experience during her late trip through the south. She thinks General Weaver did as well as any one could under the circumstances, but she asserts that she does not like Weaver to try to belittle the course of the southerners. She says the outrages were not committed by the young men and boys, but in many instances prominent men were leaders in the disturbances; in some cases organized party clubs; that instead of one egg being thrown at them there were a great many eggs thrown, and not by boys either. She declares the indignities offered General Weaver and party were not because of anything he said or had done, but because he was advocating the cause of the party that was threatening the local success of the democratic party. She says she found sectional feeling as "violent as ever the republicans had depicted it." She stands by her party, but says that if the vote for Weaver is to elect Cleveland it ought not to be given.

WATTERSON ACCEPTS

The Invitation to Deliver the Dedicatory Oration at the World's Fair.

A Chicago dispatch of Friday says: Since Senator Daniel, of Virginia, has declined to speak on dedication day in the place of Mr. Breckenridge, it is more than possible that Henry Watterson will be offered the place. President Palmer said that he was going to have a meeting of the board of control at once to have the matter brought up. The president declared that it would be a good thing to have Mr. Watterson speak and he was heartily in favor of the plan. Other world's fair authorities expressed themselves as much in favor of inviting Mr. Watterson and it is probable that this will be done.

WATTERSON ACCEPTS.

A later dispatch from Louisville, Ky., says: Henry Watterson, editor of the Courier Journal, has accepted an invitation to deliver the dedicatory address at the world's fair.

Horse Thieves Lynched.

A special of Monday from Cheyenne, Wyo., states that J. S. Bedford and Dob Burch, acquitted of horse stealing last fall in the charge of contempt of court, while on the way to jail handcuffed, were taken from the deputy sheriff and killed by masked men thirty miles from Douglas.

The Lapps.

The Lapps call their country Sabme or Same and themselves Samaleie, and the term lat has generally been supposed to be a contemptuous nickname given to them by foreigners, derived from the Finish "lappa," and meaning simply "land's end folk." A more plausible suggestion, however, is that of Professor Friis, of Christiania, who refers the term to an old Finnish root "lappas," signifying to roam or wander about, in allusion to their nomad habits. In the mouth of southern or more civilized Lapps it appears to have become synonymous with rude or barbarous, and is so applied by them to the less cultured northern communities.

Anthropologists seem to have some difficulty in assigning to the Lappe their exact place in the human family, but it may be safely affirmed that they are a combination of Caucasian and Mongolian types. Be this as it may, their physical characteristics are remarkable—decidedly more remarkable than attractive. They are probably the shortest race in the eastern hemisphere, unless it be Mr. Stanley's demoniacal dwarfs. A man over five feet in height would be a giant among them, and the women are rarely more than 4 feet 6 inches. They are also the shortest headed and the thinnest skinned people in the world. Some of them indeed are long headed enough in the intellectual sense, and know as well as any how to drive a bargain and deal with strangers, but they are none the less pre-eminently what the scientific people designate as "brachycephalic."—Good Words.

Watermelon Tests.

I draw my thumbnail over the melon, scraping off the thin, green skin. If the edges of the skin on each side of the scar are left ragged or granulated, and the rind under the scar is smooth, firm and white, and has something of a glossy appearance, the melon is ripe. But if the edges of the scar are smooth and even, and the thumbnail has dug into the rind in places, and the skin does not come off clean, then the melon is green. You can easily learn on two melons, one ripe, the other green, noting the difference after they have been opened.—Southern Stockman and Farmer.

French Dinners.

We dined in a little Parisian restaurant where Americans are in the habit of going to obtain those truly French delicacies, pork and beans, buckwheat cakes, corned beef, apple pie and oysters. I know a man from Chicago who dined at this restaurant every day during the entire month spent by him in Paris, and who at the end of that time, said that he was heartily sick of French cookery. Thus does the profound study of the manners and customs of foreign nations enlighten the mind and ripen the judgment.—"Thompson's Tombstone."

A Fair Offer.

Suitor (a practical man)—"Well, you have been paying for her board and clothes, and I have been paying for concerts, theaters, operas, and so on. No; I'll pay for the board and clothes, and if you foot the amusement bills, I don't think she'll miss anything."—New York Weekly.

Anxious to Learn.

Mamma—"In good time."

"But I don't want to wait."

"Why are you so impatient?"

"I heard the teacher tell th' history class that the old Romans had stone circus posters, and one of 'em had been found. I want to know wot it had on."—Street & Smith's Good News.

The Greatest Race on Record

Is the race for popularity won by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It took the lead at the start and distanced all competitors. It eradicates indigestion, malarial complaints, ailments of the bladder and kidneys, nervousness, neuralgia, rheumatism. Physicians commend, the public knows its value, the press endorses. Grand are its credentials, grander still its success.

HESTER'S ROMANCE.

The spring was very sweet that year; the orchard blossoms were heavy and rich on the fresh, warm air, and the Barnards' brown farmhouse with its mossy roof, fitted perfectly into the landscape of the gently undulating prairie land, but Joshua Barnard never noticed it; thirty years' companionship with his wife, Jane, had thoroughly eradicated the æsthetic part of his nature. She was a woman whose face gave one the impression that it had been rudely carved out with a sharp knife and not polished down; she accentuated this by dragging her hair back into a tight knot at the wrong angle of her head. Mrs. Barnard was noted in the country round about for her sharp voice, good butter and obstinacy.

How she was ever induced by her enduring husband to let him send their only daughter, Hester, away to school had been the marvel of the gossips for months. Whatever topic was introduced it always branched off on to the Barnards. Pity for the head of the family, backbiting for the wife, and covert, envious remarks for Hester were alluring snares, of wickedness that could not be resisted. Hester had come back that spring for good; her college days were finished and she was trying to settle down again in the old life that seemed a dream.

Four years of city life, with the refining influences she had met, had worked a marvellous change in the brown-eyed, quiet girl. She thought at first her mother and father had changed, and was puzzled, but when the real truth broke upon her, she felt suddenly alienated, as though she were a stranger. They were where she had left them, while she had moved a notch higher; it made her more tenderly kind towards her father, whom she loved; more charitable towards her mother, who was at once proud of her and dissatisfied, and on account of this sometimes trying. It hurt Hester to hear her mother's boast to a neighbor of her daughter's accomplishments; it filled her with chagrin to be pushed forward at the little gatherings, whose atmosphere had become distasteful, and to see the envious sneers on the faces of her former friends.

At first when she came back she had tried to meet them on the old footing, but she could not become interested in their gossip and beaux and they could not comprehend her. So little by little she fell back upon herself for companionship, much to the anger of Mrs. Barnard, who was ambitious for Hester to shine in the country side; her ambition went no higher.

"You are ungrateful, Hester!" she said sharply one evening, as she cleared the supper table. "Look at the money spent on your schooling, and now you won't go anywhere but stick at home like a nobody."

Hester did not reply—she had learned better—and stood looking out of the window in a hopeless sort of a way. She had earnestly tried to do her duty, but life seemed very hard of late, cut off from congenial pursuits and friends. Yes, it was the friends, she thought, with a flush.

"And then refusing to go to the sociable tomorrow night with Nat Parkins," her mother went on in her rasping voice, "when everyone will be there, and he is the richest farmer in this region, and all the girls would give their eyes"——

"Mother!" Hester broke in desperately at last, "I do all in my power to please you, but I will not go with Mr. Parkins—I detest him," and she fled to her room, where she threw herself sobbing upon her little white bed. She felt so hopeless, so homesick for—well, for what? And in her abandonment of grief she repeated a name to herself as if it comforted her. She had not known when she left the city how she loved Herbert Strong, who parted from her at the depot with that reproachful look in his eyes.

What caprice had moved her to tell him no? At that moment she felt as though she would give the world to pour out her sorrow and penitence to him, but he was lost to her—gone to some far Western town.

So she lay and sobbed herself sick. It was the natural result of her long weeks of self-controlled trouble; she had not so completely owned to herself before how much she regretted the past.

When she rose in the morning she saw such a white little face and swollen eyes in the glass that she dreaded to go down-stairs. A sort of apathy had seized upon her, however, and she quietly slipped into her place at the table with hopes that her mother would not notice her especially. But the sharp eyes of that busy woman took her daughter in quickly. She intended to watch her more closely hereafter; her dislike for Nat Parkins must be overcome.

"Hester," she cried in surprise, "what have you been doing to yourself?"

"Nothing," Hester said, wearily, bracing herself for the attack. Mrs. Barnard, after a moment's look, set down the coffee-pot and opened her lips, but suddenly, to everyone's surprise, Mr. Barnard, who usually kept a discreet silence during his wife's tirades, laid his toil-worn hand on his daughter's shoulder.

"Now, Jane!"—her husband spoke with the authoritative tone he rarely used save when his daughter needed defence—"I want you to drop this nonsense about marrying Hester off to Nat Parkins. He is not her kind at all." In his blind way Joshua Barnard felt the difference between his gentle daughter and the bluff, rough young farmer.

"After she went upstairs last night," he went on, "I passed under her window and the child was crying fit to break her heart, and look at her pale face this morning. Can you see it?"

"Yes, I see it," his wife said crossly. It always roused her temper to be opposed unexpectedly by her husband, for she usually had to submit. "I see it and it's all nonsense! Some good-for-nothin' city fellow, I'll warrant!" with which shot she left the table and began rattling the dishes in a way to prevent further conversation.

Joshua Barnard slowly left the house for the field. It was a new idea that his wife had suggested, yet Hester had never said anything to him about it, and there were few things she did not confide to him. He thought of it all the long, warm morning till the terrible heat drove all the workers to the welcome shade of the trees along the fence by the roadside.

The dust lay thick and dry on the ground, the insects shrilled monotonously—nothing stirred. A cloud of dust came down the road and Joshua Barnard and his men watched it curiously: who was foolish enough to drive horses so fast under such a blazing sun?

It did not take much to check the exhausted span of bays, who stood panting and dust-begrimed, and they turned to the light buckboard.

A man lay there, fallen under the seat, with his face a dark red and his clothes dust covered.

"Drunk!" was the disgusted cry, but Joshua Barnard, who looked more closely, said, "A sunstroke. Take him to the house carefully," and followed, wiping his heated brow. He felt charitable now towards all strangers. Was it not a stranger that Hester perhaps loved?

There was confusion in the brown farmhouse immediately, for Jane Barnard was in her element when she had a sick person on her hands, and she unceremoniously left Hester with the housework below while she took possession of the sick room. She was attracted by the unconscious man, with his handsome face and refined appearance.

"How is he?" Hester asked, when her mother finally descended.

"He'll be all right after my nursing," that worthy personage remarked, and forthwith launched into a glowing description of her patient.

Hester's curiosity was roused; so like from her mother's description, yet —. A wild thought flashed through her head, and she stole upstairs with a beating heart and paused on the threshold. She felt dizzy and closed her eyes. "It could not be," she kept saying; "he is miles away away from here." Yet when she finally did look at the unconscious face of the man before her a look of passionate joy came into her eyes.

"Thank Heaven, Herbert, darling!" she cried, and as if a spell were broken he looked at her. A smile of recognition came to his lips and with a murmured endearment he tried to draw her to him.

"I have found him, mother!" her daughter said, with a smile through her tears, and as though this explained it all she turned to her father's open arms.

When Herbert Strong recovered and went away with his young bride, even Jane Barnard had become reconciled to her new son-in-law, and never again in her life did she mention Nat Parkins's name. She accepted her defeat.

Interesting Census Returns.

The census returns furnish some very interesting reading. For instance, there were 334,194 families in the State of Tennessee with an average of 5.29 persons to a family. There were 323,136 dwellings in the State with an average of 5.47 persons to a dwelling. Of course there was no decimal fraction of a person in any dwelling, but the figures make the averages stated. The total number of dwellings in the United States in 1890 was 11,468,316, and the average number of persons to a dwelling was 5.45. The total number of families in this country was 12,690,152, and the average number to a family 4.93.—[American Farmer.

The United States is the richer by $2,000,000 in money orders never presented for payment.

Danger In Little Things.

"'Not dangerously hurt' is a comment frequently made by the press when detailing accidents," said Dr. Julius Browne at the Southern yesterday. "Now, all injuries, however slight, are dangerous. I have seen the bite of a mouse, the prick of a pin and a stubbed toe prove fatal. The extent of the danger of an injury depends upon the condition of the injured person's health and his vitality, or life force. Some people have a very tenacious hold on life while that of others is quite feeble. A delicate woman will sometimes survive injuries that would lay out your six-footer. A large number of those people who live to a ripe old age have one foot in the grave from their very infancy, while others who are perfect paragons of health and strength, are swept away by the first breath of disease. I was sitting in my office one day when a drunken day laborer walked in, swinging one arm with the hand of the other. It had been cut off by an engine, and he had picked it up and walked unassisted to my office for repairs. That same day I was sent for to attend a man who had a fingernail crushed off and was lying in a dead faint. I was once called on by a hotel porter who had a hole as large as a half dollar crushed in his skull by a slungshot. I dressed the wound, and he went to a dance that night and thrashed the fellow who had slugged him. The wound, which scarce discommoded him, would have proved fatal to 19 men out of 20. 'Not dangerously injured' carries no meaning to a physician."—[St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Why We Have Leap Year.

Why is it that there have to be leap years—that all our years are not of the same length? It arises from the fact that the year does not consist of an exact number of days. The length of the day and that of the year are the measures of the motions of the earth. The globe we live on moves in two ways. It turns itself around like a spinning top, and at the same time it goes steadily forward like a bullet shot from a gun. It turns itself once completely around in twenty-four of our hours, as shown by the clock; this amount of time we call a day. Its forward or onward motion carries it around the sun in a path that is nearly a circle; the time it takes to go completely around we call a year. The first motion gives us day and night, following each other in turn (the word "day" here having now a different meaning—namely, not twenty-four hours, but the time of daylight).

The second motion gives us days (that is, periods of daylight) growing gradually longer and then gradually shorter, one end of the earth turning more toward the sun for half the time and the other end for the other half; and this brings us summer and winter and the seasons. Now the length of the year is found to be nearly 365¼ times the length of the day of twenty-four hours; that is, the year is 365 days long and nearly six hours more. It is these six hours that give us leap years, and it is in the "nearly" that we find the reason for 1900 not being one of their number.

Wonderful Shawls.

I bought a shawl in Moscow, writes Frank G. Carpenter, which is so large that it would cover the biggest double bed in America and so fine that it will go through a lady's ring. It was made by the peasants of Orenburg, and is of the kind known as ring shawls. It was made entirely by hand. The fine lace work of these Russian peasants is wonderful. The yarnets made by them are noted all over Europe. Some of them bring $5 a yard. They make carpets which are equal to those of Persia and Turkey.

The Candle Business in Russia.

Russia burns more candles to her population than any other country in Europe. She uses about 60,000,000 pounds of candles every year. At the door of every great cathedral there are candle peddlers, who have counters before them and who sell candles to the worshipers as fast as they can hand them out. These men are dressed in the uniform of the church, and they take in pennies by the bushel. I watched a couple of them for a long time at the entrance of the Kazan Cathedral in St. Petersburg, and in the course of half an hour I saw at least 300 men, women and children buy candles. The interior of this church is as large as the hall of the House of Congress. Its halls were hung with golden icons and there were jeweled icons on the pillars and set into the solid silver altar of the back of the church. Before each icon there was a silver candlestick. The tops of these candlesticks were in the shape of a disc, and each top had a number of holes in which to stick candles. The worshipers trotted from one of these candelabra to another, lighting a candle before each and putting it up to burn before the picture.

Fast Oyster-Openers.

The crack oyster-openers of New York can easily hold their own against the rest of the world as "lightning operators," as they are called.

One of the veterans is Dick Balmer, who has opened 9000 oysters in a day of twelve hours, and he can now average 7500 in a day of twelve or thirteen hours' work.

Mike Foley, who may well be termed a lightning operator and is now in his fifties, has opened as many as 9500 oysters in one day, and on ordinary days, if he pushes himself, can easily get away with 8000 oysters. Of course, the oysters opened are large and small, just as they come, as if they were all small and round the opening could be done much more rapidly.

John Lahey is good for an average of 8000 a day, and so is an opener known among the oystermen as "Deaf George." In a trial of speed in opening 500 oysters, John Lahey probably cannot be beaten.

To open oysters rapidly of course requires a great deal of experience in handling them, but there also seems to be a knack about it that every oysterman cannot acquire. Some men, for instance, can only open 4000 oysters a day, and they will not go much above that after years of work in this line.—[New York News.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

He Descants Upon the Subject of Labor Strikes.

Employes Should Give Warning of Their Intention to Quit.

Strike for your altars and your fires!
Strike till the last armed foe expires.

That is beautiful poetry but it don't fit anything nowadays. These iron workers and car drivers and printers and telegraph operators have got no such excuse for striking. Right now I am disgusted with the whole business and my sympathy has all departed for parts unknown. Eight years ago I got penned up at Dennison, in this state, and had to stay there four days, for not a train was allowed to run. I never was so miserable and never felt so helpless and I hadent done anything to anybody to provoke such treatment. Now here it is again. The telegraph operators on the Santa Fe system that covers 3,000 miles in Texas, have all struck and the trains are afraid to run, and I don't know whether I can get anywhere that I wish to go. The newspapers don't know—nobody knows, for there is no telegraph on some of the lines except the railroad telegraph and that is silent now—as silent as death. All you can hear is the passenger may run, or it may not run. It has no schedule and the engineer is afraid to run on time. He may run into a train that is broken down and there is no operator to tell him where the train is. So all that we travelers can do is to go to the depot and sit around and wait and nod and hope. It is just awful to spend the long and lonely hours in a little depot with no couch to recline on—no pillow for the weary head—no fire to dry the feet and the rain just pouring down. Heard a poor woman say "It will be the death of me, I reckon, for I'm just up from a spell of typhoid fever."

"Where are you going, madam?" I enquired.

"To San Angelo," she said. "My son is sick there and I was trying to get to him. Lord have mercy upon us!"

Her case was worse than mine and I tried to be calm and serene. When will this thing stop? All my life I have sympathized with labor and poverty but the way I feel right now I would put a man in the chivingang who would walk out of his office on a strike without giving reasonable notice. It is as mean as a mean nigger, for that's the way they do. You may hire them and they will quit when they please. The legislature ought to pass laws making it a penal offence for the operators on railroads to quit without giving notice—reasonable notice—say thirty days—notice long enough to give the company a chance to consider their demands and supply their places. Laborers are getting insolent and unreasonable. The way they treat the scabs is outrageous. They won't work themselves nor allow others to work. That's niggery too. When a cook gets mad and quits she runs around and warns the saborboot and she raises a row if another cook takes her place. One side is bound and the other side is loose all the time. These strikes seem to happen at the very worst time possible. Here in the Dallas fair just begun and thousands of people want to go, take exhibits of cattle and farm products and suddenly every freight train is tied up and the passenger runs in peril if it runs at all. It looks like these telegraphers conspired to take this particular time so as to force an increase of wages. That is niggery, too. I have known a cook to quit just the day before company came so as to force an increase of wages. I wish to goodness there was somebody to take the places of these striking operators and striking printers, and there are, but they are actually afraid to do it. Let us all strike—let everybody strike—the preachers and teachers and bakers and butchers and millers and farmers and wood haulers and the clerks in the stores and the hotels and boarding houses and the sewing women and typewriters and all—why not? I am mad—waiting here in the depot for a train—I am wet and cold and a thousand miles from home and I would like to strike somebody right now.

I met a man yesterday at Abilene who left that morning for Chicago to take Uncle Tom's cabin to the world's fair. Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe got the foundation for her exaggerated story down at Mechidoch in Louisiana, where she visited for a good while. Uncle Tom and his cabin were a fact, but nearly all the rest was fancy. Uncle Tom's master she calls Simon Legree, but his real name was Robert McAlpin, who was a kind-hearted, good-natured Scotchman. He died during the war, and so did Uncle Tom. The estate was sold according to law and was purchased by a Mr. Chopin. Lots of enterprising yankees went down there to buy the cabin, but he would not sell it to them. He had no love for them. When he was on his last bed he made his son promise never to sell it. That promise has been sacredly kept. But now this Judge Corley, of Abilene, who is a Christian gentleman, and who knew all about the Chopins and the neighborhood, has leased the cabin for two years and has given bond and security that he will return it log for log and board for board and brick for brick and put it back where it was. It is sixty-five years old. He is going to secure space for it and enclose it with a high fence and advertise it liberally and charge 50 cents for admission. He has the most unbroken authorities as to its history—documentals from old men and women and from the judge of the court and the clerk and the records—all under seal. He will of course get some co-operation from the Chicago press and an endorsement from some of the directors of the fair. He knows what he is about. He will have a carload of cotton bolls that grew around the cabin and he has $5,000 rubbers cases that were cut on the farm. They are four feet long and the boards will be dressed and hand and twisted into fancy shapes in Chicago. I have some of them and they are very pretty. Well, now, that is enterprise. That's the way to get some of the money back. Lots, of course, no one there will buy them. I admit him why he didn't take Uncle Tom's house up there and set them up for shows himself by way over like Mark Twain once sent the grave of Adam. He said that the Lord had always treated us dead.

Well, I hope he will make a grand success. He ought to show it there by the time the fair closes. I have some way put business into me and I can't stand idleness. I must have something to do. I must work. I must be doing something. I must be up and doing. I must be up and doing. I must be up and doing

Goodnight.

Goodnight! Sweet sleep!
Come, wandering, way-worn sheep;
God is thy home, He longs to have thee come.
Goodnight! Sweet sleep!

Goodnight! Sweet sleep!
Oh, leave the mountains rough and steep!
In God is peace which nevermore shall cease.
Goodnight! Sweet sleep!

Goodnight! Sweet sleep!
Thy tear-filled eyes no more need weep;
God is thy friend, and will all danger fend.

HESTER'S ROMANCE.

The spring was very sweet that year; the orchard blossoms were heavy and rich on the fresh, warm air, and the Barnards' brown farmhouse with its mossy roof, fitted perfectly into the landscape of the gently undulating prairie land, but Joshua Barnard never noticed it; thirty years' companionship with his wife, Jane, had thoroughly eradicated the æsthetic part of his nature. She was a woman whose face gave one the impression that it had been rudely carved out with a sharp knife and not polished down; she accentuated this by dragging her hair back into a tight knot at the wrong angle of her head. Mrs. Barnard was noted in the country round about for her sharp voice, good butter and obstinacy.

How she was ever induced by her enduring husband to let him send their only daughter, Hester, away to school had been the marvel of the gossips for months. Whatever topic was introduced it always branched off on to the Barnards. Pity for the head of the family, backbiting for the wife, and covert, envious remarks for Hester were alluring snares of wickedness that could not be resisted. Hester had come back that spring for good; her college days were finished and she was trying to settle down again in the old life that seemed a dream.

Four years of city life, with the refining influences she had met, had worked a marvellous change in the brown-eyed, quiet girl. She thought at first her mother and father had changed, and was puzzled, but when the real truth broke upon her, she felt suddenly alienated, as though she were a stranger. They were where she had left them, while she had moved a notch higher; it made her more tenderly kind towards her father, whom she loved; more charitable towards her mother, who was at once proud of her and dissatisfied, and on account of this sometimes trying. It hurt Hester to hear her mother's boast to a neighbor of her daughter's accomplishments; it filled her with chagrin to be pushed forward at the little gatherings, whose atmosphere had become distasteful, and to see the envious sneers on the faces of her former friends.

At first when she came back she had tried to meet them on the old footing, but she could not become interested in their gossip and beaux and they could not comprehend her. So little by little she fell back upon herself for companionship, much to the anger of Mrs. Barnard, who was ambitious for Hester to shine in the country side; her ambition went no higher.

"You are ungrateful, Hester!" she said sharply one evening, as she cleared the supper table. "Look at the money spent on your schooling, and now you won't go anywhere but stick at home like a nobody."

Hester did not reply—she had learned better—and stood looking out of the window in a hopeless sort of a way. She had earnestly tried to do her duty, but life seemed very hard of late, cut off from congenial pursuits and friends. Yes, it was the friends, she thought, with a flush.

"And then refusing to go to the sociable tomorrow night with Nat Parkins," her mother went on in her rasping voice, "when everyone will be there, and he is the richest farmer in this region, and all the girls would give their eyes"——

"Mother!" Hester broke in desperately at last, "I do all in my power to please you, but I will not go with Mr. Parkins—I detest him," and she fled to her room, where she threw herself sobbing upon her little white bed. She felt so hopeless, so homesick for—well, for what? And in her abandonment of grief she repeated a name to herself as if it comforted her. She had not known when she left the city how she loved Herbert Strong, who parted from her at the depot with that reproachful look in his eyes.

What caprice had moved her to tell him no? At that moment she felt as though she would give the world to pour out her sorrow and penitence to him, but he was lost to her—gone to some far Western town.

So she lay and sobbed herself sick. It was the natural result of her long weeks of self-controlled trouble; she had not so completely owned to herself before how much she regretted the past.

When she rose in the morning she saw such a white little face and swollen eyes in the glass that she dreaded to go down-stairs. A sort of apathy had seized upon her, however, and she quietly slipped into her place at the table with hopes that her mother would not notice her especially. But the sharp eyes of that busy woman took her daughter in quickly. She intended to watch her more closely hereafter; her dislike for Nat Parkins must be overcome.

"Hester," she cried in surprise, "what have you been doing to yourself?"

"Nothing," Hester said, wearily, bracing herself for the attack. Mrs. Barnard, after a moment's look, set down the coffee-pot and opened her lips, but suddenly, to everyone's surprise, Mr. Barnard, who usually kept a discreet silence during his wife's tirades, laid his toil-worn hand on his daughter's shoulder.

"Now, Jane!"—her husband spoke with the authoritative tone he rarely used save when his daughter needed defence—"I want you to drop this nonsense about marrying Hester off to Nat Parkins. He is not her kind at all." In his blind way Joshua Barnard felt the difference between his gentle daughter and the bluff, rough young farmer.

"After she went upstairs last night," he went on, "I passed under her window and the child was crying fit to break her heart, and look at her pale face this morning. Can you see it?"

"Yes, I see it," his wife said crossly. It always roused her temper to be opposed unexpectedly by her husband, for she usually had to submit. "I see it and it's all nonsense! Some good-for-nothin' city fellow, I'll warrant!" with which shot she left the table and began rattling the dishes in a way to prevent further conversation.

Joshua Barnard slowly left the house for the field. It was a new idea that his wife had suggested, yet Hester had never said anything to him about it, and there were few things she did not confide to him. He thought of it all the long, warm morning till the terrible heat drove all the workers to the welcome shade of the trees along the fence by the roadside.

The dust lay thick and dry on the ground, the insects shrilled monotonously—nothing stirred. A cloud of dust came down the road and Joshua Barnard and his men watched it curiously: who was foolish enough to drive horses so fast under such a blazing sun?

It did not take much to check the exhausted span of bays, who stood panting and dust-begrimed, and they turned to the light buckboard.

A man lay there, fallen under the seat, with his face a dark red and his clothes dust covered.

"Drunk!" was the disgusted cry, but Joshua Barnard, who looked more closely, said, "A sunstroke. Take him to the house carefully," and followed, wiping his heated brow. He felt charitable now towards all strangers. Was it not a stranger that Hester perhaps loved?

There was confusion in the brown farmhouse immediately, for Jane Barnard was in her element when she had a sick person on her hands, and she unceremoniously left Hester with the housework below while she took possession of the sick room. She was attracted by the unconscious man, with his handsome face and refined appearance.

"How is he?" Hester asked, when her mother finally descended.

"He'll be all right after my nursing," that worthy personage remarked, and forthwith launched into a glowing description of her patient.

Hester's curiosity was roused; so like from her mother's description, yet —. A wild thought flashed through her head, and she stole upstairs with a beating heart and paused on the threshold. She felt dizzy and closed her eyes. "It could not be," she kept saying; "he is miles away away from here." Yet when she finally did look at the unconscious face of the man before her a look of passionate joy came into her eyes.

"Thank Heaven, Herbert, darling!" she cried, and as if a spell were broken he looked at her. A smile of recognition came to his lips and with a murmured endearment he tried to draw her to him.

"I have found him, mother!" her daughter said, with a smile through her tears, and as though this explained it all she turned to her father's open arms.

When Herbert Strong recovered and went away with his young bride, even Jane Barnard had become reconciled to her new son-in-law, and never again in her life did she mention Nat Parkins's name. She accepted her defeat.

Interesting Census Returns.

The census returns furnish some very interesting reading. For instance, there were 334,194 families in the State of Tennessee with an average of 5.29 persons to a family. There were 328,136 dwellings in the State with an average of 5.47 persons to a dwelling. Of course there was no decimal fraction of a person in any dwelling, but the figures make the averages stated. The total number of dwellings in the United States in 1890 was 11,488,318, and the average number of persons to a dwelling was 5.45. The total number of families in this country was 12,690,152, and the average number to a family 4.86.—[American Farmer.

The United States is the richer by $2,000,000 in money orders never presented for payment.

Danger In Little Things.

"'Not dangerously hurt' is a comment frequently made by the press when detailing accidents," said Dr. Julius Browne at the Southern yesterday. "Now, all injuries, however slight, are dangerous. I have seen the bite of a mouse, the prick of a pin and a stubbed toe prove fatal. The extent of the danger of an injury depends upon the condition of the injured person's health and his vitality, or life force. Some people have a very tenacious hold on life while that of others is quite feeble. A delicate woman will sometimes survive injuries that would lay out your six-footer. A large number of those people who live to a ripe old age have one foot in the grave from their very infancy, while others who are perfect paragons of health and strength, are swept away by the first breath of disease. I was sitting in my office one day when a drunken day laborer walked in, swinging one arm with the hand of the other. It had been cut off by an engine, and he had picked it up and walked unassisted to my office for repairs. That same day I was sent for to attend a man who had a fingernail crushed off and was lying in a dead faint. I was once called on by a hotel porter who had a hole as large as a half dollar crushed in his skull by a slungshot. I dressed the wound, and he went to a dance that night and thrashed the fellow who had slugged him. The wound, which scarce discommoded him, would have proved fatal to 19 men out of 20. 'Not dangerously injured' carries no meaning to a physician."—[St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Why We Have Leap Year.

Why is it that there have to be leap years—that all our years are not of the same length? It arises from the fact that the year does not consist of an exact number of days. The length of the day and that of the year are the measures of the motions of the earth. The globe we live on moves in two ways. It turns itself around like a spinning top, and at the same time it goes steadily forward like a bullet shot from a gun. It turns itself once completely around in twenty-four of our hours, as shown by the clock; this amount of time we call a day. Its forward or onward motion carries it around the sun in a path that is nearly a circle; the time it takes to go completely around we call a year. The first motion gives us day and night, following each other in turn (the word "day" here having now a different meaning—namely, not twenty-four hours, but the time of daylight).

The second motion gives us days (that is, periods of daylight) growing gradually longer and then gradually shorter, one end of the earth turning more toward the sun for half the time and the other end for the other half; and this brings us summer and winter and the seasons. Now the length of the year is found to be nearly 365¼ times the length of the day of twenty-four hours; that is, the year is 365 days long and nearly six hours more. It is these six hours that give us leap years, and it is in the "nearly" that we find the reason for 1900 not being one of their number.

Wonderful Shawls.

I bought a shawl in Moscow, writes Frank G. Carpenter, which is so large that it would cover the biggest double bed in America and so fine that it will go through a lady's ring. It was made by the peasants of Orenburg, and is of the kind known as ring shawls. It was made entirely by hand. The fine lace work of these Russian peasants is wonderful. The velvets made by them are noted all over Europe. Some of them bring $5 a yard. They make carpets which are equal to those of Persia and Turkey.

The Candle Business in Russia.

Russia burns more candles to her population than any other country in Europe. She uses about 60,000,000 pounds of candles every year. At the door of every great cathedral there are candle peddlers, who have counters before them and who sell candles to the worshipers as fast as they can hand them out. These men are dressed in the uniform of the church, and they take in pennies by the bushel. I watched a couple of them for a long time at the entrance of the Kazan Cathedral in St. Petersburg, and in the course of half an hour I saw at least 500 men, women and children buy candles. The interior of this church is as large as the hall of the House of Congress. Its halls were hung with golden icons and there were jeweled icons on the pillars and set into the solid silver altar of the back of the church. Before each icon there was a silver candlestick. The tops of these candlesticks were in the shape of a disc, and each top had a number of holes in which to stick candles. The worshipers trotted from one of these candelabra to another, lighting a candle before each and putting it up to burn before the picture.

There were probably 500 candles burning at one time in this one church, and when you remember that this goes on all over Russia every Sunday and every holiday and during most of the days of the week, you can see where the candles go to. A large part of the candles used are made in houses and not in large factories.—[New York Press.

I asked him why he didn't take Uncle Tom's house up there and set them up for three months to weep over the Black Creek crept over the grave of Adam. He said that future had long since burned to dust.

Well, I hope he will succeed. A good common fire-cracker is about all I've had this summer. I hear that the old homestead on the Etowah where the cracker barrel used to stand has been burned down to the ground. Nobody knows the real cause but it is supposed to be the work of incendiaries. I am sorry for it, for I was born there and I love the old place. I have been there but once since the war and I was disappointed in it. It looked so small and dilapidated. I thought it was a mistake and that I had gone to the wrong place. But I knew the old mulberry tree in front of the house and the old well and the old gate and the old fields and the old woods and the old hills and the old creek and the old spring branch and the old meadow and the old pasture and the old lane and the old barn and the old stables and the old cribs and the old smoke-house and the old negro quarters and the old orchard and the old garden and the old grape vines and the old rose bushes and the old flower beds and the old paths and the old gravel walks and the old front yard and the old back yard and the old fences and the old gates and the old trees and the old shrubbery and the old everything. Why, I knew it all by heart and could have told them where to find it. I was born there and lived there for twenty years and I had left it for twenty years more and I was glad to see it again. I was glad to see it, but I was sorry to see it. I was glad to see it because it was mine and I was sorry to see it because it was not mine. I was glad to see it because it was the old place and I was sorry to see it because it was not the old place

It is Cleveland again and the South rejoices.

The Hayneville Examiner has ideas similar to those of the VIEW concerning the present state of politics in Alabama. Just before the election it contained the following:

There are some very bad tales being circulated in regard to Mr. W. M. Whatley, of Clay, the Third party congressional nominee, which are true, but we don't believe in that sort of campaigning, and therefore do not publish them. If he hires horses and does not pay for the hire it would do no good if we so informed the public, as those who are prejudiced in Mr. Whatley's favor would not believe any thing derogatory to his character, his politics, his integrity or his intellectual ability though an angel from the presence of the great white throne were to come to earth to warn the people against him.

A faithful old friend and subscriber mentioned to us the other day that he preferred to read both sides of every question and of every bit of news, and commended the VIEW for publishing both sides. He states that during the late civil war, the people at home were dependent entirely upon the war correspondents of the papers for information concerning the progress of the war. He further said that they would give but a one-sided and highly colored account of an engagement, often suppressing news of the confederacy's fearful losses. This one-sided news would encourage the people to make renewed contributions of men and money for the prosecution of the war. He thought that if the cold facts only had been published by our home papers, the war would not have been so prolonged and much property and many valuable lives could have been saved to the South.

It was a year or more ago that a brilliant and successful physician of Chicago was stated to be the victim of the alcohol habit and rapidly going down hill. Later he was stated to have placed himself in the Keeley Institute at Dwight for treatment. A few months afterwards he was discharged cured. He was cured and could have been saved but that his old habit of experimenting which had characterized his practice led him to apply it to himself by seeing if he could drink and abstain at pleasure. The experiment proved fatal. It took but a short time to cause a return of the old alcohol habit, and, as in most cases of reformed inebriates, the return to alcohol was more than nature could bear, and the man died. There are many kinds of fools in the world, but the man who plays with a sinful passion is the hardest and worst fool of all. There is but one end to such a course.

Mr. Chas. H. Brigham, business representative of the Keeley Institute, of Fort Payne, Alabama, is stopping at the Belgart House. He reports over fifty alcoholic and morphine habitues under treatment now. Information regarding terms and length of time necessary to effect a complete cure may be obtained by calling at the hotel. Drunkenness is treated by Dr. Keeley as a disease, a hundred thousand cured happy beings attest the success of his treatment. Rev. T. Dewitt Talmage after visiting the Keeley Institute said: "I saw one of the most wonderful sights in my experience. I saw the men standing in line, with slits in their sleeves waiting for their turn to have the golden cure injected or "shot" into the arms.

The expression of the faces of these men was enough to show the the good work Dr. Keeley is doing. The poor broken down wrecks who had just come in awaited their turns with a look of hope and expectancy on their faces that was touching, on the other hand those who had been there sometime and had already experienced the good effects of this cure, looked proudly conscious that they were being freed from slavery. "I tell you the confident way in which these men spoke and the happy triumphant expressions on their faces, would have convinced the greatest enemies of the cure."—Exchange.

CLEVELAND

HAS SWEPT THE COUNTRY AND WILL BE OUR NEXT PRESIDENT.

We thought of delaying our paper for twenty-four hours in order to give more complete returns from the elections. It is unnecessary. New York and Illinois having given majorities for Cleveland with the vote of the South, his election is assured. Weaver carries Colorado and Nebraska. Alabama, Connecticut and New Jersey are safe for Cleveland.

Robbins will represent the fourth district in Congress by 2,000 to 3,000 majority.

Weaver carries Nebraska, Colorado and Chilton county, sure.

The following is the vote for President in Chilton as returned to the Sheriff's office. The vote for Congressman will not vary materially from these figures, Longshore running only 20 votes ahead of Weaver:

Precincts	Weaver	Cleveland
Jumbo	125	24
Jemison	128	54
Providence	42	56
Benson	52	57
Macedonia	70	8
Clanton	224	188
Coopers	165	35
Verbena	72	99
Kincheon	105	41
Maplesville	55	29
Latham's	49	5
Dixie	109	152
Total	1196	749

Harrison received 150 votes in the county, which leaves Weaver a majority of 297.

The total vote of the county was 2,095.

BEN FITZPATRICK DEAD.

Wetumpka, Nov. 7.—Benjamin Fitzpatrick, solicitor of the Fifth circuit, died here at 8 o'clock this evening after a short illness. His death has cast a gloom over the entire community.

Benjamin Fitzpatrick was the youngest son of the great Fitzpatrick who was governor and United States senator before the war. He was elected solicitor six years ago and was a delegate to the last national democratic convention. He was a young man of ability, integrity and courage, and his death is a loss to Alabama.

STICK TO YOUR FARMS.

The Best Sort of Advice to Those Who Have Lands.

If I could get three dollars a day, said a farmer to the National Economist, I would be glad to leave the farm in a minute. My farm doesn't pay $900 a year. I've got eighty acres of good land, and decent buildings, and out of debt, but it is all I can do to send my children to school and make both ends meet. I could do better than that on $900 a year.

We doubt it, says the Orange County Farmer, at Port Jarvis, N. Y., and advise you to stick to your farms. Your rent in the city or town will be from $15 to $30 a month, or $180 or $366 a year. Nothing will be free to you except the air, and a vitiated article at that for even the water will have to be paid for. If you have children your grocer's bill will not be less than a dollar a day for the year around. You will do well if you clothe your family on $150 a year. Your car fare, your lost time, doctors bill, etc., will not be less than one hundred dollars a year.

This makes a total of nine hundred and ten dollars a year which your certain expenses will be for your own family. But you will occasionally have visitors, will occasionally go to operas and on excursions, and if the incidentals connected with the pleasures do not exceed one hundred dollars, you will be fortunate, making the total expenditure nine hundred and ten dollars a year.

In these figures we have given an estimate of the lowest average expenditures for living as well as you could on your eighty acre farm. Indeed, even in this estimate many luxuries the farm would permit are taken into account.

But how many city laborers get three dollars a day? Very few. The wages will not average one dollar and fifty cents a day. And the farmer who has an eighty or one hundred acre farm under reasonable mortgage, will enjoy more solid comfort on the farm than he will toiling in the city shops, factories, etc. Stick to the farm!

What Southern Women Say.

Mrs. H. B. Kells, of Mississippi, speaking on "Woman Suffrage in the Southwest," says:

"Put the past, like any other Satan behind you," said a wise man. So each Woman here says practically, to every other "toiler and moiler" for equal rights, who world-worn and heart-sore, feels like the mule in the middle of six miles of woods, who which ever way he turned, had to say his way out three miles to the road. So he just planted his feet, and after the tricks and manner of his kind, stayed there. Mrs. Kells spoke of the great good likely to be done by the Mississippi Valley Conference, and continued: But a wise woman remarked, "Time is the heart's blood of folks that can do things," and I am here to use as little of your heart's blood as possible, in reviewing the situation in the Southwest.

Alabama we consider the least progressive on the question of equality of sex, mainly because its political men are a unit against it. One of the first openly to advocate the Women's cause was the late Dr. Peter Bryce, the renowned superintending physician of the hospital for the insane. Through his influence, aided by his lovely wife, the first W. C. T. U. president of Alabama, a strong suffrage sentiment was created at Tuskaloosa. Mrs. Hildreth, of New Decatur, who, with her husband, edits the leading paper in that city, and one of the editors of the Birmingham Age-Herald, the first paper of the State, are the only press advocates the cause numbers in Alabama, but there are strong, fearless defenders of equal rights who deserve our gratitude and sympathy for what they suffer. Unlike the W. C. T. U. of the South, the State Union is weak in the cause, because most of the officers will not declare themselves, and others are opposed, but the New Decatur, Sheffield and Gadsden local Unions are bold and outspoken. Hon. George P. Keyes, brother of Chancellor Keyes, is and influential friend of women, whom no man can intimidate, and here and there are others. It is not remarkable that Alabama should be slow, when its women are represented in Congress by men with such sentiments as Senator Oates expressed in the United States Senate, when the vote was pending on the admission of Wyoming to the Sisterhood of States, bringing her women's privileges with her. "Gentlemen," he said, "I shudder to think that Wyoming might some day commit the unparalleled act of sending to this legislative hall a representative who is not a gentleman." "Will the senator from Alabama," interrupted another member, "have the goodness to state that he is quite sure that this has never happended in the history of the Senate?" Notwithstanding all this, Alabama's face is toward the light.

She enrolls among her membership two editors, three doctors of medicine, a number of lawyers, and many women of influence. The Charleston News and Courier, an opponent, has freely opened its columns for discussion to Mrs. Young and others. And Mrs. Young addressed the State Press Association on the subject, and was received with applause and a vote of thanks—perhaps, however, more as a tribute to her pluck than as an expression of their sentiment—at least till the November election is over. The Hampton Guardian and half a dozen other journals admit the free discusion of the subject.

What the Editor Gets.

[Middleton (Pa.) Advocate.]

When a child is born into the world the physician is presented and gets about $10 for officiating at the important event. The editor heralds the advent of the stranger and gets a cursing for making a mistake as to the sex or date of arrival.

After a while the child becomes a man, the minister is called to perform the marriage ceremony and walks off with a $10 bill in his pocket for his trouble. The editor is again called upon to chronicle this event by drawing on his imagination to make the bride and groom the best and most respectable people in the county. His only pay is to be asked for a few extra copies of his paper to send to some absent friends, and very often not even that.

In time the once baby, once happy groom, but now a man well advanced in years, is brought down by death. Again the physician is called in and makes his bill, the undertaker is present and officiates at the funeral, and in time wants $100 for performing the last sad rites, while the editor is expected to complete the drama by holding up the deceased as a model gentleman, and one who at present is flying up the golden stairs. The probabilities are at the same time that the baby, the groom and the dead man have been so infernally stingy that he had stinted his wife and children and had never contributed one cent to the support of his local paper.

What does the editor get? He gets left.

JUST LAUGH!

Calera Wants a Court House, Sure.

The next Session of the General Assembly of Alabama, will be asked to pass a law to change the line between Chilton and Shelby counties as follows: Commence at the N W corner of Section 16 T P 24 R 12 East and run due south along Section lines four miles to the line between TP 23 and 24, and then run east on the dividing line between said TP 23 and 24 to the Coosa river, and then thence up and along the meanderings of said river to the present boundary line between Shelby and Chilton counties and thence due west to the starting point and to embrace the territory herein described as a part of Shelby county.

From a Calera paper we extract the foregoing. The wells have gone dry at Calera which means that the lovely burg is drying up very fast itself, and it wants Chilton county to contribute lands to form a new county with Calera as the capital. Shew!

Government Got Him.

It is reported that one Bramble, who resides near Bountsville, is a great "Populite." Among other strange political views advocated by the said Bramlet, he is a strong believer in the ridiculous doctrine that the government of the United States should hold in fee simple all the property of the people. The said Bramlet must be happy now. A few days ago, Hanlin, Reid & Co., representing the firm of Uncle Sam, made their appearance on the still premises of Mr. Bramlet. Yes, "still" premises. They found stored away in the loft of a sleeping department a "still." These officers knowing the political sentiments of Mr. Bramlet, and desiring to carry out said sentiments, "gobbled up" both Mr. Bramlet and his "still" concern. So they both belong to the government. We trust they are satisfied—"still" satisfied.—Blount Chronicle.

"Nothing succeeds like success," and nothing will more quickly insure success than true merit. For fifty years, Ayer's Sarsaparilla has maintained its popularity as the superior blood purifier. It stands upon its own merits and never fails to give satisfaction.

"Mighty Bad-off."

Union Springs Herald.

Two little boys of this city were playing physician and patient the other day, and "got off" the best political joke ever heard of. One of the little fellows went into a room and brawled in bed. He began grunting as if his last spark of life was flickering; when the acting physician came in to relieve the suffering. The following passed between the two little fellows:

Doctor—"Well, my patient, what's the matter with you?

Patient—"Doctor, I've got the yellow fever and the politics."

Doctor—"Well, you're mighty bad off, for lots of folks have died with that."

The young doctor immediately turned and left the room, when he heard that his patient had the politics, as if he feared the contageous disease. The little fellw who claimed to be suffering with politics tried to explain afterward, and said he meant small pox. He, like everybody else, has heard "politics," and nothing but politics until his mind is affected.

Cheerful Prospect.

A young graduate in the law visited a successful lawyer, and asked his advice as to the best general course to pursue in building up a practice.

"Above all," said the old lawyer, "keep up your fees. Don't work cheap. If you do, people will think you're good for nothing.

"But nobody will pay any fees, and I shall die of starvation."

"Oh, well, you must expect to die for a while—but after that you'll be all right.—Youth's Companion.

Respectfully,
MRS. W. H. PHILLIPS.

A Timely Suggestion.

We merely desire to say that if responsible persons make a fair proposition that will secure three hundred miles of railroad in Alabama by using the convicts, it will be worth consideration by the General Assembly. At $10,000, per mile such a road would pay taxes on $3,000,000, which is $12,000 perpetually per annum. This besides the wealth it would create all along the line.—Age-Herald.

Here is a chance for the Ala. Grand Trunk and the Montgomery, Tuskaloosa & Memphis to be completed. Also for the Alabama Western Railway.

Welchville Locals.

Misses Kate Lanier, Estelle Starr and Sallie Todd, of Selma, were the guests of Mrs. McGuier last Saturday.

R. T. McGuier and Luther McGuier visited Selma recently.

Mr. J. P. Welch is visiting Washington city.

The remains of Mr. Wm. Harwell were interred at Plantersville Sunday.

A light shower of rain fell a few days ago. It was much needed.

Politics not much talked of. Everybody is looking for better times after the election. No one will be disappointed as Cleveland is sure to be our next President.

Many thanks to the VIEW for promptness.

Jemison Jottings.

On last Tuesday, Mr. J. H. Hughes was stricken with paralysis. He remained unconscious and speechless until Friday night, at 9 o'clock when he died. A large concourse of people attended his funeral at Pine Hill cemetery on Sunday. The religious services were conducted by Rev. R. M. Honeycutt. The remains were tenderly laid to rest by the Jemison Masonic Lodge according to the beautiful ritual of that order.

Mr. J. A. Skaggs and his little son, Paul, left Sunday morning for Anniston in response to a telegram from that city, calling Mr. Skaggs to the bedside of a sick sister.

Mr. J. P. Allen, who had partially recovered from a severe illness is again confined to his bed.

Mrs. McCrary, of Clanton, attended the funeral of Mr. Hughes here last Sunday. Mrs. Hughes is visiting friends in Clanton this week.

Bessemer parties have been digging gold near here during the past week. They report the prospects most favorable.

Mr. John Brantley has moved from Strasburg to our town and has opened up a stock of general merchandise. Jemison welcomes him and wishes him success.

A hunting party came down from Birmingham on the accommodation Monday morning and spent the day in shooting quail in the vicinity of Jemison.

Mrs. Woolley who has been spending a week at her home near Montevallo, returned Saturday.

The township trustees for township 23, range 13 east, met at the Academy last Saturday. They located four schools in the township as follows: No. 1, Jemison, No. 2, Centre Hill, No. 3, Mars Hill, No. 4, Oak Grove.

We hope the VIEW will tell us of a glorious Democratic victory.

A Notable Event.

Whatever may be the views of any one in regard to the woman's rights question, there is no doubt that it is one of the greatest and most considerable movements now before the notice of the world. The Nineteenth Century has been aptly called the Woman's Age, and from the demonstrations of the last twenty years all must concede that the claim is just. Women have advanced more in the last thirty years than in the preceding thirty centuries. They have broken the barriers of all professions and associations, and stand to-day on a platform of greater dignity than ever before in the history of the world. This movement has not either been a wild and frantic rush toward suffrage and ballot box. The Susan B. Anthony extremists are not women who have won the battle. The women who have truly contributed to the present consummation are earnest seekers for the rights of women, and not wild-eyed clamorers for the rights of men. They have simply made the claim that, despite sophistries of old conventions, woman is free to do with credit and dignity any work for which she shows herself fit.

To prove how true are the claims here presented, it is only necessary to refer to the personnel of that distinguished body of ladies, the Association for the advancement of Women, which will meet here in November. Among these women are doctors, jurists, editors, representatives of almost every art and professions; but at least half of them do not desire the suffrage at all. Such women as Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, Dr. Adele S. Hutchinson and Sallie Fairchild are not of the type which we have associated with Woman's Rights. They are simply brave and energetic workers in a cause which must enlist the sympathy of every true man, as well as of every woman. The reforms they have taught and worked in are not unwomanly efforts toward the prerogatives of men, but gentle and gracious charities, and works of philanthrophy and love. It is seldom that we find unreason among people who toil. Work is the sovereign antidote to folly, and these women are workers. Out of respect for worthy performances, and out of the credit due the helpers in good deeds in life and in literature, the people of Memphis should give this distinguished body of women a warm and generous welcome.—Memphis Commercial.

Notes of Her Progress and Prosperity Briefly Epitomized

And Important Happenings from Day to Day Tersely Told.

Minter & Bobo, Sedalia, S. C., burned out Tuesday night. Charley Betsill, a clerk, narrowly escaped with his life and broke his leg in jumping from a window. Loss total; insurance $5,000.

Judge McAlister in the circuit court at Nashville, Tenn., decided a mandamus case in which he incidentally declared that the subleasing of state convicts is void and illegal, and that the convicts cannot be sublet to any one or for any character of work.

A special of Tuesday from Charlestown, Md., says: Eight colored prisoners, convicted of the murder of James H. Hill, near Wellington, Kent county, last April, have been sentenced to be hanged. The evidence may secure Pott's conviction and cause the ninth execution for the murder.

A Columbia, S. C., special of Tuesday says: Rumors are current that Governor Tillman has received a very good offer from capitalists, who propose to refund the entire state debt. A short while ago a Mr. Rion, of Augusta visited the governor, and it is thought that the offer is the outcome of the meeting.

Saturday morning, in the hold of the steamer Dewsland, anchored at Galveston, Tex., 800 bales of cotton were badly damaged by fire and water. About midday in the hold of the Thorntondale, 2,000 bales were badly damaged or entirely destroyed. Both vessels were ready to put to sea for Liverpool.

President Donaldson, of the South Carolina State Alliance, has invited Governor Northen, of Georgia, to attend the state fair at Columbia beginning on the fourteenth and to deliver an address on alliance day, Wednesday. Georgia's chief executive will draw an immense crowd to hear him speak on the objects and aims of the alliance.

Neely & Smith, of Florence, Ala., have received the contract for twelve stone piers for the new iron bridge to be built by the Memphis and Charleston railroad at Florence. Three piers have already been replaced since the bridge catastrophe last summer. The material for the new bridge is being received and work will shortly begin.

Dr. Payne, the Georgia state chemist, has just made an analysis of some phosphate rock found in Decatur county in southwest Georgia. The specimens showed a better analysis than the South Carolina or Florida phosphate. Inexhaustible beds are reported in Decatur county, and if the rock comes up to the analysis of the specimens it will be a valuable discovery.

A New Orleans dispatch of Wednesday says: Thomas A. Gleason, a cotton buyer, has been arrested for obtaining $8,000 to $15,000 from the Whitney national bank by forging cotton press receipts and fraudulent insurance policies. Gleason has been in the cotton business here for fifteen years and is known throughout the country.

The preliminary investigation of the men charged with throwing eggs at S. S. Booth, nominee for elector on the fusion ticket and Captain R. F. Kolb and breaking up a political meeting which they were to address in Gordon, Ala., was concluded at Montgomery Tuesday. Three of the defendants were discharged and four were held to bail in the sum of $1,000 to answer any indictment which may be found by the United States grand jury. The defendants gave bail.

A Knoxville, Tenn., dispatch of Sunday says: About twenty-five suits have been pending in Granger and Hamblen counties against the Morristown and Cumberland Gap road for debt. It appears that the road was not able to pay. Saturday at Morristown, James T. Shield, of Knoxville, was appointed temporary receiver. The appointment is made on the application of northern bondholders. November 10th was named as the day on which to argue the appointment of a permanent receiver.

A Raleigh dispatch of Wednesday says: The arrest of State Election Registrar R. G. Reid, by A. W. Shaffer, United States chief supervisor of elections, has proved one of the greatest sensations of the campaign. Reid has brought suit against Shaffer for $10,000 for false arrest. Summons for Shaffer has been issued. The suit is based upon the opinion of the state attorney general that neither Shaffer nor his supervisors have any power to make arrests and that his action was entirely illegal.

Judge Bruce, of the United States district court, in session at Montgomery, Ala., sustained a motion to quash the petition for writ and mandamus to compel the probate judges, sheriffs and circuit clerks of Bullock and Macon counties to appoint third party representatives among the managers or inspectors of the election. Judge Bruce granted the motion to quash on the ground that the court did not have authority to issue an original writ of mandamus, and there being no proceedings to give him jurisdiction.

Petitions were filed at the secretary of state's office in Montgomery, Ala., Wednesday, by W. C. Lanier, Phil Lanier, R. Lanier, and Res Freeman, of West Point, E. F. Lanier, of Americus, H. Lanier, of Atlanta, Ga., and L. Lanier, of Chambers county, Ala., asking to issue commission for incorporating the Chattahoochee Valley railroad company to be established and built near West Point, Ga., to Eufaula, Ala., with a capital stock of $300,000 in shares of one hundred dollars each which may be increased not to exceed $1,000,000.

The bids for the $125,000 water bonds recently voted by the people of Athens to build a new system of waterworks were opened Monday. After a careful consideration of the several bids, their conditions and provisions, that of Mr. Alonzo Richardson, of the Atlanta Trust and Banking Company, was accepted, and the award formally made to that institution. All the issue except twenty-nine are thirty year, gold bonds, bearing 5 per cent. One bond is to be retired each year, making twenty-nine to be retired inside of thirty years. The whole issue was sold at par.

A Montgomery, Ala., dispatch says: A successful test was made Tuesday by the Southern Harvesting company with their recently discovered and already much improved cotton picking machine, a simple contrivance on four wheels pulled by mules, eight feet long, three feet wide, and with eight brushes, wires and flexible tin gatherers. In less than ten minutes, 300 pounds were picked and deposited in the bags, the machine continuing in that manner from furrow to furrow satisfying many farmers and business men present that this machine will work a revolution in picking cotton.

For the second time the Rome, Ga., Rolling Mill Company, makers of cotton ties, has gone into the hands of a receiver. For some time past several small creditors have been pressing their claims. Last Saturday a bill was filed by C. A. Thorswell for the creditors asking for a receiver, and on Monday Judge Henry appointed Sheriff J. C. Moore temporary receiver. The amounts claimed by the bills are small. There will be a final hearing of the bill on November 9th for a permanent receiver. A bill has also been filed asking for a receiver for the Rome foundry and machine works. This application will also be heard on November 9th.

MILWAUKEE IN FLAMES.

Thirteen Blocks of Business Houses and Residences in Ruins.

Five Lives Lost and $6,000,000 in Property Swept Away.

The most disastrous fire known in the history of Milwaukee, Wis., swept over that city Friday night, licking up in its course thirteen blocks of business houses and residences—over three hundred buildings in all, and caused the loss of five lives and the destruction of six million dollars in property.

The fire was caused by the explosion of an oil barrel in the store occupied by the Union Oil Company at 275 East Water street.

Several insurance men intimated that the insurance companies would suffer at least $3,000,000 by the fire. The total loss will be divided between nearly a hundred companies.

President Bacon, of the chamber of commerce, issued a call for a meeting to raise money to provide temporarily for the homeless. Fifty thousand dollars was quickly raised. Relief work will be continued. The homeless are being quartered in the exposition building, cathedral, hotels and offices.

TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE.

Of Three Swimmers in a River of Burning Oil.

A Philadelphia dispatch says: The Schuylkill river at Point Breeze, is always covered with a thin scum of oil from adjacent oil works, and since the oil fire there Sunday, more than the usual quantity has been floating on the surface. Tuesday evening three young men started from the eastern shore at Point Breeze in a rowboat to cross the river. When about 150 feet from the shore, one of the men lighted his pipe and carelessly tossed the blazing stick into the water. As the match fell into the water, a burst of flames shot up alongside the skiff, and almost instantly the surface of the river around the boat was blazing fiercely. The flames of burning oil licked the gunwales of the light craft, and the men, realising that it would be quickly consumed, plunged into the burning fluid around them and started to swim ashore. One of them succumbed to the flames and sank. The other two succeeded in reaching the shore, though they were horribly burned and may die.

The fire in the meantime had spread down the river and the wrecking steamer Maryland, which was lying in the stream working to raise the burned bark Felix, caught fire, and before she could steam out of the fire, she had been damaged to the extent of $15,000. Streams of water from several engines and tugs finally put the burning oil out.

A FIGHT WITH BANDITS.

Another Mexican Row in Which a Number of Outlaws are Killed.

A New Orleans Times-Democrat Calegs, Mex., special Saturday, says the town of San J. Juan, fifteen miles north of thereon the Mexican National road, was the scene Saturday night of a bloody battle between a band of twelve brigands, under the leadership of the desperado and outlaw, Antonio Gallardo, and a company of government rurals of the place. The bandits rode into town about 9 o'clock Saturday night and made a raid on the general store of Richard Vendoza. They secured several hundred dollars in cash, driving the proprietor, clerks and about twenty customers into the street at the muzzles of their pistols. The rurals were given the alarm of the presence of the brigands and as the latter emerged from the store and were in the act of mounting their horses, a fusilade was opened upon them by the soldiers. Gallardo and two other members of the desperate band fell at the first volley, all three fatally wounded.

Nine other brigands returned the fire and a pitched battle then ensued, the outlaws fighting their way through the ranks of the soldiers. Six of them escaped and three were captured alive. Four of the soldiers were seriously wounded.

MUST RESPECT THE FLAG.

No Sham Attack on Fort Sumter Will be Tolerated.

A Washington dispatch says: The officials of the navy department are watching with some apprehension the course of events at Charleston, S. C., where "Gala Week" is being celebrated in commemoration of the escape of the city from total destruction by the earthquake of 1886. At the request of citizens, the United States steamships, Dolphin and Vesuvius were sent to the city to participate in the celebration. The vessels arrived there Monday. The apprehension of the naval officers is caused by the announcement in the press that the naval bombardment of Fort Sumter is to form a part of the programme. If any such intention has taken shape in the official programme the navy department would have promptly countermanded the orders of the naval vessels, for Commodore Ramsay says that he would not for a moment tolerate the idea that a vessel of the United States navy should participate in the attack, even though it were a sham attack on the national flag. It has been decided to leave the question as to the participation of the vessels in the celebration to the discretion of Commander Brownson, of the Dolphin.

Private Iams's Case.

In the Iams trial at Pittsburg, Pa., Wednesday, Surgeon Neff testified that he received orders to see that Iams received no permanent injury, and told Iams if he suffered he would be cut down. Iams replied that if they exposed him to retreat, they would cut him down dead. Dr. Ullem created some excitement by saying that when Iams was cut down he told Iams to feign sickness, so that the regiment would have the impression that he had been severely punished.

TELEGRAPHIC GLEANINGS.

The News of the World Condensed Into Pithy and Pointed Paragraphs.

Interesting and Instructive to All Classes of Readers.

Dispatches of Tuesday state that Democratic electors in Oregon have withdrawn in favor of populist electors.

Western Union directors, at a meeting Tuesday, decided to increase the capital stock of the company from $80,000,000 to $100,000,000.

The China Mail says Chi Yun has been appointed the next Chinese minister to the United States. He now holds the post of chief of instruction.

Indications are that the strike among the electric wiremen of New York city is practically ended, and the situation looks to be in the hands of the contractors.

A New York dispatch of Tuesday says: It has been decided that Cleveland will make one more speech in New Jersey and probably one in Delaware before the election.

A bold attempt was made Monday night to burn the Star theater at Cleveland, Ohio. The fire was of incendiary origin. But little damage was done to the building.

Attorney General Miller has issued instructions to United States marshals concerning their duties at elections. He quotes Attorney General Garland's instructions in 1888.

Railroad securities belonging to the estate of the late Charles Stewart Parnell were sold in New York Tuesday, and realised $15,000. Part of the proceeds go to Parnell's widow and part to his mother.

A London cable dispatch of Monday states that the central chamber of agriculture will discuss the question of holding a conference of delegates from all parts of the United Kingdom to discuss the depression in the agricultural industry.

A disastrous wreck occurred on the Fort Wayne road, in Alleghany, Pa., Wednesday afternoon. A fast freight was hit by a keystone express from Chicago, smashing six cars and badly wrecking the engine of the express. Engineer Harry Sauerbeck, of engine No. 1 express and a fireman were badly crushed.

Dispatches of Saturday from Detroit, Mich., states that reports of wrecks and other mishaps to shipping caused by Friday night's terrific wind storm are coming in from different points on the lakes. Considering the number of vessels blown ashore and wrecked, the loss of life is very light, only two drownings being reported thus far.

A democratic national headquarters' circular says: "Michael F. Kwyer Tuesday afternoon made one of the largest bets that is on record in this campaign. He wagered $30,000 against $12,000 that Cleveland would carry the state of New York. The short end of the bet was taken by a representative of a syndicate of Philadelphia republicans."

A New York special of Saturday says: The Wall street report of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company for the year ended June 30, 1892, shows gross earnings of $5,944,783, a decrease of $2,566; operating expenses, $3,087,067, a decrease of $45,428; net $2,907,716, increase $45,848. Charges increased, $160,191 and surplus, $598,060; a decrease of $114,843.

A special of Sunday from Denver, Col., says: A. J. Hoverholt and Silas Hauchett, two of the electors of the Weaver ticket, have refused to permit their names to be used as the head of the Cleveland democratic ticket. Their action is embarrassing, to say the least, in view of the fact that the Clevelandites had withdrawn their electors and substituted therefor the populist electors.

A London cablegram of Monday says: The council of the Cotton Spinners' Association, in view of the threatened strike of the cotton operatives and the efforts of the mayors of Liverpool and Manchester to have the differences settled by arbitration, have resolved to decline the mayor's offer, and will not consider any proposal unless it emanates from the employes themselves.

A dispatch of Tuesday from Richmond, Ind., says: Omar L. Hittle is missing and his absence alarms his friends. A suit for $60,000 by his mother is pending against him. For years he has been his mother's agent. She demanded settlement which he did not make and the suit was filed. When Hittle left fro New York, he took bonds and securities aggregating $80,000 to have cashed.

A New York dispatch of Monday says: Receivers Heidekoper and Foster give notice that coupons maturing November 1, 1892, on the Virginia Midland railway general mortgage 5 per cent bonds, Richmond York River and Chesapeake railroad second mortgage bonds and northeastern railway of Georgia first mortgage bonds will be paid at the office of Central Trust company of New York on the above named date.

Fifteen hundred students from the various colleges of Philadelphia paraded Saturday night, and shouted their college yells to their hearts, content. The pageant was proposed in defiance of the superintendent of police, who, a few days ago, issued orders that yelling on the streets must cease. It was turned into a triumphant march, however, when the superintendent of police rescinded his orders.

A Port Townsend, Wash., dispatch says: The bark, Cowlitz, sixty days from Taku, China, arrived Sunday and reported two suspicious deaths. The vessel had no papers or bill of health. On passage the second mate and one seaman were attacked with symptoms resembling Asiatic cholera, and after a brief illness died. The last death occurred in quarantine Saturday and the crew was sent to the posthouse.

A New York dispatch says: "The electric wire men met in Clarendon hall Tuesday morning and decided upon a general strike. The walking delegates were appealed to, and a decision was rendered that all the affiliated trades should be called out with the exception of tin workers and bricklayers. The delegates started out during the morning to call the union men off their jobs. It is thought the strike may affect 50,000 men.

The registration figures in New York city, according to a dispatch of Saturday are a sort of Chinese puzzle to the politicians. Both republicans and democrats say that so far they are unable to tell what they mean. Democratic voters say that Cleveland will get a surprising majority in the city. The appointment three to one Hills to say. The total figures for the day is 27,000, which makes a grand total of 280,000. 1887 figures were registered 287,449 and last year 281,892.

At 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon two men entered Ford County bank at Spearville, Kans., and with drawn revolvers robbed Cashier Baird of $1,700. As the robbers ran out of the bank and jumped into their saddles a party of hunters came along, and learning of the bold robbery, opened fire on them. The robbers returned the fire, but no one was hurt on either side. The robbers managed to escaped. It is not known whether any of them were wounded or not.

GEORGIA'S OFFICIAL VOTE.

Governor Northen's Majority in the State is 71,502.

Only About 1,000 Votes Difference from Our Previous Report.

Georgia's democratic majority for Governor Northen was officially counted by the general assembly in joint session Thursday, and found to be 71,502.

The total vote of the state was 209,489. Governor Northen received 140,492. Colonel Peak, the third party candidate, received 68,990. And to the splendid credit of the Empire State of the South, the official democratic majority went above the expectation of the most sanguine—71,502.

The morning after the election the Atlanta Constitution said Georgia's democratic majority was 70,555. It was counted out officially to be 71,502.

DARING HIGHWAYMEN

Passenger train No. 5, on the East Tennessee road, was robbed Monday night at Patonia, Alabama. The act was committed by two masked men who boarded the train when it stopped at that station. The robbers secured about $2,000.

Train number 5 runs from Cleveland, Tennessee, through Rome, Ga., to Selma, Alabama. It is a local passenger train, and it stops at nearly every station on the line of the Alabama Division of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad. Monday afternoon the train left Cleveland at half past four o'clock. In the the express car there was a large amount of money going to Selma, Ala. In the mail car there were several valuable registered letters and money packages. When the train reached Rome more money was added to the large amount already in the express car and another pile of registered letters was put in the mail car. Patonia, the station where the robbery occurred, is forty-three miles south of Rome and nine miles north of Jacksonville, Ala. The mail clerk and the express messengers had completed their work and were resting when the train stopped at the little station. There is a water tank near the station and the train stopped at the tank. Just as the air-brakes were applied and the train came to a stop, two masked men burst in the door of the express car and covered the messenger with their pistols. One of them then searched the car and secured all the money and put it in a sack. They then left the frightened messenger and went into the mail car and ransacked that. The mail clerk did not resist and the robbers secured all the letters they cared to take. After that they left the train with their booty. The men in the express and mail car could not tell whether the men were white or black, as they wore their masks over their faces.

GAS WORKS EXPLODE,

Doing Considerable Damage to Vessels and Buildings.

A Philadelphia dispatch says: Shortly after 4 o'clock Sunday morning and but a few minutes after the fireman at the pumping station of Point Breeze gas works had replenished his fires, people in the vicinity were startled by the sound of an explosion. A moment later flames shot up from the river and a pall of dense black smoke began to gather over the wharves and shipping in the harbor. An alarm of fire was turned in. Fortunately, the Red Star tugs, Juno, Churchman and Mary Louise, were lying at the wharves with steam up and they went into service at once. The bark, Felix, was surrounded by burning oil which floated into the river before she could be secured by the tugs. She became topheavy, and careened to the opposite side and sank to the bottom directly across the channel. The bark, Elena G. was partially burned. A lighter belonging to the Standard Oil Company burned to the water, edge and sank. Captain Housemann's barge and a small frame house belonging to the city, standing on the bank above the gas works, were entirely destroyed. Five-hundred feet of the wharf was badly damaged. Total loss, $184,500.

TWENTY PEOPLE KILLED.

Fearful Accident to an English Express Train.

A London cablegram says: An appalling railway accident occurred Wednesday morning near Thirsk, in Yorkshire, by which twenty persons were killed and a large number injured. The express train, which leaves Edinburg every evening for London, was running at full speed as it approached Thirsk, when ahead of it appeared a heavily ladened goods train. The two trains crashed together, making a most terrible wreck. To add to the horror the carriages caught fire and were destroyed.

The scene at the wreck was pitiable. Some of the bodies taken out of the debris were burned beyond all semblance to humanity. Their clothing had been destroyed, and in some cases the jewelry worn was melted by the intense heat. This will render the identification of the dead extremely difficult, if not altogether impossible.

KILLED IN A WRECK.

A Disobedient Engineer Causes the Death of Ten People.

A passenger and freight train on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad collided at Fair Rock, near Manayunk, about 9:30 Monday morning and ten people were killed and fifteen injured. It is said the accident was caused by the engineer of the north bound train disobeying orders. The south bound track being occupied, the engineer was ordered to wait at Pencoyd until the south bound express from Gwynedie, due at Broad and Callohill streets, Philadelphia, at 9:36 A. M., had passed. Disregarding this he moved northward, and just north of the Manayunk tunnel met the express. To add to the horror of the scene, the wreck took fire.

Little Things.

Warmth is essential to all bodily functions. Therefore, an equal bodily temperature should be maintained by exercise, by clothing or by fire.

The fluid of our bodies is to the solid in proportion as nine to one. Therefore, a like proportion should prevail in the total amount of food taken.

Light exercises an important influence upon the growth and vigor of animals and plants. Therefore, our dwellings should freely admit the solar rays.

Late hours and anxious pursuits exhaust the nervous system and produce disease and premature death. Therefore, the hours of labor and study should be short.

The fluid part of our bodies also wastes constantly; there is but one fluid in animals, which is water. Therefore, water only is necessary, and no artifice can produce a better drink.

The solid part of our bodies is continually wasting and requires to be repaired by fresh substances. Therefore, food which is to repair the loss should be taken with due regard to the exercise and waste of the body.

Decomposing animal and vegetable substances yield various noxious gases which enter the lungs and corrupt the blood. Therefore all impurities should be kept away from our abodes, and every precaution be observed to secure a pure atmosphere.

Moderation in eating and drinking, short hours of labor and study, regularity in exercise, recreation and rest, cleanliness, equanimity of temper and equality of temperature—these are the great essentials to that which surpasses all wealth, health of mind and body.

Pure atmospheric air is composed of nitrogen, oxgen and a very small proportion of carbonic acid gas. Air once breathed has lost the chief part of its oxgen and acquires a proportionate increase of carbonic acid gas. Therfore, health requires that we breathe the same air once only.

In its Worst Form

After Physicians Failed, Hood's Sarsaparilla Perfectly Cured.

Great mental agony is endured by parents who see their children suffering from diseases caused by impure blood, and for which there seems no cure. This is turned to joy when Hood's Sarsaparilla is resorted to, for it expels the foul humors from the blood, and restores the diseased skin to fresh, healthy brightness. Read the following:

"We think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most valuable medicine on the market for blood and skin diseases. Our two children suffered terribly with the

"August Flower"

"What is August Flower for?" As easily answered as asked. It is for Dyspepsia. It is a special remedy for the Stomach and Liver.—Nothing more than this. We believe August Flower cures Dyspepsia. We know it will. We have reasons for knowing it. To-day it has an honored place in every town and country store, possesses one of the largest manufacturing plants in the country, and sells everywhere. The reason is simple. It does one thing, and does it right. It cures dyspepsia.

are compounded in accordance with a medical formula known and admitted by all educated physicians to be the oldest, most standard, most widely used, most frequently prescribed, and by far the most valuable of any that the profession have yet discovered. In the Tabules the ingredients are presented in a new form that is gaining favor all over the world and becoming the fashion with modern physicians and modern patients.

They are compact, easy to carry, easy to swallow, tasteless if taken according to directions, and the dose is always accurate. Every one enjoys the method and the result. They act gently but promptly upon the kidneys, liver, stomach and intestines; cleanse the system effectually; dispel colds, headaches and fevers; cure habitual constipation, making enemas unnecessary. Are acceptable to the stomach and truly beneficial in effects.

A single TABULE taken after the evening meal, or just before retiring, or, better still, at the moment when the first indication is noted of an approaching cold, headache, any symptom of indigestion or depression of spirits, will, in a large majority of cases, remove the whole difficulty in an hour, without the patient being conscious of any other than a slightly warming effect, and that the expected illness failed to materialize or has disappeared.

The Tabules are put up in small bottles, each containing six doses, the whole easily carried in the vest pocket or portemonnaie. There is no fear of spilling or spoiling anything with which they come in contact.

The Bird With a Broken Wing.

I walked through the woodland meadows,
Where sweet the thrushes sing,
And found on a bed of mosses
A bird with a broken wing.
I healed its wound and each morning
It sang its old, sweet strain;
But the bird with the broken pinion
Never soared as high again.

I found a young life broken
By sin's seductive art,
And touched with a Christ-like pity,
I took him to my heart.
He lived with a noble purpose,
And struggled not in vain;
But the life that sin had stricken
Never soared as high again.

But the bird with the broken pinion
Kept another from the snare,
And the life that sin had stricken
Raised another from despair.
Each loss has its compensation,
There is healing for every pain;
But the bird with a broken pinion
Never soars as high again.

—[Hezekiah Butterworth.

AT THE THREE PIGEONS.

When I was about thirty years old, I went fishing one Sunday on the banks of the Cher, near Saint-Avertin. It was Easter time, a little warm but quite pleasant near the water. I had installed myself in an excellent place. At my feet the brownish-green water wound tranquilly in and out between grassy banks. Daisies and field-flowers grew on either side close to the water's edge. I heard from time to time the bells of Agaz and Saint-Avertin ringing for service, and I took great pleasure in the thought that it was Sunday, that I had a long day before me, that I had no unpleasant neighbors to disturb me in my enjoyable occupation.

I had unhappily reckoned without my host. About three o'clock I saw appear, behind the poplars, a couple who placed themselves on the other side of my rod, about ten feet distant.

They were a middle-aged man and a lady, young and very pretty. The gentleman, clean-shaven, clothed entirely in black, had a very correct air and a very severe countenance; the lady in a gray dress and straw capote trimmed with blue ribbons, was blonde, plump and very lively. They carried a fishing-rod, and the husband made his wife sit down while he adjusted the rod and arranged the bait.

Without appearing to watch them I soon perceived that they were novices in the art.

"Good!" thought I. "They are amateurs and will not trouble me unless they frighten away the fish with their chattering."

They caught nothing. On the other hand, in less than an hour I had my basket half-full. My neighbors were still unsuccessful. Finally, the young woman, disgusted, threw down her rod and strolled slowly toward me. At the moment she reached me, I landed a large perch, and I took a mean pleasure in leaving him flopping about on the grass, before putting him into a basket.

"Oh," cried the young woman, "want a beautiful fish"—then in an insinuating voice she added:

"Monsieur, how do you catch so many fish while we have not been able to take even a bleak?"

I was young then, and though I was always timid in the presence of women, I was not insensible to a pretty face. I replied, therefore, as gallantly as I could:

"Oh, Madam, it is only that you do not understand. To fish with a line is a more difficult art than one thinks. But if you will follow my advice I will show you how to fish. Here, seat yourself. I will prepare your hook."

I showed my pupil the tricks of the rod, of which she pretended to know utterly ignorant. After a few instructions she did fairly well. Her spot was a good one and the fish allowed themselves to be taken.

At each lucky pull at the line, the little lady laughed like a child, clapped her hands, turned towards her husband, who, gravely smiling, seemed very happy in his wife's joy, and thanked me with a ceremonious politeness.

At last the afternoon waned. About six o'clock we stopped fishing, and I was about to take leave of my companions, when the young woman ran to her husband and whispered to him. He listened with a thoughtful air, evidently a little startled. After a moment I saw them coming toward me, but it was the lady who said to me:

"Monsieur, you have been so kind to us that we cannot leave you in this way. It is owing to your goodness that we have caught these fish, and it is but right that we should eat them in company. Will you give us the pleasure of dining with us?"

The gentleman added his invitation to that of his wife. They urged me in such a cordial way that I accepted and we went to Saint-Avertin.

At the "Three Pigeons" the husband asked for a private parlor and ordered dinner. We were pleasantly served in a room where windows opened wide upon a garden filled with flowers.

The fresh air had sharpened our appetites. Besides our fish we had a roast fowl, asparagus, a tart, and Vouvray wine. I was seated at the right of the pretty lady, who laughed constantly, and who did not leave my plate or glass empty for a moment.

The husband was less jovial; he wore a constrained smile, and even the wine did not have the effect of loosening his tongue. At certain moments he seemed almost embarrassed. I had taken upon myself the duty of carving the fowl, and, sharpening my knife, I cried gayly:

"Pass the fowl to me, I know how to carve, and I can cut off heads in great style."

I was astonished at the small success of my pleasantry. The husband reddened to his eyes, his wife turned pale, and a dead silence reigned in the room.

They were very reserved about their affairs. I had put adroit questions, because I was anxious to know with whom I had dined—but they had answered in a very evasive way. All that I could learn was that they were staying at Tours, and that they lived at Orleans.

When we had taken our coffee, night had fallen and it was time to depart. I had done justice to the repast and was very gay; before leaving I thanked them warmly for their hospitality, and declared that I had never enjoyed myself better than in their society. That made the young woman smile, and I cordially extended my hand to her husband, who, after a moment's hesitation, gave me his. I shall never forget the strange sensation I experienced when I grasped that icy hand.

"I hope that we may meet again," I said, "when I may have the pleasure of returning your hospitality."

"I do not believe that," he said, with a singular accent. "We leave Tours tomorrow. Adieu! Monsieur."

In fact, I never did meet them again at Saint-Avertin, although I went every Sunday. I often thought with pleasure of the good dinner which I had eaten at the "Three Pigeons."

Three months passed. One day I was exceedingly busy at my desk in the office when some one entered and presented at the wicket a check. In those days we frequently had checks presented for payment for public services. I took the paper without looking at the person who handed it in, to my chief to sign. Returning, I was curious enough to read it.

It was an order for three hundred francs to be paid to the bearer, M. Bleiger, "High Executioner."

What was my horror when I reached the wicket to recognize in the "high executioner" my host at the "Three Pigeons" and the husband of the pretty lady.

I then remembered that an execution had take place at Tours the day before my fishing excursion.

I had dined with the headsman! —[From the French in Romance.

Trading in China.

It is amusing to buy things in China, says Eli Perkins in the New York Sun. The coolies in Shanghai constantly surround you with baskets of bric-a-brac and curios. One will hold up a white Kiukiang bottle vase, twenty inches high, decorated with dragons and worth about $15 in New York, and say pleadingly:

"What you givee?"

"No want him, John?"

"He velly good—lookee five claws"—pointing to the five-clawed dragon—"velly old curio. What you givee?"

"How much want, John?"

"Ten dolla."

"No, too much."

"What you givee?"

"Oh, $2."

"Yank! chi! hop! keel no can have," yell the whole crowd of curio sellers disdainfully. When the howling subsides John holds up the vase again and says:

"What you givee?"

"Nothing. I don't want it. Get out!"

"What you givee?"

"Oh, a dollar," I say, walking away.

Then there is a hurried consultation, a dozen curio men yelping in discord, when the man runs after us holding out the vase as he cries:

"Can havee! Can havee!"

Elephants Fond of Finery.

Strange as it may seem, the elephant is passionately fond of finery, and delights to see himself decked out with gorgeous trappings. The native princess of India are very particular in choosing their state elephants, and will give fabulous sums for an animal that exactly meets the somewhat fanciful standards they have erected.

For these they have made cloths of silk so heavily embroidered with gold that two men are hardly able to lift them.

An amusing incident of elephantine pride is narrated by Sir Samuel Baker. The elephant which usually led the state procession of a Rajah being sick, the magnificent trappings were placed on one which had up to that time occupied only a subordinate place.

The animal, delighted with finery, showed its glee by so many little squeaks and kicks of pleasure that general attention was attracted to it.

Not long after another state procession was formed, and the previous wearer of the gold cloths being restored to health, took his accustomed place and trappings, when the now degraded beast, imagining, perhaps, that he was being defrauded of his promotion, was, with great difficulty, restrained from attacking the leader of the parade.—[New York Dispatch.

A Wonderful Experience.

The awe with which the small boy looks upon a retired mariner is probably due to the marvellous experiences the mariner remembers to have had. An example of this extreme marvellousness came up recently in the course of a conversation between a lad of six and an ex-sea-captain.

"Captain Skaggs, did you ever get your leg bitten off by a shark?" asked the boy.

"Did I, sonny?" he replied. "Did I? Well, rather. Dozens of them!" —[Harper's Magazine.

Peculiar Powers of a New Mineral.

Litho-carbon, which is a mineral somewhat resembling asphalt, is the most remarkable mineral of its class known. It is claimed that it makes a perfect insulator; that as a paint it will resist heat or gases of any kind; that it is capable of being rolled into a tissue free from odor, and practically indestructible when employed in the production of mackintoshes, canvas belting, waterproof tents, etc. It possesses peculiar powers, enabling it to enter and fill the pores of iron and steel, rendering these metals impervious to acids, etc. It is also said by Iron to make common leather waterproof, and it can be applied to wood pulp for the transformation of that material into what looks and acts like ebony or horn. The saturation of a ship's plates with hot litho-carbon frustrates the attack of barnacles, and the plate will neither rust nor foul. A portion of the smokestack of the steamer Dean Richmond, where the heat, through the use of a blower, rises to 800 degrees Fahrenheit, was painted with litho-carbon several months ago, and remains undisturbed and unblistered, while other parts of the vessel have necessarily been painted many times. A piece of sheet iron covered with litho-carbon japan is stated to have been subject to an actual heat of 415 degrees Farenheit without crack or blister, and remained so tenacious that the iron could be bent at an angle without disturbing the glossy surface. For varnishing railway and private carriages, painting iron bridges, roofs, steamships, houses, etc., this material acts as an insulator, and it is reported that it will neither crack nor blister under any known atmospheric temperature. At great heat litho-carbon will soften, but it will not take fire at any point. If all that we hear of this mineral be true it will form one of the most widely useful substances of its class known.

Some Husbands Grow Old Fast.

A curious fact for the physiologist's investigation is the premature ageing of old women's young husbands. The young man who marries a woman twenty years his senior by the time he is well in his forties looks 60, while the young woman who weds the same disparity of years keeps her youth as long as her temperament and disposition permit. When the Baroness Burdett-Coutts married her very youthful spouse, Mr. Bartlett, she was a well-preserved spinster of 60 odd. Now the gallant Mr. Burdett-Coutts, as he is called, looks, it is said, fully up to that, while the baroness, who is close upon 80, appears as bright and as energetic as in middle life. There is no preservation of health equal to a good heart and an ample fortune, according to the Boston Herald, and the aged wife of the ambitious young American is distinguished for both of these possessions. Old age can be held at bay until the very end, as Miss de l'Enclos' career bears witness, but the conditions must be favorable, and the years cannot be "well gilt." Poverty never kept any woman young; but, after all, perhaps there is a good deal of justice in the ravaging of time, and this premature aging of men who marry thus for wealth and position is but the double interest fate exacts from its debtors.

Quite Another Thing.

"Genevieve, I am getting only $1000 a year. Do you think your affection strong enough for you to become my wife on that income?"

"I am afraid not, Mr. Shippy, but it is quite enough to induce me to accept one."—[Chicago News Record.

Hunting Tigers in India.

The only two methods of tiger-hunting that are practical really here are "netting," and sitting up all night in a tree by a "kill" waiting for the tiger to return for his food. Almost all sportsmen have tried this latter, and generally been disappointed, as I was in another part of India, and always solemnly vowed that each occasion should be their very last, only to be found at it again on the very next opportunity. Some really like this solitary watching, but it has very many drawbacks to its enjoyment. Several Indian sportsmen, who have killed their forty for fifty tigers, have told me they had been nearly always unsuccessful with it.

It is very wearisome work sitting from about four o'clock in the afternoon until daybreak next day, always on the alert to see something that does not come; and with the darkness mosquitos come in quantities, and perhaps a scorpion will ferret you out, or, worse than all, you may be visited by the red ant. It is very uncertain when a tiger will return to the "kill." He may do so as early as three or four in the afternoon, or just before daybreak, or not at all, often being frightened away, perhaps by some unforseen circumstance.

The slightest rustle will make him stop, and once his suspicions are aroused, he will not venture near. To shoot him on foot by stalking is an impossibility. The sportsman will occasionally come upon a tiger when after other game, and may then have a chance of a shot. If there are a few men who keep together, a tiger, even if wounded, will think twice before charging into the middle of them, and will always shirk the last ten or fifteen feet.

None but the most foolhardy or utterly ignorant would venture to follow a wounded tiger into long grass or very close cover, where it has every advantage, and the hunter may be seized before he has time to raise his rifle. One of the tiger's greatest aids in his attacks is his voice, the sudden coughing roar of which is paralysing to the coolest, and of course for a certain shot the nerves must be perfectly steady, with "no flinching."—[Harper's Magazine.

Time No Object.

Probably the most accommodating railway line in the world is the little narrow-gauge Bridgton and Saco River Railroad. A Chicago couple who took a trip to Bridgton recently were much surprised at the moderate pace made by the train, but their surprise was increased when the train was brought to a full stop and the engineer, fireman, conductor and brakeman walked back along the track to look at a brindle cow that had been unwise enough to cross just ahead of the engine and was toppled over a small embankment. The shock was not enough to kill her, and the trainmen squandered several minutes debating whether it would be best to knock her in the head and end her sufferings. But the animal got on her feet without assistance and convinced them that she was good for another long lease of life. Finally the train resumed its journey. The next day, when the Chicago visitors were making the return trip, as they approached the scene of the mishap of the previous day, one of them laughingly remarked: "I wonder if they will stop the train to make inquiries about that old cow." The words were hardly spoken when the brakes were applied and the train stopped long enough for the engineer to exchange greetings with a farmer in a downfield, who imparted the valuable information that the cow was still alive and, with a handful from [illegible]

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

He Has Something to Say of the Quaint Old City of San Antonio.

A Conglomeration of People of All Colors and Many Languages.

There is no town on the continent that is so quaint, so antique, so curious as San Antonio. Its tropical parks and plazas, its narrow streets, its evergreens and flowers, its clean, cosy cottage homes and stately mansions all mixed up in neighborly proximity, its public buildings of pearly stone that are made to conform to the old Spanish style, with battlements and balconies and turrets, and its mixed population of all colors and many languages, cause a stranger to feel like he has crossed the Rubicon and gotten into another country—and he has. Of course it is in Texas, but Texas is a free and independent state with imperiums and imperiosa every where you go. In Tyler you can't buy a cigar out of the hotel show-case on Sunday, but in San Antonio you can buy anything you want in the stores and saloons, for they are all open and Sunday is no more than any other day, except that there is more frolic and more beer, more whisky, more shows, more badger fights, more attractions in the suburbs, than any other day. There are enough people to fill the churches but they are a small proportion of the population. The Germans and Mexicans and negroes predominate and they do as they please. They are not reckless or devilish or malicious, nor does it take many policemen to regulate the city—not as many as it does in Atlanta in proportion to the population, but the general idea is to do as you please provided you don't impose on any one else. There is an old English maxim that says "custom makes law," and so these Germans are just doing as their fathers have done for generations. They are thrifty, frugal, industrious, peaceable people and are not conscious of doing anything wrong in the way they observe the Sabbath. The Mexicans are a lower order of civilized humanity, but they rank with the negroes or laborers and citizens, except that they are poor cooks, poor waiters in the hotels and poor cotton pickers. It is hard to draw the color line between so many colors. It is hard on the railroads to have to provide separate first-class cars for the negroes when so few of them travel except on excursions. I have seen a beautiful chair-seated car occupied by one negro woman for one hundred and fifty miles while the white folks were crowded for room in another. But such is the law.

The climate of San Antonio is just like balmy spring. I don't wonder that the hotels are full of northern people. That is right. Let them come and spend their money and mix up with us. Wherever you see a northen man move south and invest some money, you may bet that he is a clever man, a fair man. He is neither a fool nor a fanatic, nor has he a bitter prejudice against our people. Such men are always welcome.

I went from San Antonio to Beeville, a lovely little town away down near Corpus Christi—just think what a name—"the body of Christ." Bee county was named for General Bernard E. Bee, who was killed at the first battle of Manassas. His region is called the France of America, and it is filling up with people who grow fruits and vegetables. I rode out to see some of the beautiful gardens. They do not seem to have any seasons but they plant and gather all the year round. I saw corn that was silking and squashes that were blooming and the gardners were still putting seed in the ground.

San Antonio is the great market for all this country and it is growing rapidly. It is already the largest city in Texas. It has been called the wicked city, but I did not see any signs of it except the desecration of the Sabbath. Maybe Sam Jones has reformed it for a time and I saw it at its best. Sam is the town talk and it is certain that he captured all the thinking people, including preachers, and editors, and lawyers and doctors.

On Sunday I went to the Episcopal church with a friend who lives there and the venerable minister, Mr. Richardson took for his text, "What went ye out for to see, a reed shaken by the wind?" After he had explained the text and the context he suddenly aroused and surprised his congregation by comparing Sam Jones to John the Baptist, and he drew the parallel at great length. He said, "we Episcopalians do not like Sam Jones' methods nor his eccentricities, for they are utterly at variance with all our traditions, but he comes like John the Baptist came, and he calls the people to repentence for many long years. I have been preaching to you but I confess my inability to draw the outside souls who are perishing for the light. My prejudices against Sam Jones have all been dissipated and I thank the Lord for raising up such a wonderful man." He said a great deal more in his praise, and it astonished me for we all know that the Episcopalians are the last to yield one jot or one tittle of their time honored and stately forms of church worship. The contrast between Sam Jones' simple forms and these of this service that I heard and saw was striking, for here were twenty little boys in gowns and surplice, singing and chanting the ritual and sometimes they were front-face and sometimes right-face, and at the close of the service their leader took up the staff with six silver crosses and they all followed him down the aisle singing and then back again to the chancel. I never saw that done before, but it was pretty and very impressive. They have no ladies in the choir. They have boys only, and when I asked my companion, why she smiled and said "lady singers in a choir always quarrel." I know they did in our town but I didn't know it was a general thing. I had rather hear those though than boys and they don't quarrel while they are singing.

Every mile of this journey would say and what went ye out for to see? Most of the people went out from curiosity, but those Americans from Iowa and Dakota, many of them elderly men and ministers and professors, they enjoyed it, and it was a study with me to see them. They usually were going to or from some of the Mexican cities and would stop over at San Antonio and [illegible]

The price of cotton advanced the day following Cleveland's election.

Weaver and Harrison will now be "counted out" in all the States since they didn't get votes enough to be "counted in."

The next Senate will be Democratic without any doubt. A roster of the States shows the status to be Democrats 44, Republicans 40, Populites 4.

Alabama sends a solid Democratic delegation to Congress. Robbins' majority in this district is 8,000, and even Baltzell in the second district failed to get enough votes by several thousand to be "counted in."

The Shelby Chronicle is disposed to take a sensible view of the jack o' lantern project that has bobbed up from the marshes of Calera. It says:

Calera wants a good sized slice of territory taken from Chilton county and added to Shelby county. In this movement she will more than likely be defeated, as Chilton county will hardly surrender any portion of her territory without a hard fought battle.

Sterling A. Wood, Esq., of Birmingham, was selected as Clerk of the Supreme Court vice Gen. Jno. W. A. Sanford, resigned. Mr. Wood is a lawyer of ability and great energy, and as an old boyhood friend we congratulate him upon having secured the best paying office in Alabama. The position is worth about $7,000 annually.

Three negroes—a woman and two men—were shot by a white man in Dallas county, the other night. One of the men was advancing with a drawn pistol and was shot and killed. The woman, his mother, picked up an ax and attempted to brain the white man, who shot and fatally wounded her. The third negro picked up a pole and declared no "poor white trash" could hurt "his color" and live. The white man blazed away and wounded the third negro.—Hamilton Times.

It was an overwhelming and glorious victory for Democracy. Ohio and California have joined the Democratic ranks and Cleveland will have over 300 votes in the electoral college out of a total of 444. Weaver carried almost as many states as Harrison, and our Alabama Manning says the Republican party is the dead element in the nation whose stench made the people so sick and faint and desperate that its removal was a necessity. With Cleveland and a Democratic congress an era of prosperity will be revived in the South, and the people rule.

Shelby county is already a larger county than Chilton and it is a rare scheme to attach a portion of Chilton to Shelby, especially when the people of the coveted section of Chilton do not wish to be so attached. The milk in the cocoanut seems to be about this: Nearly one hundred citizens of Calera want the office of probate judge of a new county and the remaining few voters in that miserable hamlet have high hopes that some other official lightning might strike them. Isn't this the true solution of the movement to locate the Shelby county line below Clear Creek? We think it is, and the more we think of it the funnier it looks.

The nearest approach to Heaven in this life is a christian home; a home where the godly father sits as king and mother queen, and rule, each, with the scepter of love. We are all too much disposed to complain at this life. We seem prone to look only on the dark side, and never, or seldom, on the bright. We count all the rainy days of the season, the days of gloom, but number not those of sunshine and brightness; and yet they are far the most numerous. So in the home where God is not, misfortunes and sorrows are counted, but the blessings of God are unnumbered and unnoticed. But in the truly christian home all are numbered and counted as good. Even the trials and sorrows of life are looked at through the eye of faith, which reveals the divine and loving hand in shaping us for a glorious, a brighter and happier life.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

Some Lessons of the Late Election.

For the VIEW.

I. "Truth crushed to earth will rise again. The eternal years of God are hers."

II. There can be but two great parties in this country.

III. The overwhelming verdict of the 8th of November emphasizes the truth, that the Democracy is, "The party of the people, for the people, by the people."

IV. Although demagogues like Weaver and Kolb may for a time delude the masses, yet the "sober, second thought" of the people may be relied upon to penetrate the thin disguise of their baneful teachings, and reject their pernicious doctrines.

V. That the integrity of the "solid South" cannot be overthrown, while malignant partisans, aided and abetted by the forces of ignorance, predjudice and hatred ally their cohorts to assail the citadel of our liberties by threatened "Force Bills" and other legislation alike unconstitutional and ruinous.

VI. That honesty and moral uprightness pays: as notably instanced in the past course of Mr. Cleveland; while duplicity and double dealing is sure in the end to meet with merited condemnation and defeat.

VII. The concensus of history harmonizes with our late experience in conveying the lesson that secret political oganizations are anti-republican in principle, dangerous to the liberties, and hostile to the best interest of the people; and as such are unworthy of their confidence, and ought not to receive their endorsement.

VIII. That intolerance, and boycotting because of political opinion is repugnant to every mind actuated by the principles of love of liberty and meets with unqualified disapproval by all courageous, manly hearts.

IX. Let discord and strife cease, and let those appostles who preach a gospel of hate no longer have followers, nor hearers. "Let us have peace." "So mote it be."

QUINQUE.

THE OFFICIAL COUNT.

The official count of the vote of Chilton at the election on the 8th inst., is as follows:

FOR PRESIDENT.

Weaver	902
Cleveland	648
Harrison	121
Weaver's majority	133

FOR CONGRESS.

Longshore	912
Robbins	585
Craig	121
Robbinson	56
Longshore's majority	150

The reduction of the vote was due to errors and irregularities. At Benson 56 votes were cast for G. A. Robbinson for congress.

Weaver's plurality is 254. Longshore's 327.

Jemison, Macedonia and Kincheon boxes were thrown out on account of irregularities.

New York.

New York, Nov. 9.—The Herald says: It was a Democratic revolution. Grover Cleveland has carried the country by a sweeping majority. The latest returns indicate that West Virginia is in the Democratic column. New York gives Cleveland and Stevenson a majority of nearly 40,000. The Democratic host in the city of New York was united and rolled up a majority for Democratic candidates never equalled in any presidential election. It will approximate 80,000. Kings County comes across the bridge with a majority approximating 30,000. Other lower counties in New York, Queen and Richmond did their share in rolling up the vast majority of more than 100,000 to Harrison's meagre plurality at the city line. Democratic landslide extended to the assembly. The majority in the lower house is so large that a Democrat will succeed Frank Hiscock in the United States Senate. Thus for the first time in many years, New York will have two Democratic Senators in the higher branch of Congress. Tammany has elected all of its State and county tickets. The figures make an interesting study for political statisticians. They show that Tammany was true and loyal to the Democratic ticket and that the proclamation of its leader Richard Croker, that everything must be sacrificed for national candidates was literally carried out by the Tammany leaders in all the districts of New York.

ALABAMA.

The majority for Cleveland in Alabama is 51,246. Weaver carried but fourteen counties out of the sixty-six. The following table gives the result in majorities in the counties:

Wanted—Good Roads.

"The value of good wagon roads is not appreciated in this country", said Walter S. Friedburg, a guest of the Southern. "We are great railroad builders, but we sadly neglect that equally important item, good wagon roads. It frequently costs the farmer as much to get his grain to the station, a distance of a few miles, as to transport it half across the continent to market. A country will issue bonds to help build a railway which it may not need, yet considers that it has done all that is necessary when it compels the able-bodied citizens to stand in the wagonways and talk politics a couple of days each year. "The American method of improving a road is about as follows: A man is elected overseer who can not tell a culvert from a Chinese pagoda—knows no more of road building than a dray horse does of trigonometry. He summons the citizens to come forth on a certain day to 'work' the roads. A few of them come with scrapers and shovels. They paw around in the dirt for a day or two, each man acording to his own ideas, and the last state of that road is infinitely worse than the first. The result is that it requires four horses to do the work of one when the farm produce is to be hauled to market. The old Romans did these thing differently. They realized that good roads were of vastly more importance to a community than fine buildings. The highways they constructed are good after twenty centuries wear and tear. The poorest country of Europe has better highways than the richest state of the American union. Road building is a science with the Europeans. It is strange that in this country, where labor saving machinery has been brought to the highest perfection—where it is the boast of the people that 'every edge is made to cut'—we have the worst roads, the greatest labor waster to be found in the world."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A full Democratic delegation will go to Congress from Alabama. Robbins' majority in this district will be over 8,000 as will be seen from the table of majorities in this issue.

Candidates for Solicitor in the Fifth Judicial Circuit are as follows:

Composed of the counties of Autauga, Bibb, Chambers, Chilton, Coosa, Elmore, Macon, Randolph and Tallapoosa.

J. M. Fitzpatrick, Wetumpka, Elmore.

J. R. Wood, S. L. Brewer, P. S. Holt and Waddy Thompson, Tuskegee, Macon County.

H. J. Gilliam, Dadeville, Tallapoosa county.

The Alliance Movement.

The South has come through the stress of her first danger, stronger, more hopeful, in better shape for prosperity than ever. When we come to look back, we are bound to see that the great uprising of the farmers in the Alliance was in reality a move toward Democracy and away from Republicanism. The few selfish leaders who sought to wean the rank and file from the Democratic party in the South failed, and failed utterly. They adhere strictly to the party, and their struggle was a fight inside.

In the West it was distinctly an abandonment of the Republican party, a rebellion of the overtaxed millions against wrong and greed. The people did not care to call themselves Democrats. The long prejudice was too strong for that. They halted on half way ground, in a party of their own. But their breaking away from the Republican is for good and all. In four years more they will be in the ranks of the Democratic party to stay. The great uprising has worked out underlying purpose, through much strife, much false teaching, much selfish grasping of leaders, much drifting hither and thither. But the end is well. The people with unerring instinct, saw the truth and voted for it.

The little fuss we have had here in the South will have the happy effect of warning Democratic leaders that a party cannot sit down and enjoy the offices. It must go forward in the service of the people. In Alabama we shall reap the benefit in more progressive legislation than we have had in ten years. We shall see the election laws reformed, the convict lease system abolished, a savings bank law enacted and the schools more diligently nurtured. The spur that has pricked us will prove an instrument of beneficence.—Age-Herald.

Result of the Election.

The election of the democratic nominees for president and vice-president, has a beneficial influence upon the business of the country, and expecially is this true of its effect upon Southern business and Southern securities.

A prominent stock and bond broker said to a Journal reporter this morning: "The effect of the election of Mr. Cleveland is apparent already, and in a more marked degree than I anticipated. Southern stock and securities began to look up almost as soon as it was determined definitely that Mr. Cleveland was elected. For instance, I sold yesterday to a northern firm some stock in an Alabama railroad which the same firm refused to touch when I offered it to them last week. In addition I made a sale of Southern corporation bonds in New York at figures in advance of the quotations a week ago.

"The most striking evidence of a better feeling in the east regarding the southern securities is the fact that since yesterday morning, I have received inquiries from New York correspondents for southern stocks and bonds. I have had relations with this broker for the past two or three years, and for six months he has not filed an inquiry with me. The fact that he begins inquiry for southern investments so soon after Mr. Cleveland's election is known has impressed me with the belief that we may look for a revival all along the line of southern bonds and stocks."—Montgomery Journal.

THE ALABAMA MIDLAND.

A Project For Building It Through.

The Mobile and Ohio have a project before them, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, looking to the construction of a connecting link between the Alabama Midland, belonging to the Plant system (Savannah, Florida and Western,) which terminates at Montgomery, and some point on the Mobile and Ohio. The Montgomery, Tuskaloosa and Memphis Railroad company offers to complete the road if the Mobile and Ohio will guarantee the interest on 5-per-cent bonds issued at the rate of $20,000 a mile. The distance is about 170 miles. It would give the Mobile and Ohio an outlet to the Southeast and make a through line between St. Louis and the Atlantic coast and Florida. A large amount of work has been done on the Montgomery, Tuskaloosa and Memphis, and 100 miles of the route is graded. The proposition is being favorably received, but no action has yet been taken by the Mobile and Ohio directors. President Clarke will shortly go over the proposed route.

Mr. Wood is a lawyer of ability and great energy, and as an old boyhood friend we congratulate him upon having secured the best paying office in Alabama. The position is worth about $7,000 annually.

Three negroes—a woman and two men—were shot by a white man in Dallas county, the other night. One of the men was advancing with a drawn pistol and was shot and killed. The woman, his mother, picked up an ax and attempted to brain the white man, who shot and fatally wounded her. The third negro picked up a pole and declared no "poor white trash" could hurt "his color" and live. The white man blazed away and wounded the third negro. —Hamilton Times.

It was an overwhelming and glorious victory for Democracy. Ohio and California have joined the Democratic ranks and Cleveland will have over 300 votes in the electoral college out of a total of 444. Weaver carried almost as many states as Harrison, and our Alabama Manning says the Republican party is the dead element in the nation whose stench made the people so sick and faint and desperate that its removal was a necessity. With Cleveland and a Democratic congress an era of prosperity will be revived in the South, and the people rule.

Shelby county is already a larger county than Chilton and it is a rare scheme to attach a portion of Chilton to Shelby, especially when the people of the coveted section of Chilton do not wish to be so attached. The milk in the cocoanut seems to be about this: Nearly one hundred citizens of Calera want the office of probate judge of a new county and the remaining few voters in that miserable hamlet have high hopes that some other official lightning might strike them. Isn't this the true solution of the movement to locate the Shelby county line below Clear Creek? We think it is, and the more we think of it the funnier it looks.

The nearest approach to Heaven in this life is a christian home; a home where the godly father sits as king and mother queen, and rule, each, with the scepter of love. We are all too much disposed to complain at this life. We seem prone to look only on the dark side, and never, or seldom, on the bright. We count all the rainy days of the season, the days of gloom, but number not those of sunshine and brightness; and yet they are far the most numerous. So in the home where God is not, misfortunes and sorrows are counted, but the blessings of God are unnumbered and unnoticed. But in the truly christian home all are numbered and counted as good. Even the trials and sorrows of life are looked at through the eye of faith, which reveals the divine and loving hand in shaping us for a glorious, a brighter and happier life.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

Some Lessons of the Late Election.

For the View.

I. "Truth crushed to earth will rise again. The eternal years of God are here."

II. There can be but two great parties in this country.

III. The overwhelming verdict of the 8th of November emphasizes the truth, that the Democracy is, "The party of the people, for the people, by the people."

IV. Although demagogues like Weaver and Kolb may for a time delude the masses, yet the "sober, second thought" of the people may be relied upon to penetrate the thin disguise of their baneful teachings, and reject their pernicious doctrines.

V. That the integrity of the "solid South" cannot be overthrown, while malignant partisans, aided and abetted by the forces of ignorance, predjudice and hatred ally their cohorts to assail the citadel of our liberties by threatened "Force Bills" and other legislation alike unconstitutional and ruinous.

VI. That honesty and moral uprightness pays: as notably instanced in the past course of Mr. Cleveland; while duplicity and double dealing is sure in the end to meet with merited condemnation and defeat.

VII. The concensus of history harmonizes with our late experience in conveying the lesson that secret political ogunizations are anti-republican in principle, dangerous to the liberties, and hostile to the best interest of the people; and as such are unworthy of their confidence, and ought not to receive their endorsement.

VIII That intolerance, and boycotting because of political opinion is repugnant to every mind actuated by the principles of love of liberty and meets with unqualified disapproval by all courageous, manly hearts.

IX. Let discord and strife cease, and let those appostles who preach a gospel of hate no longer have followers, nor hearers. "Let us have peace." "So mote it be."

QUINQUE.

THE OFFICIAL COUNT.

The official count of the vote of Chilton at the election on the 8th inst., is as follows:

FOR PRESIDENT.

Weaver	902
Cleveland	648
Harrison	121
Weaver's majority	133

FOR CONGRESS.

Longshore	912
Robbins	585
Craig	121
Robbinson	56
Longshore's majority	150

The reduction of the vote was due to errors and irregularities. At Benson 56 votes were cast for G. A. Robbinson for congress.

Weaver's plurality is 254. Longshore's 327.

Jemison, Macedonia and Kincheon boxes were thrown out on account of irregularities.

New York.

New York, Nov. 9.—The Herald says: It was a Democratic revolution. Grover Cleveland has carried the country by a sweeping majority. The latest returns indicate that West Virginia is in the Democratic column. New York gives Cleveland and Stevenson a majority of nearly 40,000. The Democratic host in the city of New York was united and rolled up a majority for Democratic candidates never equalled in any presidential election. It will approximate 80,000. Kings County comes across the bridge with a majority approximating 30,000. Other lower counties in New York, Queen and Richmond did their share in rolling up the vast majority of more than 100,000 to Harrison's meagre plurality at the city line. Democratic landslide extended to the assembly. The majority in the lower house is so large that a Democrat will succeed Frank Hiscock in the United States Senate. Thus for the first time in many years, New York will have two Democratic Senators in the higher branch of Congress. Tammany has elected all of its State and county tickets. The figures make an interesting study for political statisticians. They show that Tammany was true and loyal to the Democratic ticket and that the proclamation of its leader Richard Croker, that everything must be sacrificed for national candidates was literally carried out by the Tammany leaders in all the districts of New York.

ALABAMA.

The majority for Cleveland in Alabama is 51,246. Weaver carried but fourteen counties out of the sixty-six. The following table gives the result in majorities in the counties:

Wanted—Good Roads.

"The value of good wagon roads is not appreciated in this country", said Walter S. Friedburg, a guest of the Southern. "We are great railroad builders, but we sadly neglect that equally important item, good wagon roads. It frequently costs the farmer as much to get his grain to the station, a distance of a few miles, as to transport it half across the continent to market. A country will issue bonds to help build a railway which it may not need, yet considers that it has done all that is necessary when it compels the able-bodied citizens to stand in the wagonways and talk politics a couple of days each year. "The American method of improving a road is about as follows: A man is elected overseer who can not tell a culvert from a Chinese pagoda—knows no more of road building than a dray horse does of trigonometry. He summons the citizens to come forth on a certain day to 'work' the roads. A few of them come with scrapers and shovels. They paw around in the dirt for a day or two, each man according to his own ideas, and the last state of that road is infinitely worse than the first. The result is that it requires four horses to do the work of one when the farm produce is to be hauled to market. The old Romans did these thing differently. They realized that good roads were of vastly more importance to a community than fine buildings. The highways they constructed are good after twenty centuries wear and tear. The poorest country of Europe has better highways than the richest state of the American union. Road building is a science with the Europeans. It is strange that in this country, where labor saving machinery has been brought to the highest perfection—where it is the boast of the people that 'every edge is made to cut'—we have the worst roads, the greatest labor waster to be found in the world."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A full Democratic delegation will go to Congress from Alabama. Robbins' majority in this district will be over 8,000 as will be seen from the table of majorities in this issue.

Candidates for Solicitor in the Fifth Judicial Circuit are as follows:

Composed of the counties of Autauga, Bibb, Chambers, Chilton, Coosa, Elmore, Macon, Randolph and Tallapoosa.

J. M. Fitzpatrick, Wetumpka, Elmore.

J. R. Wood, S. L. Brewer, P. S. Holt and Waddy Thompson, Tuskegee, Macon County.

H. J. Gilliam, Dadeville, Tallapoosa county.

The Alliance Movement.

The South has come through the throes of her first danger stronger, more hopeful, in better shape for prosperity than ever. When we come to look back, we are bound to see that the great uprising of the farmers in the Alliance was in reality a move toward Democracy and away from Republicanism. The few selfish leaders who sought to wean the rank and file from the Democratic party in the South failed, and failed utterly. They adhere strictly to the party, and their struggle was a fight inside.

In the West it was distinctly an abandonment of the Republican party, a rebellion of the over-taxed millions against wrong and greed. The people did not care to call themselves Democrats. The long prejudice was too strong for that. They halted on half way ground, in a party of their own. But their breaking away from the Republican is for good and all. In four years more they will be in the ranks of the Democratic party to stay. The great uprising has worked out underlying purpose, through much strife, much false teaching, much selfish grasping of leaders, much drifting hither and thither. But the end is well. The people with unerring instinct, saw the truth and voted for it.

The little fuss we have had here in the South will have the happy effect of warning Democratic leaders that a party cannot sit down and enjoy the offices. It must go forward in the service of the people. In Alabama we shall reap the benefit in more progressive legislation than we have had in ten years. We shall see the election laws reformed, the convict lease system abolished, a savings bank law enacted and the schools more diligently nurtured. The spur that has pricked us will prove an instrument of beneficence.—Age-Herald.

Result of the Election.

The election of the democratic nominees for president and vice-president, has a beneficial influence upon the business of the country, and especially is this true of its effect upon Southern business and Southern securities.

A prominent stock and bond broker said to a Journal reporter this morning: "The effect of the election of Mr. Cleveland is apparent already, and in a more marked degree than I anticipated. Southern stock and securities began to look up almost as soon as it was determined definitely that Mr. Cleveland was elected. For instance, I sold yesterday to a northern firm some stock in an Alabama railroad which the same firm refused to touch when I offered it to them last week. In addition I made a sale of Southern corporation bonds in New York at figures in advance of the quotations a week ago.

"The most striking evidence of a better feeling in the east regarding the southern securities is the fact that since yesterday morning, I have received inquiries from New York correspondents for southern stocks and bonds. I have had relations with this broker for the past two or three years, and for six months he has not filed an inquiry with me. The fact that he begins inquiry for southern investments so soon after Mr. Cleveland's election is known has impressed me with the belief that we may look for a revival all along the line of southern bonds and stocks."—Montgomery Journal.

THE ALABAMA MIDLAND.

A Project For Building It Through.

The Mobile and Ohio have a project before them, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, looking to the construction of a connecting link between the Alabama Midland, belonging to the Plant system (Savannah, Florida and Western,) which terminates at Montgomery, and some point on the Mobile and Ohio. The Montgomery, Tuskaloosa and Memphis Railroad company offers to complete the road if the Mobile and Ohio will guarantee the interest on 5-per-cent bonds issued at the rate of $20,000 a mile. The distance is about 170 miles. It would give the Mobile and Ohio an outlet to the Southeast and make a through line between St. Louis and the Atlantic coast and Florida. A large amount of work has been done on the Montgomery, Tuskaloosa and Memphis, and 100 miles of the route is graded. The proposition is being favorably received, but no action has yet been taken by the Mobile and Ohio directors. President Clarke will shortly go over the proposed route.

Letter From a Keeley Student.

Fort Payne, Ala., Nov. 8, 1892.

W. H. LAWRENCE: Dear Sir:—If a tag had been placed on me "Let him off at Keeley Institute, Fort Payne," I would have arrived here more safely and in a better condition. As it was I presented a most beautiful appearance when I arrived at this Mecca of the enthralled.

I was taken to the Institute by H. F. Pope the genial manager of the establishment, where I was introduced to Dr. Smith, the physician in charge. He ascertained that I was a disciple of Esculapius, and a cordial greeting was accorded me. I can say truthfully that I never received kinder treatment than I did at the hands of these gentlemen. It is needless for me to go into details regarding the treatment and life at the Institute, as every intelligent man who reads knows what it is.

I have taken the treatment not quite two weeks; have experienced no ill effects, and can say that my general health is better, both as to my mental ability and physical powers, and I am firmly convinced that I shall experience a radical cure and be free from the bondage of that damning curse—drunkenness.

In two or three weeks I shall graduate, and may then find time to write more at length respecting the efficacy and the benefits I derived from the Keeley Treatment.

An Alliancesman Rejoices.

MR. EDITOR:—We have gained a grand and glorious victory. It is almost too grand to be true, but it was a regular landslide for the Democratic party. The blue and the gray have clasped hands in our great democratic triumph. There is no East no West no North no South, but one grand Union and great commonwealth. The South stood nobly by the old Democratic flag. Her armor was invulnerable and the populists and republicans could not pierce it anywhere.

The South sends greeting to her sister states in the North, East and West in their great and glorious victory for Democracy.

Many thought Alabama was going to desert the Democratic party, but they did not know the people of Alabama. They are Democrats. They thought the Alliancemen of Alabama were going to desert the Democratic party but they were mistaken. The majority of the alliancemen of this State are Democrats and patriots, who love their country too well to turn it over to such men as Weaver, Parsons, Poter and Company. They stood nobly by the Democratic party. I saw in the Birmingham News where a correspondent of Sand Mountain says God bless the Alliancemen of that section, because they saved them from republican rule. We say, God bless the Alliancemen of all Alabama, because they saved us from the disgrace of republican rule, and "black heels on white necks." There were many good men in Alabama led off by dishonest leaders to vote for Weaver. Come back friends, come back to the old Democratic ship. Let us be lenient toward them. Let us extend the right hand of fellowship and the olive branch of peace to them. We want peace in Alabama.

Now let us go to the house of God and kneel around His altar and thank him for the great blessings he has bestowed upon us in giving our beautiful and beloved Southland the prospect of having four years of peace and prosperity, and an honest stable government.

The manufacturers and capitalists will come South now and invest their capital and the farmers will soon get better prices for their cotton and we will have better times everywhere.

Let us by all means have peace is the prayer of an

ALLIANCEMAN.

THE TEXAS RAZOR-BACK.

A Hog That is Sometimes a Match for Human Smartness.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"No, I have not been toying with a buzz-saw nor shaking hands with a cyclone," said Samuel Heatherby, as he limped to a seat in the Laclede rotunda. "I have been having a little matinee with a razor-back hog. I've bought a home at Dallas, Texas, and have taken great pains to fix my lawn au fait. You see down in that country people pretty nearly live out o' doors, and the flowers that bloom only in the spring up here shed their sweetness all the year around. The other day I discovered that one of those long, lank, razor-back hogs, that can outrun an ostrich and root a hole through a bank vault while you wait, had gotten in and started to tunnel down to China. I went out and made a few impromptu remarks to him, but he didn't mind—kept right on with the artesian well. Then I broke a $4 rake across his spinal vertebræ and the circus commenced. I would get him within three feet of the open gate, when he would turn run over me and begin a new excavation before I could get my feet out of the air. I then called in a policeman, but he ran between the copper's legs, threw him a double somerset and broke his collar-bone. The miserable tool of an effete administration is now suing me for damages.

"I was just about to turn in a fire alarm and ask the department to put the porker out, when an old negro stuck his head over the fence and offered to remove him for two bits. I closed with him at once, sat down, nursed myself and watched proceedings. He went up to the hog and remarked: 'You stay right w'ar you is. D'ye hayr! Don't ober lemme catch you onto dis yer lot!' The hog looked at him and moved toward the gate. The negro tried to head him off, but he uttered a loud 'woof' and went down the street like Old Nick beating his tambourine. Don't tell me that man was descended from the monkey! He has simply shed his bristles, that's all.

ALL GOOD WILL DO.

The Parable Suggests to Democracy an Honest Response.

Jersey City Democrat.

An amusing incident lately happened at Stevenson, Ala. The elder (a Republican and a member of the Weaver combination) was praying. In his intercession he expressed great anxiety for the welfare of the State and country and pleaded earnestly for the success of his combination at the polls. "Lord—said he—for the good of the country and State, may we all hang together!" "Amen! Amen!" shouted a Democratic farmer. The elder continued—"Not, Lord in the sense that our Democratic brother means, but may we hang together in the spirit of accord and concord." "Any cord will do, Lord, any cord will do," was the immediate response of the farmer, to the consternation of the elder and the vast amusement of the meeting.

A resolution was subsequently passed, that all political references should be rigidly excluded from future meetings on pain of suspension.

FOR GROVER CLEVELAND

Was a Big Majority of Votes Cast in Tuesday's Election.

Latest News Giving the Results of the Great Battle of Ballots.

Latest dispatches confirm the reports that Cleveland and Stevenson have been elected by an enormous majority. All the doubtful states have been conceded to the democrats, and at latest accounts Ohio was being claimed for Cleveland. The consolidated vote of the country will probably show the result as the most wonderful in American history.

SITUATION ACCORDING TO LATEST RETURNS.

The following is a brief compilation of the latest returns as showing the present situation:

Cleveland has carried the entire south, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, five electoral votes in Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Wisconsin, California and Ohio, giving him a total of 200 electoral votes.

Harrison has carried Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts, eight electoral votes in Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, Washington and Wyoming, giving him a total of 112 electoral votes.

Weaver carried Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada and South Dakota, a total of 32 electoral votes.

The house of representatives will have 100 democratic majority and the senate will be controlled by the democrats and the farmers' alliance.

From returns up to date the United States senate will stand forty-two democrats, forty-one republicans and five people's party.

Wyoming is in doubt. It is possible it may be third party.

After the 4th of March next, the democrats will be in full control of the government. They will have the president, the senate, and the house of representatives, while the chief justice and several of the justices of the supreme court are democrats. Democracy may have an absolute majority of the United States senate; certain it is, that the republicans will be in the minority. The present populist senators, Kyle and Peffer, are with the democrats on the tariff and other great issues. Those who will probably be chosen as a result of this election are in the same. Then the democrats are certain to control the senate and in probability they will have a majority of probably nine votes. The present republican majority in the senate is six, a change of three will make the body a tie with the decisive vote in the vice-president. A change of four gives a majority of two against the republicans. The terms of eight democratic senators expire March 4th, but each of the states they represent have elected democratic legislatures. They are Gray, of Delaware; Pence, of Florida; Turpie, of Indiana; Cockerell, of Missouri; Blodgett, of New Jersey; Bate, of Tennessee; Faulkner, of West Virginia; and Mills, of Texas.

The republican senators who go out are Felton, of California; Hawley, of Connecticut; Dawes, of Massachusetts; Stockbridge, of Michigan; Davis, of Minnesota; Sanders, of Montana; Paddock, of Nebraska; Stewart, of Nevada; Hiscock, of New York; Casey, of North Dakota; Quay, of Pennsylvania; Allen, of Washington; Sawyer, of Wisconsin, and Warren, of Wyoming. Stewart, of Nevada, who has abandoned the republican party, will be with the democrats on all important issues. He will be re-elected as a people's party senator. New York's legislature is surely democratic, and Senator Hiscock's successor will be a democrat.

In the Nebraska legislature the republicans are in the minority, which means an anti-republican senator. The democrats have carried the Wisconsin legislature. Thus Senator Sawyer's successor will be a democrat, making both senators from Wisconsin democratic. These four are certain to make a combination majority of one over the republicans. And it is probable that the democrats have the legislature of Montana. The Illinois legislature is democratic but no senator is elected this year. This legislature, however, elects a senator to succeeded Senator Cullom March 4, 1895. In Michigan and Iowa where the democrats had hopes of getting the legislatures and consequently senators, there were republican gains. However, it would seem that the republicans will lose five senators, which will cause them to have five less than a majority of the senate. But even if the democrats get only three or four they will control the senate. That they will do this is sure.

The democrats will have the senate, and can admit New Mexico and Arizona, which will, perhaps, be one of the first acts of the new congress. The admission of these territories will give the democrats four more senators, or absolute control of the body, without the aid of the people's party senators.

The enormous democratic majority of 144 in the house has been cut down. The majority will probably now be between eighty and one hundred.

ILLINOIS IN THE DEMOCRATIC COLUMN.

A Chicago special of Wednesday says: Cleveland, Altgeld and the democratic state ticket have been elected by a majority ranging from 20,000 to 25,000. The managers of both the republican and democratic committees agree that Cleveland and Stevenson have carried the state by about 15,000 majority, the republicans making them majority less, the democrats more than this number; that Altgeld has been elected governor by about 15,000 majority; that the congressional delegation will stand fifteen democrats to seven republicans; that in the next legislature the democrats will have a majority in each branch; that Joe Cannon has been elected to congress from the Fifteenth district; that Cook county is democratic by at least 20,000 majority. While complete returns have not been received from all precincts, enough is known to indicate clearly how the next Illinois general assembly will stand as to political complexion. It will be 28 democrats and 23 republicans, in the senate, and 80 democrats and 73 republicans, in the house. This will give the democrats a majority on the joint ballot of 180. The assemblymen and senators elected have the task of reapportioning the state into congressional districts under the census of 1890. Illinois gained two congressmen by the showing of the last census and the number of members in the state legislature will also be increased. The state senators elected Tuesday will hold over into 1894 and will participate in the election of a United States senator to succeed Cullom.

WEAVER CARRIES COLORADO.

A special of Wednesday from Denver says: Additional returns only tend to pile up the populist majority in Colorado, which will be anywhere from 5,000 to 7,000, with Waill, populist candidate for governor, probably 3,000 votes behind his tickett. Pence, populist, is elected to congress in the first district by 1,500 to 2,000 majority. The populist will have control of the lower house of the legislature and probably in the senate. The long term senators elected will have a vote in the session of 1895 for a United States senator to succeed Senator Walcott. Of the seventeen long term senators chosen the populists have elected ten or twelve, and possibly more.

NEBRASKA.

A Lincoln, Neb., special of Wednesday says: Congressman Bryan has been re-elected by the combined democratic and independent vote in the first district by seventy-five majority over A. W. Field, republican. There is a great republican gain in this district which gives Harrison electors 3,500 plurality, and the entire state ticket about 8,000 plurality. Harrison has carried the state and the entire republican state ticket is certainly elected.

CALIFORNIA IN DOUBT.

A San Francisco dispatch received Wednesday says: According to returns counted thus far Cleveland has a plurality in this city of about 7,000. Returns are too meagre to say with positiveness which electoral ticket has carried the state, but indications are that Cleveland's plurality in this city will be overcome by Harrison's plurality in other parts of the state, and that the latter will probably carry the state.

A special of Wednesday from Milwaukee states that Chairman Wall, of the republican committee, claims Wisconsin by 18,000 majority for the democrats. The democrats elect six out of the ten congressmen, as follows: Barwig, second district; Mitchell, fourth; Brickner, fifth; Wells, sixth; Barnes, eight; Lynch, ninth. The republicans elect: Cooper, first district; Babcock, third; Shaw, seventh and Haugen, tenth.

FROM ALABAMA.

Official reports from sixty out of sixty-five counties in Alabama give Cleveland a majority of 46,000, and a clean sweep on the congressional ticket. All nine were elected. The counties still to report will probably increase Cleveland's majority to 48,000.

NEW JERSEY.

A special of Wednesday night from Trenton says the indications are that Cleveland has carried New Jersey by 7,000, and that Werts, democrat, for governor, has been elected by a plurality of 4,000. The next legislature will stand as follows: Senate—Republicans, four; democrats, IV. House—Democrats, 56; republicans, 25. For congress the republicans have carried the first and second districts and possibly the eighth. Returns from the latter district still incomplete.

WEST VIRGINIA DEMOCRATIC.

Latest dispatches state that West Virginia's majority for Cleveland and Stevenson is 5,000. The democrats likewise have elected a solid congressional delegation.

INDIANA DEMOCRATIC.

Dispatches of Wednesday night from Indianapolis are to the effect that Cleveland has carried the state in the lowest vote it ever polled by the greatest plurality it ever gave to any presidential candidate excepting to Grant at his second election. The last plurality will probably exceed 10,000. The entire democratic state ticket is elected. The legislature elected is democratic in both branches, the majority on joint ballot being about thirty-five. The congressional delegation will stand eleven democrats and two republicans.

THE COMMERCIAL-GAZETTE, CONCEDES OHIO.

A special from Cincinnati, Ohio, at 1:15 Thursday morning, says: The Commercial-Gazette, republican organ, concedes the state to Cleveland electors by 350 plurality.

THE NEWS IN WASHINGTON.

President Harrison calmly attended to routine public business, Wednesday, as though nothing had happened. Throughout the day he gave no indication whatever of disappointment or chagrin at the result of the election. He was undoubtedly the calmest person in the house. As one of his friends expressed it, "If he is defeated, he will lay down the cares of official life without the least personal regret, and seek the more congenial seclusion of private life with undisguised satisfaction."

Most of the members of the cabinet did not care to discuss the topic of the returns. Secretary of the Treasury Foster and Postmaster General Wanamaker allowed themselves to be interviewed, but they said little of interest. Mr. Wanamaker attributed democratic success to the foreign element in the populations of New York and Chicago. He said he could not believe that good Americans who understood American institutions could turn their backs on the doctrine of protection. Mr. Blaine declined to be interviewed, but is known that he bears up under Mr. Harrison's defeat with striking fortitude.

THURSDAY'S DISPATCHES.

A pecial of Thursday from Des Moines says: The latest and best figures place the total republican vote in Iowa at 226,000; democratic 208,000; populist 18,000 and prohibitionists 8,000. This includes estimates for several counties. These figures cannot be far from correct. Of the eleven congressmen ten are republican, though one district, the eleventh, is still claimed by the democrats, but merely as a possibility.

Thursday's dispatches from Indianapolis are to the effect that returns from all but thirteen counties in Indiana show democratic plurality of 6,686. Counties not yet reported are expected to swell this to 10,500, and possibly 11,000. The people's party vote will probably reach 25,000, and prohibition vote 12,000. The democrats have elected ten members of congress; republicans two, in the sixth and ninth districts, with the first district still in doubt, but most reliable estimates have it that the senate will stand democrats 34, republicans 15. The house will probably stand democrats 65, republicans 28, people's party 7.

LATEST FROM OHIO.

The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, in Thursday's issue, on carefully compared official and semi-official returns from eighty-one counties in Ohio and conservative estimates on the other seven counties estimate Cleveland's plurality in Ohio at 678. In some parts of Ohio republican computers seem to have been figuring for Hamilton county on Taylor's plurality for secretary of state where as Taylor ran 500 votes in round numbers ahead of Harrison in Hamilton county.

A special from Boston says: A careful revision of the Associated Press returns of the total gubernatorial vote of Massachusetts as furnished by correspondents and town clerks was made Thursday and all clerical errors eliminated. The following is the result. Total vote minus people's party and scattering 876,884; Hamlin, prohibitionist, 7,111; Haile, republican, 183 948; Russell democrat, 185,880. Russell's plurality, 1,937.

GOSSIP FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

The strong probability of an extra session of congress, immediately following the inauguration of the president-elect, was the subject of general conversation in Washington Thursday. A special session of the senate is always called at the beginning of the new administration to confirm the members of the cabinet and the new diplomatic representatives of the United States abroad. But the present election having turned on questions of domestic policy it is said to be obvious to experienced political leaders of all parties that an extra session of both houses of congress will almost inevitably result.

Secretary of the Treasury Foster among others admits this. The country, he says, challenged the judgment of the republicans on the McKinley bill, and the result must be accepted as the will of the people that a different policy shall be put into effect.

Private Secretary Halford has resumed his duties at the white house. He arrived in Washington Thursday morning from Indianapolis. He frankly admitted his surprise and disappointment at the result of the election and says he gave up all hope for the republican ticket when he first learned of the heavy democratic majority in Chicago and New York City.

The president did not have very many callers Thursday and received absolutely any private advices on the subject of the election. He has accepted the result in a most philosophical manner, and is said to attribute his failure to hear from party managers as a clear indication that they have nothing encouraging to communicate.

Chairman Carter, of the republican national committee, sent the following telegram to President Harrison Thursday afternoon:

"Returns show that we have been defeated by pronounced majority. The defeat can only be attributed to reaction against the progressive policies of the republican party.

"THOMAS H. CARTER, Chairman."

The News of the World Condensed Into Pithy and Pointed Paragraphs.

Interesting and Instructive to All Classes of Readers.

A conference of mill managers in New Bedford, Mass., Thursday, decided to follow Fall River's action, and increase the wages of operatives 7 per cent the first of September.

Hon. G. W. Eddes died at his home in Mansfield, Ohio, Wednesday, age 68 years. He served four terms in congress, from 1878 to 1886, and was once the democratic candidate for the supreme bench of Ohio.

A London cablegram of Wednesday says: George Charles Spencer Churchill, duke of Marlborough, was found dead in his bed in Blendheim palace at Woodstock this morning. He was forty-eight years of age.

A St. Louis dispatch says: Congressman O'Neill decided Thursday to contest the claim of Charles F. Joy to election in the eleventh Missouri district by going into the United States court and asking for a count of the vote in the district.

A dispatch from Elizabeth, N. J., says that three unknown men fishing on Bay bridge, on the Jersey Central railroad, at Elizabethport, Tuesday, were struck by a train and knocked into the water, two of them being drowned. They are supposed to have been from Jersey City.

A Columbus, Ohio, special says, Daniel Borois, aged sixty-two, who was a democratic jugde of the election in the second ward, shot himself dead with a pistol before daylight Tuesday morning. The cause was trouble over financial and family matters. The election went on in his house.

An explosion occurred in Paris Tuesday morning, by which two policemen lost their lives and another was fatally injured. The affair was undoubtedly the work of anarchists, who were seeking revenge upon the Carmaux Mining Company, whose long struggle with their employers was amicably settled a few days ago.

A special cable of Thursday to the New York Herald from Kingston, Jamaica, brings the intelligence that advices received from Hayti tell of the attempted uprising at Cape Haytien. Hippolyte was on the alert, however, and nipped the revolt in the bud. There have been many arrests, and it is rumored some executions.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, republican, in its issue of Wednesday says the democrats will be in undisputed control of all branches of the government for the first half of Cleveland's new term at least. They will thus be entirely responsible for all the legislation of the two years beginning with March 4, 1893, and the people will be able to hold them to a rigid accountability for the management of its affairs.

There was a great demonstration by the advocates of universal suffrage at Brussels, Belgium, Tuesday on the occasion of the opening of the chambers by King Leopold. The city has seldom witnessed a more imposing or resolute exhibition of popular will; and it evidently impressed both the king and members of parliament. The crowd overflowed the street all along the royal route from the palace to the chambers, both on the king's departure and return.

A Washington special of Tuesday says: Mr. Blaine is represented as attaching some importance to the point originally raised by General Butler, of Massachusetts, that the twenty-four additional representatives given to eighteen states by the eleventh census and which are to be represented by a corresponding number of votes in the electoral college ought to be elected to and seated in the present congress, before its expiration on the 4th of March next, especially in view of the fact that there is a remote possibility that the election of president may be thrown into the house.

Advices of Thursday from Chile say that war is imminent between Peru and the Argentine Republic on one side and Chile on the other. A dispatch from Valparaiso says that Peru is well armed and her forces have recently received 100,000 Winchester rifles, with other formidable machines of war. In the Argentine Republic vigorous recruiting, both among natives and foreigners, is being prosecuted, and the government is with feverish haste arming troops. There is no longer doubt of a secret compact against Chile between the two republics.

There was a big liberalist demonstration at Brussels, Belgium, Thursday night at the Alhambra theater, fully 3,500 being present. At the conclusion of the meeting the liberals paraded through the streets 2,500 strong and marched toward the palace, preceded by a red flag. Arriving at Rue Montague, the procession was charged by a detachment of gendarmes. The paraders were separated into two portions and were finally dispersed at about midnight amid howlings and hootings and cries of "long live universal suffrage."

The six story Miller block in Boston, Mass., which was damaged by fire three weeks ago, was again on fire Wednesday night. The two lower floors and basement are occupied by Rice, Kendall & Co., and are filled with paper stock. The third floor was occupied by W. B. Bent & Co., job printers; the fourth and fifth floors by S. T. Abbott & Co., book binders; the sixth floor by the Boston Mailing Company. It was on this floor that the fire started. The fire confined itself to the two upper floors and was speedily extinguished. The losses are estimated at $60,000.

STREET CAR STRIKERS

Are Causing Considerable Trouble in Columbus, Ohio.

The street car strike, which was inaugurated in Columbus, O., several days ago, took a threatening aspect with the attempt of the company to start their cars Thursday morning. About seventy-five policemen, under Chief Murphy, were taken to the Long street barns before seven o'clock, and preparations made to run out the cars. Two non-union motormen and two conductors were on hand and took their positions after Chief Murphy had driven the strikers from the company's premises across the street into the commons. The cars were filled with policemen and succeeded in getting a good start. They were stopped and turned back before reaching South Side, where a large number of strikers had congregated. The sympathizers with the strikers are testifying the shop hands and all union men to turn out and prevent the cars from running.

A Natural Query.

A bright little boy, whose home is in a neighboring city, numbers among his adult friends a Grand Army veteran, whose name, for story-telling purposes, may be called Rose. The boy had listened eagerly and with absorbing interest to Mr. Rose's description of the battle's that he had helped to fight during the war of the rebellion. The story-teller, although not a braggart, had the true story-telling instincts, and he did not forget to mention the conspicuous part he took in the various battles. The conflict of which Mr. Rose loved best to talk was the battle of Gettysburg. It was in that conflict that his own prowess shone to the greatest advantage. As his own recollections ran, he took such an important part in that fight that, in the imagination of his impressionable young listener, his personality dominated the historic scene.

Not long ago the boy's father took him to see a realistic panorama of Gettysburg. The boy was all eyes and enthusiasm. He scarcely heard the terse description that his father undertook to give him of the famous battle, but after feasting his eyes upon the scene, he turned to his parent and inquired, "Pa, is this the place where Mr. Rose worked?"—New York Times.

The Largest Serpent.

The largest serpent of which accurate measurements have been taken and noted was an anaconda, which Dr. Gardner found dead and suspended to the fork of a tree during his travels in Mexico. It was dragged out into the open by two horses and was found to measure thirty-seven feet in length. Inside of it were discovered the bones and flesh of a horse in a half digested state, and there was no doubt that it had swallowed the animal whole.

Dr. Gardner and other travelers say that anacondas, pythons and boas attain a length of over forty feet, but there is no recorded instance of one having been encountered longer than that which has been mentioned, though many persons have seen serpents alive which they estimate to be of considerably greater size.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Japanese Cannot Waltz.

Henry Goodrich, who has returned from Japan, had a funny experience at Osaka. "The governor's wife," said he, "was one of my special friends, and once when the emperor and empress were expected to visit the city a ball was arranged in their honor. They were not expected to be present, but many of their nobles would be. The governor was anxious that his wife should be able to lead in the opening quadrille and begged me to teach her. So I undertook the task and formed a little class. They learned the square dances easily and could even hop through a polka, but they could never, never learn to waltz. They turn their toes in such a funny way that waltzing, I fear, will always be beyond them.—Exchange.

How He Caught Cold.

Doctor—"How did you get such a cold?"

Little Boy (hoarsely)—"I don't know. I was baptized Sunday."

"Your folks are not baptists."

"No, he just sprinkled me, but the water was awful cold."

"Humph! What did you do Saturday?"

"Nothin', only went fishin'."

"Catch any?"

"No. I would a caught a lot, but I fell in, an' after that my teeth chattered so it scared th' fish."

Hard to Understand.

Little Boy—"I shu'd think these 'thousand-leg' bugs would starve or somethin'."

Little Girl—"Why?"

"They've got to hunt for things to eat, same as other bugs, haven't they?"

"Of course."

"Well, I don't see how they can keep all those legs goin' a d think of anything else."—Street & Smith's Good News.

Look at the Clock!

See how regularly its pendulum swings to and fro. With kindred regularity do the bowels move when the habit of body is reformed by the thorough laxative and promotor of digestion and secretion, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The liver, too, always affected in constipation, resumes its activity when this medicine is used. Not less efficacious is it in malaria and kidney trouble, rheumatism and nervousness.

FOR THE GOOD OF OTHERS

Rev. Mr. Williams Heartily Endorses Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We are pleased to present this from Rev. A. A. Williams, of the Silsbee Street Christian Church, Lynn, Mass.:

"I see no reason why a clergyman, more than a layman, who knows what he speaks, should hesitate to approve an

Article of Merit

and worth, from which he or his family have been signally benefited, and whose commendation may serve to extend those blessings to others by increasing their confidence. My wife has for many years been a sufferer from nervous for which she found little help. She has tried many things that promised well but ultimately failed. Last fall a friend gave her a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It immediately relieved her headache, and she has not suffered since. She has taken in all three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which have done her more real good than all the medicine she has ever taken before. Hood's Sarsaparilla is truly a wonderful medicine, and we cheerfully recommend it to all.

DAVID C. COOK.

The Pioneer Publisher of Sunday-School Literature.

DAVID C. COOK.

David C. Cook, of Chicago, whose name has become a household word through his Sunday-school publications, is but 43 years old. He was born in East Worcester, N. Y., in 1850, a son of Rev. R. S. Cook, a Methodist minister, and from a child an earnest and devoted member of the church and Sunday-school.

He began teaching in Ward's Rolling Mills Sunday-school, in Chicago, at the age of 17, helping also in one and sometimes two mission schools of the West Side, meeting at different hours, until the great fire of 1871 changed his plans, and marked the beginning of his work on the North Side. Seeing the distress and pressing need for help, he left his home and rented rooms in one of the poorest and roughest neighborhoods of the burnt district, where, with three other young men whom he persuaded to join him, he gave himself to relief and mission work. Here on North avenue, in a German theatre and beer hall, was started his "Everybody's Mission," afterward removed to a building of its own near by. This mission, with attendance of 350 to 450, he started, built up and sustained without aid from any church or society for five years, until others were able to occupy the field. He also organized and superintended on the North Side, North Avenue Mission, Lake View Mission and Lake View Union schools, and, in Elgin, the Grace Church School, besides several smaller enterprises elsewhere.

His first publications were prepared only for his own schools, then, to divide the cost of type-setting, he asked orders from others. No one could be more surprised than he at the demand thus created. Afterwards his schools afforded a place for first testing new helps and new ideas. It is to this love for the work, and close application to it, that schools are indebted for what he has done for the cause of Sunday-school literature.

The police of New York city in one year shot 160 mad dogs, attended to 302 foundlings, found 174 drowned people, turned off the Croton water which they found running 668 times, and reported 2,933 fires and 78,304 violations of ordinances.

For Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and Stomach disorders, use Brown's Iron Bitters. The Best Tonic, it builds the system, cleans the Blood and strengthens the muscles. A splendid tonic for weak and debilitated persons.

"The Old and The New."

The wind is wailing through the leafless trees,
And sweeps bare boughs with his fingers cold,
Till they yield with sighs, sad melodies,
Mourning the years whose days are told,
Sobs—Sighs.
So Time flies,
Ache to the heart, and tears to the eyes.

The old year yields up its dying breath,
And the wailing wind sobs a last good-by,
And the hush of peace which follows death
Reigns for a space in earth and sky.
Rest—peace,
Troubles cease.
Ended at last with the old life's lease.

But now the stillness is stirred again,
By a tremulous breath as in gladness drawn,
And as new life springs from the old life's pain,
From the old year's death is a new year born.
New birth!
Joy and mirth!
Fresh hopes waken for all on earth.

—[London Spectator.

Mr. Mortimore's Mistake.

Let me see—where was it that I first met her? Oh, yes; it was under the ancient arches of the old bridge, boating by moonlight, the sound of a flute played softly afar off, and all of a sudden the keel of my boat coming sharply in contact with somebody else's oars.

"Hallo, you!" cried out a clear, incisive young voice. "Where are you going to? Why don't you look which way you are steering?"

"Charley Dresden!" cried out I, little heeding the torrents of obloquy he was beginning to heap upon me.

"Old Mortimore!" he responded, joyously. "Why, who on earth would have thought of finding you dreaming on the Thames? Here! Come into my boat. Hitch on your old craft behind! And let me introduce you to Miss Sophy Adriance."

I looked as sharply at Miss Sophy as the moonlight and my own modesty would let me, for I knew that she was the especial admiration of my friend Charley Dresden. I had heard her blue eyes and peach-blossom cheeks raved about until even my much-enduring patience had failed.

She was pretty, slight, round and rosy, with China-blue eyes, a dimple in either cheek, and golden-brown hair worn in long loose curls, with none of the fashionable abominations of crimps, frizzes and artificial braids about her.

Hardened old bachelor though I was, I felt as if I could have fallen in love with her on the spot, if I hadn't known so well that Charley had the first inning.

We rowed home together, or, at least, as far on our way home as the Thames would take us. Sophy sang little boat ballads. Charley roared out tenor barcarrolles. I even essayed a German student song which I had learned at Heidelberg, nobody knows how long ago, and we parted the best of friends.

A week afterwards Dresden and I met face to face in St. James street.

"Hallo, Mortimore!" said Charley, his honest visage lighting up. "What do you think of her?"

"I think she is a pearl—a jewel—a princess among women!" I answered with perfect sincerity.

"Congratulate me, then!" cried Charley, beaming all over, "for I am engaged to her. Only last night! Look here!" opening a mysterious silver case which he took from his inner vest pocket. "What do you think of that for an engagement ring?"

"A fine diamond," said I, putting my head critically to one side, "and fancifully set."

"We're to be married in October," said Charley, lowering his voice to the most confidential tone. "It might have been sooner if I hadn't undertaken that business in France for our firm. But I shall be sure to be back by October."

So we parted with a reciprocating squeeze of the hand, and Charley's bright face haunted me all day with a sort of reminiscence of what might have happened also to me if I hadn't been five-and-forty, with a bald spot on the back of my head.

I spent one evening with her afterwards at the West End house, where she and her mother—a nice, bright-eyed little woman, the full-blown rose to correspond with Sophy's budding loveliness—dwelt in the cosiest of apartments, furnished in dark blue rops, and with canaries and geraniums in the windows.

"It's so kind of you to come," said Sophy, with a gentle pressure of the hand, when I went away. "I am so glad to welcome Charley's friends."

And I felt that I could cheerfully sit through another evening of commonplace chit-chat and photograph albums for such a reward as that.

Well, Charley Dresden went away, and as he didn't particularly leave Sophy Adriance in my charge, I didn't feel called upon to present myself at the lodging house where the blue rep figured and the canaries sang in the south windows.

I supposed, naturally enough, that all was going right, until one day I received a note from my old friend Bullion, the banker, a man of sixty, who wears a wig and spectacles and counts his income upon the double figures.

Bullion wrote from Brighton, where he had gone because he didn't know what else to do with himself in the dull season. He asked me to be his best man. Bullion was going to be married!

"Of course you'll think it a foolish thing for me to do," wrote Bullion; "but even at sixty a man has not entirely outlived the age of sentiment; and when once you see Sophy Adriance you will forgive any seeming inconsistency on my part."

"Sophy Adriance!" Was this the way poor Charley's blue-eyed fiance was serving him while he was across the Channel, trying to earn a little money for her sake? My heart rebelled against the fickleness of woman.

I went straight to the pretty West End house. It was possible that I might be misled by a similarity of name, although even that was unlikely.

"Is Miss Adriance at home?" I asked of the servant who answered the bell.

"No, sir. Miss Adriance is spending a few weeks with a friend at Brighton," she answered promptly.

That was enough. I went home and enclosed Bullion's letter in another envelope, directing it to poor Charley Dresden's address, Paris, adding a few lines of my own, wherein I endeavored to mingle consolation and philosophy as aptly as possible.

"It's an ungracious thing for me to do, sending this letter," wrote I, "but I believe it to be the part of a true friend to undeceive you as promptly as possible. Bullion is a millionaire. Sophy is possibly but a fallible mortal, after all. Be a man, Dresden, and remember that she is not the only woman in the world who would rather be an old man's darling than a young man's slave."

It was but a few days subsequently that the waiter showed an elegantly dressed young woman into my room at the hotel where I was stopping. I rose in some surprise. Aside from old Aunt Platt and my lady visitors were few. But the instant she threw up her thick tissue veil I recognized the soft blue eyes and damask-rose cheeks of Sophy Adriance.

"Oh, Mr. Mortimore!" she cried piteously, "I know you won't mind my coming to your hotel, because you seem exactly like a father to me." I winced a little at this. "But I have received such a letter from Charley, and as—as you've known him for a long time, I thought perhaps you could explain it to me. Oh, I have been so wretched! And indeed, indeed I didn't deserve it!"

She gave me a tear-blotted letter, and then sat down to cry quietly in the corner of the sofa until such time as I should have finished its perusal.

It was a fit mirror of Charley Dresden's impetuous nature, full of bitter reproaches, dark innuendoes, hurling back her troth and hinting gloomily at suicide. When I read it I scarcely wondered at poor Sophy's distress.

"What does he mean, Mr. Mortimore," asked Sophy, plaintively, "when he accuses me of deceiving him, of selling myself to the highest bidder?" Oh, it's so dreadful!"

"Are you about to become the wife of Mr. Bullion, the banker?" I asked, sternly.

"Oh, dear, no," said Sophy. "That's mamma!"

"Eh?" gasped I.

"It's mamma," answered Sophy. "She's to be married next week. Didn't you know it?"

I stared straight before me. Well, I had got myself into a pretty pickle by meddling officiously in affairs that didn't concern me.

"Look here, Miss Adriance," said I, "I will tell you all about it."

So I did. I described old Bullion's letter, my own false deductions therefrom, and the rash deed I had committed in sending the banker's correspondence to Charley Dresden.

"And now," said I, "do you wonder that he is indignant?"

Sophy's face grew radiant.

"But there's no harm done," said she. "No real harm, I mean. Because I've written him a long letter about mamma and Mr. Bullion, which he must have received the next mail after he sent off this cruel, cruel sheet of reproaches. And pray, Mr. Mortimore, don't look so woebegone," she said kindly. "Your mistake was natural enough."

Sophy was a true prophet. There was no "real harm" done. The next mail brought a letter full of entreaties to be pardoned, and a brief, brusque note to me, which told me, not exactly in so many words, but in spirit, that I had a great deal better have minded my own business.

And I really think I had. —[Boston Globe.

Percentage of Females Growing Less.

The last census reports show that the females as compared with the males have lost relatively since 1880 in the United States as a whole, the numerical loss being 1264 to each 100,000 males, as against a relative loss in 1880 of 1257 females to each 100,000 males. There has been a relative loss during the decade of 2070 females to each 100,000 males in the North Atlantic division; of 1718 females to each 100,000 males in the South Atlantic division and 1411 females to each 100,000 males in the south central division. There has been a slight increase relatively on the other hand of 269 to each 100,000 males in the north central division and 4450 females to each 100,000 males in the western division. In 19 states and territories there has been a relative increase of females to each 100,000 males, while in 29 states and territories there has been a relative decrease of females to each 100,000 males.

Queen Victoria's Dogs.

Dogs were first admitted to the court of England in the reign of Henry VIII. Under the present reign three dogs have been elevated to the highest canine dignities on account of their aristocratic families and their own peculiar merits. The names of the aristocratic trio are Marco, Roy and Spot. Marco is the queen's favorite, and he used to be very jealous of John Beown. His ancestry can be traced back to the Crusaders. He is what they call in England a Pomeranian, and at one of the recent dog shows he won the first prize—the mug of honor. The other favorite, Roy, is a collie, and Spot is a fox terrier with a record of 22 rats in a quarter of an hour.

These canine lords have their residences with their special names. Her Majesty's dog place is divided into three parts, the queen's veranda, collie court and umbrella court. The veranda is the principal one. It is a covered gallery around the kennel, and the queen likes to walk there.

Every kennel has a dining-room and a bedroom. The floor of the dining-room is separated from the veranda by an iron grating. It is paved with red and blue bricks, and the furniture consists of a trough always full of fresh water. The bedrooms have two large windows, generally kept open for the purpose of ventilation, and in a snug corner in each room there is a very low bed, with a mattress of fresh straw.

Umbrella court gets its name from the big umbrella in the middle of it, under which the dogs can shelter themselves from the sun and rain. A host of servants wait upon the canine nobility, and the queen is very severe with the officials who do not pay proper attention to her dogs. A chef is provided for them, and his instructions are to vary the menu of the dinners to Her Majesty's pets and to consult their tastes.—[Boston Transcript.

Making Roads.

Engineers learned long ago that the weight and hardness of rock have no bearing on its fitness for roadmaking, and whatever doubt existed that the same is true as to building stone was dissipated by the Chicago fire. Very heavy stone may be brittle. Slate weighing 175 pounds per cubic foot, and pure mica weighing 188 pounds, are of no value whatever for paving; and as to building stone, it is shown that a minute proportion of natural cement, possibly less than one per cent. and adding nothing to the weight, makes all the difference between the most tenacious stone and that which crumbles like loaf sugar.

At present the tendency is to prefer trap rock, and after that felcite and granite for roadmaking. In the last there is much variety, and the kind containing hornblende is greatly preferred to that containing mica. It is admitted, however, by all engineers, that we have yet a great deal to learn about roadmaking.—[New York Advertiser.

English as She is Spoke in Japan.

So anxious are the Japanese to learn English that the jinrikisha man or amah (maid) will repeat after you any English word they hear. Servants will come and beg to work for an American for their rice and the privilege of being entered in English. When we came away from Yokohama the last day I remember how proud our jinrikisha man was when he made us a present of a bundle of fans, and said, with his face all beaming with smiles, "Please accept from Fuji San No. 3," and how triumphantly he looked down upon the other "rikishs" who did not understand him. Fuji San was speaker of that speech that Cicero, way of his speech against Catiline.—[New York Sun.

The "Buzz" of Insects' Wings.

Now, it is not the "buzz" but the noise that is supposed to be made by the wings of insects in flying that will be the subject of this "note." I had intended to discuss the buzzing noise caused by either the slow or rapid flight of such creatures, but a critical investigation has warranted the conclusion that the wings play no part (or, if they do, it is but a minor one), in the buzzing noises so often heard to come from the direction of insects on the wing. I know that the supposition that the wings make the noise is even more than plausible on first thought, but the result of repeated experiments by the best entomologists show that the prevailing hypothesis is erroneous. It has been found that horseflies, bees, bumblebees and other insects of that ilk, can be held by the legs and made to produce the humming or buzzing noises so characteristic of the two-winged insect family, even though their wings be entirely removed; and that a partial (say the clipping of a half or two-thirds of each wing) removal of the organs of flight only serves to increase the shrillness of the noise. The part of the insect by which alone the sound is produced is the cavity known as the thorax, which corresponds with the chest or breast of larger animals. The inside lining of this cavity is a thin, resonant membrane to which are attached the wing and leg muscles. Two small holes or air passages communicate with this natural Æolian harp, and the motion of the insect's wings and legs causes these holes to open and close with every turn made necessary by the divers ins and outs of flight. The inflow and outflow of air through these holes (which may be compared to breathing, and which really is a species of that interesting operation), is the true cause of the sound which we call the "humming or booming" of the wings. Any curious person so disposed can test this by catching an insect of the class named and closing the airholes with wax. Be careful not to injure the creature or the results of the experiment will prove unsatisfactory.—[St. Louis Republic.

Disease Germs in Paper Money.

The possibility of infection being conveyed to a large number of persons by means of paper money has often been suggested, and an examination of the notes of the Bank of Spain current in Cuba shows that this form of currency is indeed liable to contain septic germs. The notes chosen for their experiments were some that had been in use for a good while, and were such as represented values of a few pence only. It was estimated that two notes, weighing altogether about fifteen grains, contained more than 10,000 germs of various kinds.

Cultures were made in broth, gelatine and agar, and these were injected into the peritoneal cavity of rats and guinea pigs, most of which died within twenty-four hours, the post mortem examination showing signs of peritonitis and congestion of the liver and kidneys. The blood of the heart and peritoneum was made use of to inoculate solid media, in which colonies developed so rapidly that it was impossible to determine their precise nature, many different forms being intermingled.—[London Lancet.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

The Philosopher's Visit to the Lone Star State Terminates

And He is Once Again Among His Family and Kindred.

It is a very old-fashioned thing to say, but I will say it again, "There is no place like home." When I had filled my last appointment in Texas and had boarded the train with my face turned homeward I was happy—my spirits buoyed me up and I sat lighter on the velvet cushion and every click of the wheels over the jointed rails gave a welcome sound, for it meant that much nearer home. It was after midnight when I left the nice little town of Franklin, and that midnight business has been the most serious drawback upon my comfort and happiness. Most every night my rest was broken, for I have to leave a place in the dark and sleepy hours or arrive at one, and it made me tired, very tired. One night I reached my town at 2 o'clock while it was pouring down rain and the little bridge over the ditch by the railroad had washed away and a timber about six inches square had been thrown across as a substitute. The landlord had a lantern and led a woman across very carefully. It seemed to me that if she could walk it I could, but I had a heavy valise in one hand and a light one in the other added to my abundant corporosity and raised my center of gravity beyond reason, and worst of all, just as the lady had put her foot on the ground the polite landlord swung his lantern before her and left me in the dark shadow. With one spasmodic leap I made a last step for the bank and missed it about a foot. I saved my baggage, however, and only got in about ankle deep, but it scared me awfully and I never got over it for an hour. I wish I had a picture of that scene. The next night I left at the same hour and by morning I was sick—sick with threatened pneumonia—and when I reached my destination I surrendered and went to bed and I dreamed I was in a coffin and was being shipped home in the express car, and it distressed me beyond measure to think how grieved my family would be to receive my mortal remains and how they would weep and sob and tell each other of all my virtues and never mention a fault—nary fault. But the good landlady got hot water and bathed my feet and gave me quinine and nursed me like a mother, and I survived and got better and shook off my fears and kept out of the coffin, and here I am in the land of the living where mercy may be sought and pardon found. It was a long, long ride coming home, but the drummers kept things lively, for they got on and off at every station and are always cheerful. We all talked politics and banked on Cleveland. At Trinity station a man got on the train to go seven miles to the next station and tendered the conductor 20 cents. Captain Mitchell told him politely it would take 28 cents, as he had no ticket. The man was cross and defiant, and said he wouldn't pay it. We were hardly out of town when the captain pulled the bell rope and gently let him down on terra firma. The man had plenty of small change for we saw it, but I think he wanted to get a lawsuit. He declared that he wouldn't pay but 3 cents a mile, ticket or no ticket. Of course he will find a lawyer to take his case, and all for 7 cents in money and a big lot of lacerated feelings. There was a poor, sad-faced woman with two children sitting not far from me, and as the butcher boy went to and fro with his basket of fruit the little chaps looked wishfully, but their mother shook her head. They made no complaint and seemed to understand that they were not in it, while the rest of us were enjoying the grapes and bananas. I didn't like that, and so I whispered the boy to give them each an apple and a banana and a paper of grapes and some to the mother and make no sign and pass on. It didn't cost me but 30 cents, but it was worth a dollar to see the surprise—the timid looks of wonder and of pleasure as they glanced around and ate of their fruit. It was a little thing but it made the miles shorter to them and to me. Try this on sometime when you travel.

I arrived home just before daybreak and found the house all dark and still, and the old dog asleep on the piazza. I patted him into silence and then stepped into the parlor and tumbled down upon a sofa and was soon dreaming, but not of coffins. It was 8 o'clock before I was found and suddenly I was awakened by soft arms around my neck and a shower of kisses on my old rough face. Mrs. Arp and the girls pulled and screamed their heart's delight, for it was the longest absence I had made since the war, and I will never stay away so long again. I felt something like our big-mouth Bob when he had served out his two years in the chaingang for maliciously killing another negro.

Colonel Towers told him goodby and said, "Bob, you must come and see us again sometime." Bob opened his big mouth and said, "Colonel Towers, dis here is de longest visit I ever paid anybody in my life, and if you wants to see me any more I reckon you will have to come to my house."

But it is all over now and I am basking in the sunshine of home and kindred. On top of it all comes the glorious victory—a victory that is the harbinger of peace and good will between the sections. The south is being vindicated at last. I don't know that confederate money will be good again or that Mrs. Arp will be paid for her barrel of soap, or that our crippled soldiers and confederate widows will be pensioned, but one thing is certain, the south will get her share of the offices and the patronage of the government. I think I shall take a sinecure or a snap gun or a slap for myself. I have fit enough and now want to retire on half pay. There won't be enough offices to go all round, I know, but we can make a fuss mess and cut down the salaries and do pretty well. There is only one cloud over the general hilarity, and that is a feeling of sympathy for the bereaved. It hurts my feelings to see them turn a round out, especially when another round is turned in to fill his place. But such is politics. Politics is a science, and is something both funny and heartless. I heard the other day about a candidate riding a hundred miles to get proof that his opponent deserted from the confederate army. He found his witness away out in the country and he said, you bet know all about it, for they followed in the same army, and he was sorry to say that Bill had gone and got away back and could not be found. So the candidate proposed to take his affidavit, and he did not even offer to give it. He talked and talked and swore that Bill was a deserter and he would swear to it if he was obliged to, but still he wouldn't sign. When finally pressed for a reason why, he said: "Well, stranger, I don't want to sign that document for you see the fact is I deserted with him."

But Mr. Cleveland is all right and will reform some things, for the people have spoken and said he must. This great upheaval means something. Why there is no telling how many states and territories he has carried. I wouldn't be surprised to hear that he has carried Canada and Mexico and the Sandwich Islands. The north and south are coming together and getting solid all round. Hurrah for Grover! I'm going to send Miss Ruth a hundred dollar bill in confederate money. It has been drawing interest for twenty-nine years and the interest keeps marching on.

BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

THE LABOR WORLD.

SWEDISH women often work as farm laborers.

UNION bricklayers work now eight hours per day in Boston.

AN average of three British seamen lose their lives every day by drowning.

THE Northumberland (England) colliers have accepted a five per cent. reduction in their wages.

TWELVE THOUSAND shipbuilders in Belfast, Ireland, have had their wages reduced fifteen per cent.

THE union clerks employed in St. Louis (Mo.) clothing, furnishing and hat stores all wear union badges.

OVER 50,000 operatives inaugurated the great strike in England's cotton mills against a five per cent. reduction.

NEW ORLEANS (La.) industrial affairs were placed in a badly crippled condition on account of the general strike.

A LARGE proportion of the manufactured goods of Russia is made in the homes of the laborers instead of in factories.

IN Great Britain it is illegal now to employ girls in shops under eighteen for more than seventy-four hours a week, and shopkeepers who disobey the law are liable to be fined.

ALONG the Monongahela Valley, in Pennsylvania, the leaders of the 6000 miners involved in the strike asserted that, rise or no rise in the river, there would be no going back to work unless at the 8½ cent rate.

GOVERNMENT agents, who have interviewed 17,427 working women in twenty-two of our large cities, announce the average wages for a day of ten hours or more to be $5.51 per week, or less than ninety-two cents per day.

REPORTS from industrial centres of Germany all point to the existence of depression in trade except in a few branches of the textile industries, which are doing an active business on large orders from England and America.

THE manufacturers of Fall River, Mass., have increased wages of weavers to twenty-one cents per cut and all other departments in proportion. This is practically an advance of about seven per cent. and restores wages to the standard of 1884.

THE different counties in Scotland pay shepherds different wages. The range of prices paid run from $3.75 to $6.50 per week, according to ability. In the Highlands in a mixed stock, including ewes and wethers, a shepherd can manage from 1000 to 1400; if only ewes a shepherd should have 200 or 300 less, with an assistant at lambing time.

FROM the annual report of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen it appears that in 1891 the receipts were $441,294, and $441,821 were disbursed from the beneficiary fund. The receipts for the general fund amounted to $66,782.17 and the expenditures were $66,260.11. The total receipts were $561,107.12 and the expenditures $554,141.69. There is a balance on hand at present of about $40,000 and the organization has about 20,700 members.

THE Rev. Edward Everett Hale, D. D., preached in the Unitarian Church in Berlin, Mass., to a large congregation, on the fiftieth anniversary of his first sermon in that church.

WILLIAM P. KEOK, who was to have been hanged at Allentown, Penn., at noon, was found dead in his cell in the morning.

HEAVY snow in central Pennsylvania played havoc with electric motors and electric wires. All poles and fire alarm connection in Reading were burned out by the crossing telephone cables.

THE big strike in New Orleans, La., became so serious the Governor took control of the situation. Every militia company in the State was placed under arms and ready to move on the Crescent City. Strikers again cut electric light wires and left the city in darkness.

A HEAVY snowstorm prevailed throughout the Western States.

THE representatives of the United States to the International Monetary Conference at Brussels, Belgium, have had their final instructions issued to them from the State Department, after a prolonged communication between the Secretaries of State and Treasury Departments.

CHARLES ARNSTRONG, a Director of the Bank of England, who is making a study of the American system of finance, and a conference with Assistant Secretary Nettleton at the Treasury Department, and afterward inspected the conference and the Treasury vaults.

A CALIFORNIA cannery removed last July an thousand of tomatoes. Ten thousand cans of the American Lloyd standards were being loaded at once on a rail road when the train, wheels and steamboat transportation companies struck.

A. L. Brewer, Esq., of Macon county, was elected solicitor for the fifth judicial circuit by the Legislature.

In one respect the north pole is like a woman's pocket. Very likely it is there, but no man could ever find it.—Inland Printer.

The scramble for the offices has now begun all along the line. "Turn the rascals out," and give a morsel to the hungry Democrats.

Gen. Chas. M. Shelley is the man to whom the people of Alabama owe a debt of gratitude. As a political campaigner he is always a success.

Maj. Wallace Screws will be an applicant for the Montgomery postoffice. His service to the party will no doubt secure recognition at the hands of the president.

The rank and file of the honest Alliancemen of Alabama, to their credit be it ever said, refused positively to be led off by the Third Party will-o-the-wisp. They are Democrats and will remain Democrats.

During his first term Mr. Cleveland made the best President the country has ever had. With a Democratic Congress at his back he is now in a position to improve on his past record, and he will.

The Birmingham News is liberal. It knows that Birmingham can be a great city without the capital and it does not want to take the old land mark away from "the cradle of the Confederacy." That's right.

No man, especially the merchant or land-owner, can afford to wrap himself up in his own selfishness and withhold encouragement and support from public enterprises. It requires action of the solid men to put a town forward.—Ex.

Maj. Wallace Screws should be given the Montgomery postoffice, and there is another representative of the overworked fourth estate who labored wisely and well and deserves to be well rewarded and that one is Mr. Chappel Cory, of the Age-Herald.

Cleveland's plurality of the popular vote is 623,500. Over Harrison and Weaver combined his majority is 589,000. Here are the figures given by the New York World: Total of majorities for Cleveland 696,000; for Harrison 172,000; for Weaver 21,500. Not enough is known of Bidwell's and Wings's vote to make an estimate on. It was very light.

About the meanest feeling set of fellows in the State are the little 4x6 lawyers who identified themselves with the Alliance movement to get office or have political influence.

The days of their demagoguery are over. They will be heard of no more forever. The farmers they have tried to fool will give them the grand bounce.—Jacksonville Republican.

A New York firm sent a few days ago a lot of fine table covers to a concern in Tom Reed's district in Maine. The customer complained that the prices were too high. The New York firm replied: "You are entirely correct. The prices of these goods are higher. They cost us more than formerly. The old tariff was 75 per cent. The McKinley tariff is 125 per cent. You pay the difference. The foreigner pays no duty, directly or indirectly. Neither does the importer."

Mr. H. F. DeBardleben, the largest stockholder and financial manager of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, is as happy as a boy.

"Yes, I'm a protectionist," said he, "and don't believe in this tinkering with the tariff. But I'm overjoyed that Cleveland is elected and don't believe that he is going to let us be hurt. In fact, he stands for something more important to the South and Birmingham than the tariff. He stands for a sound money policy and his election means peace and good order and race friendliness and home confidence. That means confidence in us by the people who invest. We are going to make steel and iron to going up, and there is a great time ahead of us."

Legislative.

On the organization of the Legislature Hon. J. C. Compton, of Dallas, was made President of the Senate and Hon. F. L. Pettus, of the same county, was made speaker of the House.

Captain Kolb issued an address to the Legislature in which he laid his grievances before that body. Among other things he said:

"My information in regard to these frauds is of the most authentic character, and induces me to assure that an investigation by your body will establish the correctness of what I allege above. The responsibility devolves upon you to say whether the will of the people shall be made supreme and a republican form of government maintained in Alabama or whether organized lawlessness and fraud shall overthrow the rights of the people."

The address excited very little attention and created scarcely a ripple upon the ordinary routine of the day.

The correspondent of the Age-Herald gives this concerning the withdrawal of twenty-four Kolb men from the house caucus:

What became of the twenty odd Kolbites who left democratic house caucus to-night cannot be ascertained, but it is not believed that they held any caucus of their own. They separated at the capitol gate and if they had a place of meeting they did not go to it in a body. Last night they held a caucus and then placed themselves in Kolb's hands, asking him to map out a programme for them to follow. They were for him to the end To-day they held another caucus composed of five men claiming to be senators and twenty-three claiming to be representatives. When the resolutions offered by Mr. Youngblood were laid on the table by the house caucus twenty-four men rose as one man, and without warning for the final action of the caucus on the question of membership they left the hall, showing very conclusively that this plan had been previously agreed upon. Moreover, it is alleged that Kolb and his few followers are actually planning treason against the state; that the present plan is to swear Kolb in as governor on the 1st of December, when Governor Jones' first term expires, and he will set up a state government of his own. There are at the moment good grounds for believing that this action is contemplated. Kolb prints in the Montgomery Journal a double-leaded open letter addressed "to the members of the general assembly of Alabama," and reciting briefly his own extraordinary story of his own extraordinary wrongs in August. In this letter he says the responsibility of righting these wrongs rests with the legislature. It is the old story and is in consonance with the rumors that he will swear himself in as governor.

A bill will be introduced to provide for a State banking system. Thursday the two houses were in joint session to count the vote for governor and other state officers, and the senator from Elmore desired to protest against the count. Being ruled out of order, he desired to appeal from the chair, but the chair wouldn't have it. The action of the senator and the decision of the chair were received in dead silence. There was no cheering and no attempt at showing disapproval on either side of the question at issue; and the count went on. The protesting senator acted under section 13, article 4 of the constitution, which gives members of either house right to enter their dissent or protest. But that is held not to apply in this particular instance; that the speaker had no authority to permit the filing of a protest.

The count resulted, Jones 126,959, Kolb 115,524, scattering 554. Jones majority over all 10,881.

Many bills of a local nature have been introduced.

Mrs. Timid—Did you ever find a man under the bed? Mrs. Bluff—Yes; the night we thought there were burglars in the house. I found my husband there.

Secretary of the Navy.

It is gratifying to the people of Alabama to witness the general concourse of opinion which accords to Hon. Wm. C. Herbert the portfolio of naval affairs in Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet. Where there is so much unanimity it must be based upon a belief of eminent fitness. Of this there can be no doubt. During Col. Herbert's service of eight years on the Naval Committee of the House and six years as Chairman, he did a vast amount of work in clearing the service of barnacles, and of re-habilitating the navy. It received its first general impulse for betterment after he was assigned to the chairmanship in the first Congress of Mr. Cleveland's administration. To Mr. Cleveland's administration is due the credit of breaking up the fraudulent naval contracts and of exposing the rottenness which prevailed in former years of Republican rule. Mr. Whitney as secretary of the navy and Col. Herbert as Chairman of the Naval Committee are entitled to great credit for the great improvement wrought. It inspired the country with hope for an efficient naval establishment upon honest and economical lines. Every suggestion that has been made in the press, North, South, East and West, has included the name of Col. Herbert for Naval Secretary. He will have the endorsement of the people of Alabama without regard to politics, race, or previous condition. That is one subject upon which all are united. —Advertiser.

The Offspring of Discontent.

When the country is prosperous, when every factor is running on full time, and every good business man is making money, people do not depart from the beaten path in politics and seek after new and untried conditions. But times get hard when money is scarce and hard to get, and business seems utterly prostrated, then men begin to look about for a change in the government.

The latter is the condition of affairs in the South and in the West. Let us look into the causes of this and the results. In the West, Eastern money lenders have been placing mortgages on the farms, until hardly an acre in the great West is left unburdened. The returns from crops have been inadequate to pay interest and furnish a fair living to the farmer. This is particularly so in Kansas where we find the offspring of discontent first born. The people of that State, especially the farmers, are seeking relief from a condition of things that has become unbearable, hence we see the Third Party spring into existence.

And the field is ripe in the South for a harvest of malcontents. The low price of cotton has almost ruined the farmer and planter. There is little to bring money, and the constant cry of the people is for money, more money. Some of them think that the unlimited coinage of silver would give them relief. Others want the government to lend money to the farmers at a low rate of interest, and there are a host of demagogues who advocate these and other chimerical schemes in order to secure the votes of suffering people.

The Eastern and Midland States are fairly prosperous, although the workingmen are not receiving the benefit of it, on account of the oppressive operations of the tariff laws upon the balance of the country. Hence in the Eastern States there is no third party. It is only where the country is not prosperous that the Third Party can find a foothold. The South can never be prosperous under a Republican administration. The whole policy of the Republican party is to draw the money from all the other sections of the country and concentrate it in the East, and they are doing it with their pension and tariff laws. They are collecting from every section of country by means of unjust tariff taxation over one hundred and fifty millions of dollars and distributing it in the way of pensions to Union soldiers, a vast majority of whom live in the Eastern and Middle States. For instance the last Congress voted $92,868,584.19 additional pensions, and it took exactly $14,967,620.00 to employ men to adjudicate the new pension claims and disburse this new addition to the pension rolls. How much of this money goes West or comes South? Certainly very little comes South, yet we pay our share of it. These figures are taken from a Republican campaign document issued by the National League of Republican Clubs. This same document announces that two dollars out of every five collected by the government from the people will be devoted to the payment of pensions. Now how much of the other three dollars will the South or west get? With this enormous drain upon the two sections it is no wonder that the East is rich and prosperous, and the West and South poor and discontented. It is no wonder that politicians are able to lead the people off into new parties. It is no wonder that there can be found a few misguided people to endorse any scheme for relief no matter how wild and impossible it is so that it promises "money, more money." But the third party and all other parties born of discontent, are like the foam upon the river; they will soon vanish, and leave the Democratic party alone to battle with the Republicans, the greatest enemies of the South and West. —Birmingham Ledger.

The Workingman's Share.

A gentleman residing in New York, when in England this past summer bought a cheap tweed suit for which he paid nineteen shillings eleven pence, equal to $4.85 at the treasury valuation of $4.8665 for a pound sterling. When the package arrived it was sent to the United States custom appraiser and there appraised worth $10. On this valuation of $10 a duty was exacted and paid of 60 per cent. ad valorem and 49½ cents per pound on weight of 5½ pounds, making the total duty $8.60.

A tailor in New York to whom the suit was shown, valued it at $10 to $12 (duty paid,) and when asked what a workman would receive for making such a suit, said eighty-five cents.

To sum it up:

The suit cost	$4 85
The duty was	8 60
"American workman's" share	.85

The Check System.

Two bills were introduced in the House of Representatives yesterday bearing upon the very important subject of laborers' wages. One of these bills was introduced by Mr. Frank P. O'Brien, and the other day by Mr. John T. Shugart, both of Jefferson. The first proposed to abolish the "Pluck-Me" store business altogether, and require payment of wages to be made in cash. The other modifies the present system, so that if a man has earned all of a check by pay day he can get the balance in money. Evidently the "check" business is in a fair way of disappearing from Alabama.—Age-Herald.

Jerry Simpson's majority for Congress is 1400 against 7422 in 1890. We are glad old Sockless pulled through. Mrs. Lease is accusing him of being a Democrat. At two Democratic banquets since the election Simpson has appeared as an invited guest and in his speeches declared that the Democratic party would now take the place of the People's movement and carry on the reforms inaugurated by it. "The People's party," he said, "has no further mission as a national organization." He said he was in favor of a Democrat for Senator because "they played fair with us this time and we will need them in the future."—Age-Herald

Its Taxation on State Banks.

Roanoke, (Va.) Record.

One of the most important measures embodied in the platform of the democratic party, and which will receive that prompt consideration which its importance demands, is that which calls for the removal of the tax on state banks.

The new South only requires additional capital to make the development of her possibilities the marvel of the age. Roanoke, like other cities that have sprung into existence and become firmly established within the past twenty-five years, is only retarded in her great industries and improvements for want of it, and the removal of the tax on state banks will open the way for a new era of prosperity, before which all previous efforts will pale.

With the abrogation of this unjust tax, our state banks can issue notes for circulation, the securities for which can be made as safe as the notes of national banks, by proper provisions of law, and thereby money will be more plentiful. Our city will continue advancing in growth and importance with great strides to the culmination of her grand destiny.

A large number of the conservative bankers of Boston have joined in publicly advocating the issuance of notes of circulation by state banks, under proper supervision by state officials, and amply secured in accordance with their issue. That they will insure to the advantage of all communities which are hampered for the want of capital, can be evidenced by the condition of our own city.

Roanoke has a number of private banks. By the removal of the tax on notes of issue, they could and would issue notes in accordance with their secured capital, and by adding to the volume of money in circulation, relieve very largely the stringency existing. The relief to our business enterprises would be more plentiful and to a large extent the excessive interest paid for the use of money would be reduced.

The South, particularly, has great cause for rejoicing at the success of the democracy, and the election of Mr. Cleveland to the presidency, supported by a congress in accord with his patriotic views. A new era of prosperity has dawned, and with the removal of the tax on state banks, the marvelous growth of the South will be continuous.

For Scrofula

"After suffering terribly from scrofula sores, from childhood, on the face and arms, trying many remedies and several doctors, I gave up in despair, and I considered my case incurable. Then I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken one bottle I felt relief. I continued its use for six months, and was entirely cured. I have since had no return of the disease."—Ramiro Lopez, 307 E. Commerce st., San Antonio, Texas.

Catarrh

"My daughter was afflicted for nearly a year with catarrh. The physicians being unable to help her, we finally resorted to Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I followed his advice. Three bottles of medicine, persistently with Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's Pills completely relieved my daughter's head."—Mrs. Hester Smith, Little Canada, Ware, Mass.

Rheumatism

"For several years, I was troubled with inflammatory rheumatism, being so bad at times as to be entirely helpless. For the last two years, whenever I felt the effects of the disease, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have not had a spell for a long time."—J. T. Hambaugh, Elk Run, Va.

OBITUARY.

In memory of my beloved wife, MARY ELLEN SARTOR, nee Hurt, who was born October 13, 1837, and who fell asleep in Jesus, September 30, 1892.

In the year 1858 she professed religion and joined the Autaugaville Baptist church, and of which she was a consistent member until 1872, when she withdrew from that church to aid in the organization of the Baptist church at Clanton to which place we had moved our residence, and of which church she remained a consistent member until her death. She was always ready for any work looking to the promotion of the Master's cause, nor was any sacrifice too great for her to make for Him, who had done so much for her.

On November 15, 1860, we were married, and for nearly 32 years she was always the devoted wife and companion. Five children were given to us, the last two having preceded her to the better land in infancy, the other three she lived to see grown to years of maturity, and members of the church of her own choice.

Dear wife and mother! the sadness of parting is relieved by the reflection that our loss is your eternal gain, and the blessed hope that we shall meet again, beyond the skies, in that home where partings are unknown.

With patience and submission we await the time when each of us in turn shall "cross over the river," and with you "rest under the shade of the trees."

"The harbor reached her heavenward voyage ended,
Life's tempest o'er,
Bestrew her grave with fragrant flowers and leave her asleep in God."

Not to the Man of Dollars.

Not to the man of dollars,
Not to the man of deeds,
Not to the man of cunning,
Not to the man of creeds;
Not to the one whose passion
It is for the world's renown,
Not in a form of fashion,
Cometh a blessing down.

Not unto land's expansion,
Not to the miser's chest,
Not to the princely mansion,
Not to the blasoned crest,
Not to the sordid worldling,
Not to the knavish clown,
Not to the haughty tyrant,
Cometh a blessing down.

Not to the folly blinded,
Not to the steeped in shame,
Not to the carnal minded,
Not to unholy fame;
Not in neglect of duty,
Not in the monarch's crown,
Not at the shrine of beauty,
Cometh a blessing down.

But to the one whose spirit
Yearns for the great and good,
Unto the one whose storehouse
Yieldeth the hungry food;
Unto the one who labors,
Fearless of foe or frown,
Unto the kindly hearted,
Cometh a blessing down.

A Happy Couple.

Detroit Free Press.

The happiest couple I ever knew were a man and his wife, who lived in two or three tiny rooms in a block and with limited means enjoyed all the comforts of home. The man had a profession, but it was a very lowly one; he clipped the ears and tails of dogs for a living and sold illustrated books on dogs and their food. His home was the neatest place I ever saw; his wife was a pretty woman, wholesome and cleanly, with a principle showing in all her actions. She did her own work, and her cooking was something to remember. It was no trouble for her to prepare a meal. She would take three tomatoes and a handful of crackers and give Jim a dish of escalloped tomatoes of which a caterer might have been proud. They had birds and books and love, and life always seemed like a holiday to them; they enjoyed it like children and each was perfectly happy with the other. I like to think of them often and hope luxury and selfishness has not drifted them apart or made life other than the beautiful thing it was when I first knew them. They are among the fortunate few that have no artificial wants.

IN THE COUNTY.

Democratic Victory Certain.

Since the shadows covering the great Democratic victory throughout the country have fled as chaff they began hardly been able to hold themselves on the earth. Saturday night after the election the old hills and valleys of Chilton county were brightening with the echoes from the mighty guns, which were resounding from the top of the high and beautiful hill on the western side of our little city. But there grand old Forrest met Wheeler and his raiders have much outside help.

We Democrats had two reasons for feeling proud and rejoicing, one was that Democracy had won, and the other was that our town (beat 6) had helped to do it. Had the State of Alabama gone as Chilton county did, but as surely as the sun rises in the east, we sure would beat it to have seceded from the whole business and set herself up a little kingdom of her own, and unanimously elected L. G. White, King.

Hurrah for Cleveland, Alabama, beat 8 and Democracy!

Maplesville Dots.

Our friend and neighbor, Mrs. Warford, has a hen very appropriately named McDuff who has "laid on" to the amount of 180 eggs since last March.

Mrs. Glover has been treated to a visit from her friend, Mrs. Echols.

Mrs. Goodwin has been treated to a visit to her mother the past week.

We have plainly discerned the perfume of orange blossoms in our frosty November air.

Miss Ora Johnson and Miss Jennie Martin enjoyed a visit to Selma the past week.

Miss Marion Kelly has returned home from a most enjoyable visit to Birmingham.

We have good reasons to believe our new railroad will resume work at an early day. The President of the Mobile & Ohio and Messrs. Woolfolk, Beeman Berry and several other officials of the M. T. and M. passed over the railroad here on the 16th.

Mr. Jesse Martin, Sr., had a narrow escape from death on the 15th. The local freight struck him on the head, throwing his body lengthwise the track and three box cars passed over him. No serious injury was done him. His head was cut when thrown down. He is eighty years old.

Jemison Jottings.

On last Wednesday at 7 p. m. Mr. J. C. Woolley and Mrs. Mollie Allen were united in marriage in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Rev. J. D. Dawson officiated.

Mrs. Dr. Givhan gave a select party in honor of her lovely guest, Miss Stella Givhan, of Uniontown, who is on a visit here.

Mr. J. O. Smith, of Brundige, has moved here. We welcome him in our town.

Mr. D. L. Langston who has been absent out West for several months returned home last Friday.

Messrs. Gad and J. M. Hand, of Belton, Texas who have been several days visiting their brother, L. J. Hand, returned to their home in the "Lone Star State," on Tuesday.

Mrs. Jadie Heath and her son left Tuesday with Mr. J. M. Hand for Texas.

Several applicants are out with petitions asking for Cleveland pie. Miss Callie Hunt and Thos. Harrison are applicants for the post office here.

Robt. Durham and D. L. Langston attended a singing at Union on Sunday last.

There will be an all day singing next Sunday at Cullman's Chapel near here.

Prof. Martin and Miss Lela Ward, of Six Mile, attended the Woolley-Allen nuptials here Wednesday evening.

Miss Ella Farrington, of Columbiana, visited Mr. Woolley's family last week.

Mr. Walter and Tom Eddings, of Montevallo, were in town Sunday to see their best girls.

Mr. Thomas Bentley from Sterrett visited friends here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Rotenberry, of Six Mile, visited Mr. David Woolley last week.

Mr. Jim Mary, of Columbiana, was here this week.

Jim H., how much will you give now if Charley will "bring that note back?" Do you ever get left?

Work to be Resumed and the Road Will Soon be Finished.

Yesterday afternoon Col. Woolfolk of the M. T. and M., and a party, arrived in the city from Tuskaloosa. They came all the way over the route of the road in covered wagons. In conversation with an Advertiser reporter last night, Col. Woodfolk said that there was scarcely any ventante on the roadbed and that it was in first-class shape. He said that he thought work would be resumed again by January and pushed rapidly.—Advertiser.

NEW ORLEAN'S BIG STRIKE

The Most Extensive Labor Movement of the Kind Ever Known.

New Orleans' big strike collapsed at 3 o'clock Friday morning. It was the most ambitious labor movement of the kind ever attempted in this country and very nearly succeeded, and perhaps would have done so but for the interference of Governor Foster. The strike was altogether on the question of unionism. It was an attempt to prevent the employment in any trade or industry of any but union men.

The amalgamated council comprised all the trades of New Orleans—sixty-one in number—into unions this spring and then set about raising wages, reducing the hours of labor and compelling employers to take only union men. The street hands struck and won a signal victory. Strike after strike followed during the summer and fall, the men being victorious in all of them.

On October 22d the teamsters, loaders and warehousemen struck to compel the merchants to employ union men. The amalgamated council took up their fight, and on November 3d ordered a general strike of all trades out of sympathy, and, in order to bring the merchants to terms, it was intended to paralyse New Orleans, to affect every industry and to bring the matter home to every man, woman and child in the city, so that they would unite in insisting upon the merchants conceding the demands of their employes.

DRIFTING TOWARD ANARCHY.

As a strike it was a success. There could have been no more complete one. Only four men out of 15,000 ordered out refused to obey the call of the council. For a week New Orleans was without lights, cars or carriages. The factories closed up; the city's business was killed; its steamboats tied up; its railroads, newspapers and theaters were all crippled.

Neither the mayor or the police seemed inclined or able to do anything. The city was drifting rapidly into anarchy. But when Governor Foster reached New Orleans he assumed charge of the city and restored order.

THE MILITARY COMES IN.

The governor's proclamation Thursday had a good effect. Next he followed this up by assembling the militia at the arsenal. After swearing in new men and showing that he had a sufficient force—5,000 men—to make his orders obeyed, he announced his intention of getting the gas and electric light plants to work Friday and the street cars running. The leaders of the strike recognized that they could not hope to win without an encounter with the militia and bloodshed. Then the men, too, became restless and uneasy.

Negotiations were reopened under the auspices of the governor, and after parleying for terms the amalgamated council surrendered and withdrew its demand that none but union men should be employed, and asked only that union men should not be discriminated against. It was recognized as a complete surrender and the strikers all returned to work Friday morning.

THE INSTIGATORS DENOUNCED.

Under the terms of the agreement a large number of the strikers found, when they returned to work that their places had been filled by non-unionmen. This was particularly the case with the car drivers, the carpenters, the tramsters and the loaders.

A crowd of 1,000 or more strikers, who had been thrown out of jobs, assembled in Exchange alley, the headquarters of the committe of five, and roundly denounced the members of the committee who had led them to defeat and even threatened violence to them. Although the strike is ended, the movement against the men instrumental in bringing it on will not be abandoned.

The chances are that the amalgamated council will break up as the printers and many of the union men threaten to leave it. The defeat will be a severe blow to unionism in New Orleans.

WILL BRING SUIT.

The suit against the members of the committee of five and the heads of the different labor unions for violations of the interstate commerce act, will be vigorously prosecuted by the merchants who suffered by it.

Steps have also been taken to impeach Mayor Fitzpatrick and secure the removal of Chief of Police Gaston, both of whom it is charged sympathized with, aided and upheld the strikers and made no effort to preserve the peace, or protect citizens. The constitution allows the impeachment of the mayor upon the petition of twenty-five property-holders. The case is to be tried before the civil district court. Criminal proceeding will also be begun against all strikers who were implicated in the violence.

A disposition is shown by the merchants and other employers to press the advantage they have gained and prevent a recurrence of a strike like this has been. The loss to the city has been immense. Probably 25,000 people have been idle for a week, losing $500,000 in wages, while the employers probably lost 50 per cent. more, as this is their busiest season of the year. The receipts of produce have been amazing—about a million a day—of which probably half has been diverted by the strike, and including the direct loss to New Orleans for nearly a week's complete suspension of business, it will be between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

DEPOSITING SECURITIES.

Holders of Bonds of the R. & D. Making Themselves Safe.

A Baltimore dispatch says: The depositors of the underlying securities of the Richmond and Danville railroad with the Mercantile Trust and Deposit Company, of Baltimore, assumed considerable activity Saturday. The committee has secured about three millions of securities of various classes. The committee announced that this movement was inaugurated in Baltimore for the reason that so large an amount of bonds of different classes are owned or controlled in that city. Numerous requests have been addressed to the committee, asking that some arrangement be made for the deposit of bonds in New York and the committee is now considering the appointment of an agency in New York where bonds may also be deposited and certificates issued.

Political Trouble in South America.

The New York Herald's Valparaiso dispatch of Monday says the president is hard at work trying to reconcile opposition to the proposed cabinet so that it may be published in effect. The question of peace and quiet is paramount.

BUSINESS REVIEW.

The Election Did Not Cause Any Bad Effects.

R. G. Dunn & Co.'s weekly review of trade says the presidential election has interrupted business to some extent in all parts of the country during the past week, but by no means as much as usual. At nearly all points the value of trade has been fairly maintained and the unprecedented activity of industries has only been interrupted by the election holidays. A severe storm throughout most of the northern winter has embarrassed the movement of products and has checked some trades, but was very welcome to dealers in winter goods, who had found the unusually mild weather somewhat depressing to their business. The distribution of other products has been fully up to the average and the reports regarding collections are from almost all points quite satisfactory for the season.

The money markets have not been disturbed, though their working has been somewhat closer at several important points, and foreign necessities and the scarcity of commercial bills have caused some decline in foreign exchange. It is feared that Russian needs and the failure to place the desired loan in Paris may cause further withdrawals of Russian balances in Eastern Europe.

At Philadelphia most trades have been dull, but iron is firmer, and the colder weather brings more demand for boots and shoes. The manufacturers of tobacco are pressed to their full capacity, the wall-paper trade is large, and the trade in chemicals steady.

At Baltimore business is good, with increasing exports, and southern collections better than was expected.

At Pittsburg the production of iron increased, but also the demand. The general tone is slightly better than before, with larger orders for wrought pig. Glass, especially plate, is in large demand. The prospects are more encouraging at Louisville and business is fairly active, but at Nashville trade is fair and at Little Rock depressed by small receipts of cotton. At Memphis the election interfered to some extent and at New Orleans business was, until a few days ago, at a standstill on account of the great strike. The output of pig-iron, November 1, was 171,080 tons weekly, an increase of 13,055 tons during the month of October. Production in the last half of 1892 seems likely to be not far from 4,188,000 tons, and stocks in October have been reduced 77,000 tons, which indicates a consumption larger than a year ago. The deliveries of rails for the year are small, not over 1,250,000 tons. Bars are more active, owing to car building, but plates are quiet and new orders for structual work are scarce.

TRAIN ROBBERS FOILED.

A Western and Atlantic Passenger Train Held Up.

A daring attempt was made to rob a Western and Atlantic train at Adairsville, Ga., Friday night. Instead of securing any booty the robbers were driven off by the trainmen and one of the robbers is supposed to have been badly injured. The train which the robbers attempted to rob left Atlanta at 7.45 o'clock Friday night. It consisted of an engine, mail car, combination baggage and express car, three passenger coaches and one sleeper. When the train reached Adairsville it stopped. As it pulled away from the station three men got on the rear platform of the baggage and express car. As they entered they were met by a volley from the trainmen. The robbers returned the fire and a regular fusilade ensued. In the melee the train was stopped and the would-be robbers hastily decamped.

As they entered the wood some of them was seen to fall and the others picked him up and carried him off. After everything had quieted down J. A. Alston, the train hand, was found to have been wounded in the leg. His wound is only slight. Telegrams were sent to Atlanta and the train proceeded to Chattanooga. The citizens of Adairsville and surrounding country are doing everything possible to trace the robbers.

BERESFORD AGAIN.

He Shows Up this Time in the Role of Blackmailer.

A New York dispatch says: The talented young swindler known as "Lord Charles Somerset Beresford," and also as "Walter S. Beresford," "Sidney Lascelles," "Walter Eaton," and "Tom Bond," who is now serving a term in prison has been detected, it is said, in a plot to blackmail two prominent New York society ladies, although he is behind the bars. He threatens to publish in some newspapers in New York, Chicago and other places, scandalous stories reflecting upon these ladies, unless they pay him $2,500 as hush money. He first made this attempt last September and was met by a certain lawyer of this city, who had, with the assistance of some central detectives, captured Beresford at Albany. He was afterwards sent back to Georgia, where he was wanted for swindling operations in Rome, Ga. He was sentenced to six years imprisonment, but this has not prevented him from seeking to injure the New York women mentioned, whom he now threatens with exposure. It is said by the attorney who represents these victims of Beresford, that the stories which he is trying to sell to the newspapers are scandalous lies.

A DYNAMITER CAGED.

The Deadly Explosive was Found in His Possession—Another Explosion.

A cablegram from Paris says: Saturday morning the police arrested a German farrier, named Victor Rabe. He was associated with anarchists, among them Francois and Munier. He is believed to have been the man who was seen loitering about the building in which the Carmaux Company has its offices. Dynamite was found in his possession. The anarchists continue to send threatening letters to Baron Reille, president of the Carmaux Company. Another explosion of anarchistic origin was reported late Friday night from Columbes, a suburb of Paris.

Only Closed Temporarily.

A special of Friday from Newcastle, Ind., says: The closing of the American tin plate factory in this city on Wednesday is said not to be permanent as was at first supposed as a result of the election. It is only closing for repairs. It is also said that the company will, in a few weeks, resume and continue the manufacture of tinplate as before. The same is claimed to be true of the Diamond plate glass factory, which closed the same day.

A Milwaukee Blaze.

Monday morning a fire destroyed the dry goods stock of H. Kuhn & Co.'s Milwaukee. Loss on stock $150,000, insurance.

If there were enough offices to g[illegible] around what a glorious time it would be, as such is not the case, "Blessed is he that expects nothing."—Brewton Leader.

A petition has been numerously signed and turned over to representative Mastin which asks the legislature to pass no law attaching a portion of the territory of Chilton to Shelby.

Our friend of the Calera Journal has grown both sarcastic and humorous over the proposition to attach a portion of Chilton to Shelby. It remarks that the VIEW and the Shelby Chronicle have a weakness for looking after the welfare of Calera.

The Shelby Chronicle says the VIEW is entirely correct in its surmise as to the object of the proposed annexation of a large part of Chilton county to Shelby. It is a Calera scheme solely, and means nothing more than a new county and more offices to fill.

The result of the Presidential election in Alabama proved conclusively that a great number of Kolb men were true to Cleveland and Democracy. Gen. Shelley wisely said before the election that it would not do to try to drive them out of the party by unjust charges against their Democracy. They were misled and that is all.

The Journal says that Calera likes enterprise. But the Journal confounds the term enterprise with mendicancy when it goes a begging for a large slice of Chilton county in order to enable Calera to show its enterprise. If the terms were synonymous every tramp who comes a begging is an enterprising citizen. The tub that stands on its own bottom is not Calera. Calera wants to be propped up.

Among the first things to be done by the Democratic majority in Congress will be the admission to the Union of Utah, New Mexico and Arizona. These territories have only been kept out because they were Democratic, which is the best of all reasons for letting them in now. The six Senators thus gained would make the party's control of the Senate secure beyond peradventure. — Stevenson Chronicle.

A bill has been introduced in the Legislature to regulate primary elections in this State. If the Age-Herald correspondent has given the bill entirely, it will be worse than the play of Hamlet with Hamlet left out. Primary elections should be restricted to voters who have as a rule voted and worked with the political party holding the primary election. That is the law in some States, and is the chief restriction that is needed in Alabama.

A portion of the Alabama press is still engaged in mouthing and tauntings of our fallen and prostrate foe, and kicking and abusing the corpse. Look here, brethren, we have whipped the enemy completely, he has acknowledged his defeat, we have had our grand ratification meetings, and all that, so now for heaven's sake, let us drop the subject and get back to solid business. We are not wild Indians that we should waste time in dancing war-dances over the slain. —New Decatur Advertiser.

General Shelley is as good a commander of a Democratic campaign as he was of the gallant campaign of which he was the leader in 1863 64. The writer saw him a number of times when yankee bullets were coming like rain, and thought then if there over was a man devoid of fear, that man was General Shelley. He it was who redeemed the Fourth District from Republican misrule, and served his people faithfully as congressman and fourth auditor under Cleveland. When the executive committee named him as chairman of the state campaign committee, confidence revived, and it was through his efforts, the magnificent display of tact and judgment, the condemnation of abuse of other parties, that has so materially helped to swell Cleveland's majority in this state to 50,000 and the triumphant election of every democratic congressman. Give Shelley the praise.—Greenville Advocate.

[illegible] the house by the introduce[illegible] series of retrenchment bills. One was to repeal an act to provide clerical assistance for the supreme court, another prohibits the payment of any money out of the state treasury for military purposes, after January 1st, 1893, except the quarterly allowance to the companies which shall not exceed the sum of $7,000; to fix the allowance for feeding prisoners in jail at 25 cents per day; another bill is to fix the payment of officers in the agricultural department of this state, fixes the pay of commissioner of agriculture at $1,800 and allows the office $1,200 per annum for compensation of a clerk; another bill is to fix the amount to be paid the examiner of public accounts during the years of 1893 and 1894; limits the sum to $1,200 for each year; another bill is to fix the amount for the removal of prisoners, pays actual expenses incurred, with $3 per day for the Sheriff or his deputy and $2 per day for each guard to be paid on vouchers or other evidence satisfactory to the state auditor, but in no case shall the payment exceed the sum now allowed by law; another bill prohibits the payment of any money out of the State treasury for the geological survey or other during the years of 1893 and 1894; another bill fixes the salaries of railroad commissions at $1,800 and allows the commission $1,200 for clerical assistance; another bill provides for the reduction of the interest on the Agricultural and Mechanical College bonds from 8 per cent to 4 per cent. Mr. Meador estimates that the passage of this series of bills will save to the state treasury from fifty to sixty thousand dollars per year.

"The noble farmer is completely rattled," said a planter the other day.

"How comes him rattled?" was asked.

"Well, the first of the season cotton was very low, and the noble tiller of the soil said to himself if the price ever got so high as seven and a half cents, he would sell at once. It went that high, and many of them still refused to sell, saying they would wait until it reached eight cents. It went to eight, and he thought best to wait for eight and a half. When it struck that point he wanted nine. "Well," continued the gentleman, "good cotton is now worth nine cents, and the farmer don't know whether to sell or not. He is in a dilemma, and is badly rattled. If the price were to decline a few points he would want somebody to kick him all over town for not selling when it was at the highest point.—Greensboro Watchman.

Bro. Callahan, of the Eutaw Mirror says: "We are willing to take almost anything for subscription, but are compelled to draw the line on goobers."

That's what we call "getting stuck up." The idea of a country editor "drawing the line on" any thing the subscribers bring him, is laughable. We'd like to have the goobers.—Greensboro Watchman.

Ballot Reform.

We are glad to see that Hon. A. S. Fletcher has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives, to amend or change our election laws by adopting the Australian ballot plan. This is a step in the right direction. No thoughtful, prudent man who has a proper regard for the peace and integrity of our State will hesitate for a moment to say, that there ought to be a change in our election laws.

Some of us may differ as to how this change ought to be made, but we all agree that a change ought to be made. This being the case, it behooves us to have an election law that is itself a guarantee of a perfect, fair and honest election. We should, by and through our own State law place such guards around the ballot box as would completely disarm criticism. To do otherwise will simply invite turmoil, dissatisfaction and trouble in the future.

The Democracy of Alabama can carry Alabama any time it pleases on a perfectly square and straight vote. But even if we did this under our present election laws our political opponents would go about yelling "fraud, fraud," and thereby injure our good name abroad. Hence, we hope that Mr. Fletcher will see to it that his election bill is such that our most fastidious political grumbler can find no cause for complaint. We are glad that Mr. Fletcher has introduced such a bill, and in doing so he fully represents a large majority of the Democrats of his county.—Huntsville Mercury.

It is altogether too soon after Mr. Cleveland's election for the real benefits to be apparent. But one thing is perfectly plain already, there is in Alabama and the south an uprising of the forces that make progress and development. We hear it and see it all around us. The furnaces at Florence are lighting their fires. At Anniston the Mineral railroad is being revived and they are quarreling over franchises that a little while ago nobody would have. Fort Payne is getting through with the liquidating process. Bridgeport is getting along at a faster gait. Huntsville has come down from the old Maud S. to pneumatic tire time. Around Birmingham more than one scheme is afloat, including a cotton press at last. The Mobile and Ohio is reviving the Montgomery, Tuskaloosa and Memphis railway. The Sheffield road is working with fresh life on an entry into Birmingham. The short roads to the Northeast of us are trying to consolidate into a great system and build missing links. These are mere illustrations of the growing spirit that promises a tide of development before many moons wax and wane.—Age-Herald.

[illegible]r.—The election of [illegible] will do everything for [illegible]rle that a political victory [illegible]ah, but it will not do everything. We will have to work for our living, and it is important that we work hard and use all the intelligence at our command, to put ourselves in more independent and easy circumstances. Farmers who expect to make good crops next year cannot get at them too soon now. The ditches are to be put in order, the fences to repair, the gullies to stop, the land to fertilize, oats to sow, the orchard to look after and things too numerous to mention to be done. Politics can't reach these things, and they must be done and done intelligently before the farmer gets rich.

[illegible]rther then said of Mr. Robbins: "His convictions are firm and his integrity inflexible. He posesses all these peculiar gifts which win for a man a place in the heart of men; as well as a place in their esteem. There is not one among the young men of Alabama more eminently fitted for the ardous duties and weighty cares of public life. And there is not one more likely to attain the fulness of political fame." This within ten years, seems to have been prophetic.

Mary E. Lease said: "I have never announced myself for the United States Senate, but if any fight is made upon me upon the ground of sex, and it is claimed that I am unconstitutionally illegible, I will most certainly enter the race and make a test case of it. Heretofore I have always won in every contest I have entered, and I have some opinions from some of the best journals in the country that no legal objections exist to prevent the election of a woman to the United States Senate."

Miss Alice Poole, a society belle and president of the Columbia bicycle club, of Chicago, trudged down Drexel boulevard trundling James S. Graham, who weighed 180 pounds, in a wheelbarrow, to fulfil the terms of an election wager. She wheeled him half a mile. Many society friends gave her a reception afterwards at the residence of Geo. F. Cram, No 4168 Drexel boulevard.

If we take people as we find them, welcoming all their good points and pass over the others, and being kind and generous to all, we shall come much nearer to the truth about them than if we labor to make a critical analysis of minds and hearts of which we can see only a few fragments.

St. Joseph's Liver Regulator cures dropsy.

The Tuskaloosa Times tempers its eye to business with philanthropy. It says:

If the Capitol is to be removed from Montgomery, why not bring it back to Tuskaloosa? The old Capitol building still stands, and the Insane hospital is convenient in case the Legislature should go plumb crazy.

Bearing upon the question of editorial responsibility, the Greensboro Beacon says:

The country editor belongs to the people. His time, talents and taffy are at their command. He is damned for what he don't do to suit the dammer and for what he does do right—well, that is his business, anyhow.

Judge R. M. Honeycutt has moved his family from Jemison and is occupying Dr. E. A. Matthews' residence. We welcome them to Clanton.

Dr. J. S. Johnson, Jr., has returned from Fort Payne, where he has been attending the Keeley Institute for the past four weeks. Dr. Johnson returns a new man and his family and friends are delighted with the results of his treatment at the Institute.

There does dot seem to be much meanness or crime in Chilton now-a-days. The grand jury was in session but two and a half days and the civil docket was disposed of in the same length of time, while the criminal docket was disposed of in less time.

Rev. B. E. Feagin preached a sermon specially to the children Sunday night at the Methodist Church. The Sunbeams had some very pretty songs prepared for the occasion, and everything passed off most pleasantly. Miss Pattie Robertson recited a beautiful missionary selection to the congregation. The contribution boxes were passed around and a nice sum collected for missions.

Miss Sophie Mullins has been visiting relatives at this place.

Religious Services.

Rev. A. C. Wells, pastor of the Clanton Congregational Church will hold regular monthly services at the Church the first Sunday in each month. The old Baptist Church building has been purchased by the Congregationalists as a place of worship.

The only unusual recommendation by the Grand Jury in its report publish elsewhere is in regard to the books and accounts of the late county treasurer. No report has been published from that office since February and that report seems to have been inexplicit and unsatisfactory.

Greene's Liver Tonic is an invaluable remedy for acute and chronic diseases of the liver kidneys and bladder. Sold by W. H. Phillips.

Married.

Miss Ora Johnson, of Maplesville, and Dr. Campbell, of Birmingham, were bound in the holy bonds of matrimony on the 22d inst., at the residence of the bride's father, Dr. J. S. Johnson, Sr. Rev. J. P. Sanders, of Verbena, a much loved minister of the Methodist faith performed the ceremony, after which congratulations were extended. After the ceremony was performed the handsome couple left for Louisville, where Dr. Campbell will finish his course of lectures. May joy, peace and prosperity ever be theirs.

For pity's sake, don't growl and grumble because you are troubled with indigestion. No good was ever effected by snarling and fretting. Be a man (unless you happen to be a woman) and take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which will relieve you, whether man or woman.

Grand Jury Report.

To Hon. N. D. Denson, Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit:

We the Grand Jury empaneled for the Fall Term of the Circuit Court of Chilton county, Alabama, respectfully submit this as our report.

The public roads of the county have been reported to us as being in very good order.

We have examined the bonds of the county officers and find them good and sufficient. We find one Justice of the Peace in the county, J. D. McGee, of Beat 7, who was re-elected last August has filed no new bond, yet is acting as a Justice of the Peace we suppose under his old bond.

We have had the books of the county officials examined by a committee who reports them all neatly and correctly kept. The books of the late county Treasurer are neatly kept, but in such an indifferent manner that we were unable to tell whether correctly or not. These books taken in connection with the published reports of the Treasurer leads us to the opinion that they have not been correctly kept, and would suggest to the county commissioners that they be examined by the State Examiner of Accounts, that the exact status of how the late Treasurer's accounts stand may be had.

We visited the jail and find it neatly and cleanly kept. The prisoners report that they are well fed and comfortably provided for. The jail we think safe and secure.

We find the county buildings in fair repair.

We had a committee to visit the poor house. They report this unfortunate class as being well and properly cared for.

We have been unable to get witnesses before us in a few cases. Have returned into court eleven true bills.

Returning thanks to your honor for the plain manner in which you have shown us our duties as Jurors; to our faithful solicitor for his able and attentive assistance given us in our work; to our efficient and ever ready bailiff, Mr. Lee Hays, for his willing and cheerful attention to our wants, and to all the officers with whom our duties have brought us in contact, for their kindness.

Having finished our labors we respectfully ask to be discharged.

Respectfully submitted,
J. G. FARLEY, Foreman.

He Pants for Fame.

A boy in the Whicita schools has been suspended for reading the following essay on "Pants."

Pants are made for men and not men for pants. Women are made for men and not for pants. When a man pants for a woman and a woman pants for a man they are a pair of pants. Such pants don't last. Pants are like molasses, they are thinner in hot weather and thicker in cold. The man in the moon changes his pants during the eclipse. Don't go to the pantry for pants, you might be mistaken. Men are often mistaken in pants. Such mistakes are breeches of promise. The has been much discussion as to whether pants is singular or plural. Seems to us when men wear pants they are plural, and when they don't wear any pants it is singular. Men go on a tear in their pants, and it is all right, but when the pants go on a tear it is all wrong.—Guthrie State Capital.

IN THE COUNTY.

Neighborhood News Gathered by Our Correspondents.

Welchville Locals.

Every one seems to wear a smile since Cleveland has been elected. The people feel hopeful in full confidence of four years of good government.

Thanksgiving day was observed at Welchville last Thursday. A bountiful table was spread at Mr. R. T. McGuier's house. Late in the evening many who were willing to join in heartfelt thanks for past blessings began to arrive and continued until the number reached about a hundred. All seemed to realize that thanks indeed should be given.

A mite meeting was enjoyed by many at Mr. G. W. Reed's last Tuesday night.

Mrs. Bowdoin, of Calera, is visiting relatives at this place.

Mr. R. T. McGuier is the Nimrod of Welchville. He brings in the squirrels and birds.

Verbena Views.

Mr. Joel Barnett, of Montgomery, has been visiting relatives here.

Your correspondent has heard of people stealing various things, but it is the first time we ever heard of a man stealing a saw mill.

Miss Alice Marbury, of Bozeman, has been the charming guest of friends in our city.

Miss Sadie Bentley, one of Rockford's lovely young ladies has been visiting relatives here.

Miss Evelyn Caffey, one of Verbena's most fascinating young ladies has returned from a pleasant visit to friends in Bozeman.

Jemison Jottings.

There was an interesting entertainment at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Silsbee on thanksgiving evening. The young people have always enjoyed Mr. and Mrs. Silsbee's hospitality, which has been greatly enhanced by the addition of the charming Miss Webster, of Washington, D C., to that family.

Rev. A. E. Burns preached an interesting sermon in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church here last Sunday morning. Rev. W. J. Dalton, the pastor, preached at night.

Mr. T. J. Ellison, Esq., came over Saturday and spent Sunday here. He was looking for the spectacles he lost here some time ago. He succeeded in finding a pair of eyes that made him forget that he had ever owned a pair of spectacles.

Mr. W. A. Kemp came up from Clanton and spent Sunday in Jemison. His whole face was wreathed in smiles and he looked just as happy as a big sunflower. Well, we don't blame him for looking so happy.

There was another of those all-day singings at Collin's chapel Sunday. Several young people from Jemison attended and enjoyed the drive as well as the music.

The Jemison High School continues to grow. There are ninety on the roll now. The regular attendance is nearly equal to the number enrolled.

Some of our young people, who believe that cupid has not dealt fairly with them, hied themselves away to the gypsy camp on Sunday evening in order to consult the oracles concerning their future happiness.

Thousands of lives are saved annually by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. In the treatment of croup and whooping cough, the Pectoral has a most marvelous effect. It allays inflammation, frees the obstructed air passages, and controls the desire to cough.

A Pretty Surprise.

A beautifully illustrated and charmingly bound edition of Longfellow's "Evangeline," the most popular long poem ever published by an American author, and one of the most famous poems in the language, just published, is a pretty surprise for book lovers. It is in large type, numerous and excellent illustrations, very fine and heavy paper, gilt edges, remarkably handsome cloth binding, with gilt title and ornaments. No illustrated edition has ever before been published at less cost than $1.50, and that is about what you might "guess" the price of this to be, but it isn't—it sells for only 19 cents plus six cents for postage, if by mail. This covers only about the actual cost of manufacture by the 100,000, the publisher's object being not profit, but to show the book loving millions what he can do. His publications are not sold by dealers, but only direct; catalogue, over one hundred pages, a literary curiosity in its way, is sent for a two cent stamp. Every home in the land ought to have a copy of this Evangeline, so charmingly beautiful, as a poem, as a collection of artistic illustrations, and as a product of the book-making art. Address John B. Alden, Publisher, 57 Rose St., New York.

Dearer Cotton Now.

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 13.—The outlook for the manufacturers of this city has changed greatly since the advance of 7 per cent, in wages was granted some days ago. Middling cotton is selling at 9⅛ cents per pound, an advance of 2⅜ cents on the quotations of a short time since. Cloth has not advanced in porportion to the advance in cotton.

Notes of Her Progress and Prosperity Briefly Epitomized

And Important Happenings from Day to Day Tersely Told.

A dispatch of Wednesday from Knoxville, Tenn., says January 1st the United States Express company will secure supreme control of the express business on the Louisville and Nashville lines.

The West Virginia Editorial Association on Wednesday elected officers as follows: President, R. F. Horner, Parkersburg; vice president, J. G. Downtsine, Huntington; secretary, J. V. Henderson, Charleston; treasurer, R. V. Morgan, Morgantown.

A special of Wednesday from Savannah, Ga., says: President Comer, of the Central railroad, emphatically denies the telegram sent out from Augusta stating that the Mutual Life Insurance company had called in its $700,000 loan to the Central. There is nothing in it.

The north Alabama Methodist conference has decided to establish a college in north Alabama containing besides a classical department, a department of medicine, law, theology and dentistry. Several offers have been made by towns for the location, but Birmingham probably will get it.

One of the most disastrous fires that ever visited Lynchburg, Va., started early Thursday morning in Craighill's fertilizer establishment. Owing to a strong northwest wind the fire soon got beyond control of the firemen and in a few minutes a number of large business houses were in ashes. The loss is estimated at $150,000 with $100,000 insurance.

A dispatch of Wednesday from Anniston, Ala., says: Montgomery was selected on the location of the state mission board and Bible and colportage board. Dr. J. A. Broadus addressed the convention in the interest of the Southern Baptist Theological seminary, and was followed by Dr. J. B. Gambrill in behalf of the Southern Baptist Training institution.

The census office has made a preliminary report on the manufacturing industries of San Antonio, Tex., during the past decade. In 1890 the number of industries reported at San Antonio was 25; number of establishments reported, 43; with invested capital of $1,648,862. Number of hands employed, 907; receiving $615,125 in wages. The cost of materials used was $931,185 and the value of the product $2 132, 260

The town of Winston, N. C., which last week suffered a loss of $430,000 by two fires, with $300,000 insurance, again lost heavily Thursday. The hotel Zinzendorf, which was opened nine months ago, and which cost complete over $125,000, was entirely burned. It was a wooden building of great size and elaborate design. It was owned by a stock company and was one of the handsomest southern hotels. There is some $60,000 insurance.

The steamer Rosa Lee, from Astport, burned at the wharf at Memphis, Tenn., early Monday morning. An officer awakened the passengers and all above the dock and thirty below got out safely. It is thought that four laborers, who were in a state of intoxication, were burned to death. The steamer cost $70,000, and was in the cotton trade. The loss is complete. Insurance, $27,000. Her manifest consisted of 397 bales of cotton and 2,100 sacks of cotton seed.

In the United States circuit court at Charleston, Wednesday, Judge Simonton filed his decree ordering the South Carolina Railway to be sold for the benefit of its creditors at the suit of Frederick W. Bound, Henry Thomas Cogwlan and others. Judge Simonton holds that the road cannot be sold in parcels, but must be sold as an entirety and that under the circumstances surrounding the road an early sale of the road as an entirety is not only advisable but necessary and proper.

A San Francisco special of Thursday says: It is apparent that the third party will hold the balance of power in the legislature which will elect a successor to Senator Felton. The democrats are five short of a majority, while the republicans require seven votes to control the legislature on joint ballot. The seven independents will therefore, hold the balance of power, and, as they will not say who is their choice on the senatorship question, it is doubtful who will be the next United States senator.

The outgoing Western and Atlantic passenger train leaving Atlanta at 11 o'clock Sunday night was wrecked a short distance from the city. The wreck was a bad one, smashing cars and tearing up the track. Fortunately no one was killed. Engineer Squires was found to be pretty badly hurt, as was also his fireman. One or two of the passengers were bruised up. The disaster was due to train wreckers. An iron band was found fastened about one of the rails. It was near the spot where a train was wrecked a year ago in the same way.

A Columbia, S. C., dispatch says: It was ascertained Sunday that steps are being taken to abolish the historic South Carolina college, an institution which is the alma mater of a host of distinguished men that the state has produced. The college is dear to thousands of South Carolinians, and this announcement will be received with untold regret, and there will undoubtedly be a hard struggle to retain it. The superintendent of education, in his annual report to be submitted to the general assembly, recommends that the college be closed and that the buildings be converted into a normal college for both sexes. It is also learned that a bill in accordance with this recommendation has been prepared and will be introduced in the legislature.

One Fool Less.

A number of Christian scientist have been holding meetings near Hennessy, Oklahoma, for some time. A few nights ago one of the leaders told those present if they had faith they could go out and pick up a rattlesnake and the reptile could not bite them. The next day a recent convert, named Southern saw a rattlesnake and picked it up. The reptile fastened its fangs in his arm, but he refused medical attention, and gave up the ghost, despite the long prayers of his fellow believers in faith.

Nicaragua Representatives Appointed.

At the request of the executive committee the Nicaragua Canal Association Governor Brown, of Maryland, on Monday appointed the following gentlemen, all of Baltimore, to represent the state of Maryland at the convention of the association at New Orleans, November 30th. Frank Frick, Jean L. Rodgers, Joseph B. Foard, H. Crawford Beak, P. H. MacGill, Blanchard Randall and C. Ridgely Goodwin.

RUSK'S REPORT.

The Secretary of Agriculture Sends His Paper to the President.

He Makes Some Good Suggestions to Cotton Growers.

A Washington dispatch of Sunday says: Secretary Rusk has sought to make his fourth and last annual report as the head of the department of agriculture a valuable document and has grouped together many interesting facts to show what a great agricultural people we are. He says we sent abroad last year $200,000,000 of products more than we had to import from foreign nations, and 80 per cent of these products were agricultural. He claims some credit for that because he shows an increase of 40,000,000 pounds of weight in pork sent to countries which formerly excluded American pork and $40,000,000 value increase in our exports of live cattle and all this comes from increased precaution to secure the healthfulness of American food products. The regulations enforced for the prevention of Texas fever alone have saved cattle growers more than three times the cost of running the whole department.

Regarding wheat he says: "Taking the world throughout the crops more than equaled the lean crops of 1891. So there was actually more wheat grown in that year than in 1891, and conditions which have at last overwhelmed the cotton growers now confront the wheat growers. While insisting that southern cotton growers must continue to reduce the acreage of cotton planted, he has some encouragement to offer them in the shape of new varieties of cotton seed. He has undertaken experiments with imported seed to secure the production of home-grown cotton, which will meet all the requirements for which Egyptian and other cottons are now imported.

He also wants the United States to raise its own raw silk instead of sending $25,000,000 a year abroad for raw material and thinks we might save $67,000,000 a year on imported fibers. Our exports for 1890, the only year in which they have equaled those of the present year, brought the price down a fraction under 42 cents a bushel at port shipment, against a fraction over 55 cents per bushel this year, the difference aggregating in exports in the past fiscal year not less than ten million dollars.

The report is the first from the cabinet to find way to the president's desk. Secretary Rusk throws cold water on the rain makers. The experiments are being loyally made as congress directs, but the facts in his possession do not justify the anticipations formed by believers in this method of artificial rain-making.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Developement in the Past Week.

Regarding the industrial situation in the South for the past week, a strong feeling of confidence is everywhere evident. The increasing strength of the cotton market and maintenance of advanced prices will have much influence on the condition of business; the iron market is steady, an increased demand is reported for lumber, and the advance in the price of coal will be sustained.

Thirty-six new industries were established or incorporated during the week, together with 6 enlargements of manufactories, and 8 important new buildings.

Among the new industries reported are a canning factory at Cuina Hill, Ga., a coal mining company at Fort Worth, Tex., flour and grist mills at Corning, Ark., Catlettsburg, Ky., Moss Point, Miss., and Dickson and Manchester, Tenn. A rolling mill is reported at Anniston, Ala., marble works at Dothan, Ga., a $200,000 fabricator manufacturing company at Louisville, Ky., a $100,000 quarrying company at Covington, Ky., and a packing house at Chattanooga, Tenn. A soap factory will be built at Galveston, Tex., tanneries at Anniston, Ala., cotton mills at Dothan, Ala., Jonesboro, N. C., Enshebston, Tenn., and Roanoke, Va., and a woolen mill at Fairmont, W. Va., a lumber company at Bardwell, Ky., saw and planing mills at Mobile, Ala., Titusville, Fla., Cedartown, Cordele and Cave Springs, Ga., Biloxi Miss., Camden, S. C., Loudon, Fall River and Nashville, Tenn., a stove factory at Bowling Green, Ky., veneer works at Wildwood, Fla., and wagon factories at Demorest and Cuinta Fla., Tuscumbia, Ala., LaGrange and West Point, Ga. The emargements for the week include truck works at Richmond, Va., an axe factory at Savannah, Ga., woolen mills at Wheatland, W. Va., and woodworking plants at Camden, Ark., Demorest, Ga., and Kenton, Tenn.—Tradesman, (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

SOUTH CAROLINA ASSEMBLY

Convenes in Annual Session - Election Of Officers and Governor's Message.

The general assembly of South Carolina convened in annual session in Columbia, Tuesday. In the house, Speaker Ira B Jones and all the other officers were re-elected, with the exception that S. B. Heurlfoy, of Edgefield will succeed W. B. Welborn as reading clerk. In the senate, Lieutenant Governor Gary presided and the old officers were re-elected. The Tillmanites held a caucus beforehand to decide upon the officers.

Senator Jenkins introduced a bill to change the system of county governments that is likely to cause one of the principal debates of the session. It provides that the counties shall be subdivided into townships and that each township shall have a supervisor, clerk, tax collector and road overseer, who can constitute a board of assessors. County treasurers and school commissioners shall be abolished. The day was devoted to the transaction of routine matter. Governor Tillman's message was read in the senate. His suggestions against the advisability of a prohibition law seems to have thrown a little cold water on the scheme which has heretofore been regarded as certain to pass. The governor's friends say that his argument on the bank cases, which formed the staple for the charge of incompetency in the recent state canvass, is simply unanswerable. It is gratifying to the friends of the college to note in the message that the governor does not agree with Superintendent of Education Mayfield in regard to closing the South Carolina college, and that he intends to carry out his agreement to support it liberally.

THE WHEAT CROP

Is Many Million Bushels Above the Estimate.

A special of Wednesday from St. Paul says: The discovery has just been made that the wheat crop of Minnesota and the Dakotas is many million bushels above all the estimates. The grain men do not know what to think of the situation. They are all at sea regarding what they are to expect. They have been estimating the crop at from eighty-five million to one hundred and five million bushels for the three big wheat states, but they are all beginning to hedge now. Those who have put their figures at one hundred million have added from ten million to twenty million more, and those who figured higher than that originally have gone up as high as one hundred and thirty million or more now.

ALLIANCE IN CONVENTION.

Annual National Meeting of the Order in Memphis, Tennessee.

Demands Adopted and Officers Elected for the Ensuing Year.

A memphis, Tenn., special says: The first open session of the Farmers' Alliance was held Tuesday morning. President Loucks, Messrs. McCune, Tillman, Waddell, members of the executive board; Secretary Turner and delegates from every state were present. President Loucks called the convention to order and expressed his agreeable surprise at the large attendance. He stated that the political harvest of 1892 had been successful and now the work of sowing for a greater harvest in 1896 would begin. Hon. A. L. Nims, on behalf of Governor John P. Buchanan, welcomed the delegates to the state, and Farmer Dean, of New York, responded. He said the Alliance, more than any other body, was wiping out Mason and Dixon's line. Major Fleece, of Memphis, and Colonel Gates welcomed the guests to the city. Marion Butler, of North Carolina, responded to these speeches, after which a committee on credentials, consisting of Messrs Demiug, of Pennsylvania; Burkett, of Mississippi; Otis, of Kansas; Edington, of Georgia, and Southworth, of Colorado were appointed.

Some difficulty was experienced in organization which culminated in a bolt, and those opposed to the people's party captured the body, held a caucus and concluded to form a new association, embodying the doctrine of the alliance, but holding aloof from politics. The Taubeneck faction having captured the conference, many of the delegates refused to attend the executive session. A temporary organization was fully effected, however, and the body began to shape matters for the issuance of a manifesto.

A correspondent of the United Press interviewed Dr. Macune and that gentleman made the following statement: "I withdrew from the convention hall because the national committee of the people's party are attempting to secure the control of the alliance. They have used foul means and have gone so far as to make up a slate of officers. Considering that these men were in control of the convention and had determined to carry out their measures, contrary to all alliance traditions and principles, I withdrew from the hall and shall remain out as long as such methods are being used to divert the purpose of the alliance. The delegates who left the hall felt the same as I did about the matter."

The following demands were adopted by the national alliance:

FINANCE.

We demand a national currency, safe, sound and flexible, issued by the government only, a full legal tender for all debts, public or private, and that without the use of banking corporations; just, equitable and efficient means of distributing direct to the people at a tax not to exceed — per cent., to be provided as set forth in the sub-treasury plank of the Farmers' Alliance, or some better system; also by payments in the discharge of its obligation for public improvement.

(a) We demand the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold at the legal ratio of 16 to 1.

(b) We demand that the amount of circulating medium be increased to at least $50 per capita, exclusive of legal reserves.

(c) We demand a graduated income tax.

(d) That our national legislation shall be so framed in the future as not to build up one industry at the expense of another.

(e) We believe that the money of the country should be kept as much as possible in the hands of the people, and hence we demand that all national and state revenue shall be limited to the necessary expenses of the government economically and honestly administered.

(f) We demand that postal savings banks be established by the government for the safe deposit for the earnings of the people and to facilitate exchanges.

LAND.

The land, including all natural resources of wealth, is the heritage of the people and should not be monopolized for speculative purposes, and alien ownership of land should be prohibited. All lands now held by railroads and other corporations in excess of their actual needs, and lands now owned by aliens should now be reclaimed by the government and sold for actual settlers only.

TRANSPORTATION.

Transportation being the means of exchange and a public necessity, the government should own and opperate railroads in the interest of the people.

(a) Telegraph and telephone, like the post office system, being a necessity for the transmission of intelligence should be owned and opperated by the government in the interest of the people.

Other officers chosen are as follows: Marion Butler, of North Carolina, vice president; Benjamin Terrel, of Texas, national lecturer; L. K. Taylor, of Texas, editor of the Toiler, secretary and treasurer; Leaverett Leonard, of Missouri, Mann, of Virginia, H. C. Deming, of Pennsylvania, J. E. Denn, of New York, members of the executive committee.

WILL ISSUE AN ADDRESS.

Dr. Macune is preparing an address which will be signed by delegates from every southern state, and which sets forth the position he assumes, and which was made necessary by the action of the convention. President Loucks represents what is designated by many of the delegates as the political faction of the third party and under his leadership they think he will endeavor to swing the organization, as a body, into line with the leaders of the third party, and the non-political standing of the order will be lost.

Tin Plate Mill Burned.

The tin plate mill at Anderson, Ind., burned to the ground Saturday night. This is the factory that became so prominent as a political issue during the late campaign. The fire was of incendiary origin, the entire factory having been saturated with coal oil. It was being operated by Clark & Alleton. Loss, $22,000: partially insured.

JOHN CLARK, seventy-four years old, was killed by a train at Savannah, N. Y., the other evening. Just ten years ago he was struck by the same train, under the charge of the same conductor, at the same hour and near the same spot. At that time he was thrown up in the air, but was unhurt.

SOUTHERN ASSOCIATED PRESS.

A New Organization Formed by the Morning Newspapers of the South.

The editors of the southern morning dailies who have been holding frequent meetings the past year, perfected a new news association at a meeting in Atlanta Wednesday. Their papers, which are all members of the Associated Press, are to be withdrawn from that association, and then organize the Southern Associated Press. This is to be entirely separate from the Associated Press of New York, and goes into a combination with the United Press and the Western Press Association. The combined associations make the strongest news service in the country.

For five years the southern morning dailies have been trying to get the Associated Press, of New York, to treat them as an association, but the older organization, which served them with telegraphic news, would only consider them individually. This new association was aided in perfecting its organization by General William Henry Smith, manager of the Western Press Association, and formerly holding the same position with the Associated Press; Walter Phillips, general manager of the United Press, and P. V. DeGraw, southern manager of the same. The capital stock of the Southern Associated Press is $30,000, of which one-half was subscribed at the meeting. The following directors were elected:

Captain E. P. Howell, Atlanta Constitution; J. C. Humphill, Charleston News and Courier; J. H. Estill, Savannah News; Frank P. O'Brien, Birmingham Age-Herald; Adolph Ochs, Chattanooga Times; Page M. Baker, New Orleans Times-Democrat; George Nicholson, New Orleans Picayune; T. T. Stockton, Florida Times-Union.

Captain Howell was elected president; Captain O'Brien vice president; F. P. Glass, Montgomery Advertiser, secretary; Colonel Pat Walsh, Augusta Chronicle, treasurer. Annual meetings of the association were fixed for the first Tuesday after the 15th of November of each year at such place as may be selected by the executive committee.

WEAVER IS PLEASED.

He Issues an Address Congratulating His Supporters.

A Des Moines, Iowa, special on Wednesday says: Weaver has issued an address in which he congratulates his followers on the splendid showing made by the third party and sounds a note of warning as to what vicious legislation may be expected from the party in the ascendancy. The address says:

"Unaided by money our grand young party has made an enviable record and achieved surprising success at the polls. We are but little behind the republican party in the number of states carried. Not being formed on sectional lines, our party in a single campaign has gained a large and influential following in every state in the south. The country is to be congratulated upon the fact that the leaders of one of the heretofore great parties have been abandoned and overthrown by the people and their organization well nigh annihilated. The accession of the other party to power is a result of violent reaction, and not, I am sure, of the deliberate judgment of the American people. The new administration will ignore three great contentions of modern times, relating to land, money and transportation, and will not attempt to solve either. The urgent demand of the people for the free coinage of silver is to be disdainfully ignored and one of the most valuable results of the late civil war, that of a uniform legal tender currency issued by the government, is to be sacrificed and abandoned and serious attempts made to force the people to return to the fraudulent system of state bank issues.

"Our party has not made its advent too soon. Its mission is to restore to our government its original and only legitimate function and I sincerely trust that the work of organization and education may now be pushed with energy throughout all the states. The fight is ours and we must occupy it without delay."

AN ILLINOIS CYCLONE.

The Little Town of Redbud Demolished—A Number of Fatalities.

A cyclone visited the town of Redbud, Ill., Thursday morning and the little hamlet is now a scene of wreck and desolation. Houses, barns, fences and orchards are leveled to the ground and spread over the surrounding country. A large double brick house occupied by D. D. Perry as a dwelling, office and composing room was entirely destroyed. The family were buried in the ruins, but managed to extricate themselves with no serious injury. Peterson's agricultural warehouse was blown down and four or five other residences destroyed. The eleven-year-old son of Mrs. Jacob Koch was killed instantly and his mother fatally injured. The others injured are Mrs. Peter Karden, Mrs. Louis Bager, Julius Koon, Mr. Beitman, Adden Starr, Miss Emma Crow and Mrs. John Manderfelt. Many of the people are without clothing and shelter in a driving rainstorm. Altogether thirty-five houses were destroyed. The property loss is estimated at $100,000

A London cablegram says: The Irish Times, in its issue of Thursday, contains a sensational article in reference to the bankruptcy of the widow of Charles Stewart Parnell. The article states that Mrs. Parnell has been driven into insolvency by adverse circumstances. The article states that when Parnell died there was not enough money in the house to bury him and friends defrayed the expenses. Parnell had expended forty thousand pounds in freeing the estate at Avondale from mortgage and in fruitless attempts to make the mines on the estate profitable. This left Mrs. Parnell with no other resources but a small annuity from her aunt.

NEW DIRECTORS ELECTED

By the Stockholders of the East Tennessee Railroad.

The stockholders of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia Railroad elected a new set of directors at a meeting at Knoxville, Tenn., Wednesday. Those elected are: Samuel Thomas, Calvin Brice, William P. Clyde, R. G. McGehee, John G. Moore, J. C. Maben, Thomas F. Ryan, E. F. Sanford, George F. Stone, W. E. Strong. John G. Moore is a Richmond and Danville director and W. G. Oakman is president of the Danville, and also president of the East Tennessee. The election of these new men give quite a Richmond and Danville cast to the directorate.

Held for Murder.

A special from Dallas, Texas, says: Dr. B. H. Jones, who slew Captain W. G. Veal in Dallas during the fair and exconfederate reunion about a month ago, was remanded to jail Monday without bail, after a habeas corpus hearing which lasted several days. The judge pronounced the murder of the first degree and therefore not bailable.

Home Dressmaking.

The sensible woman, she who has the best taste and knows just how to make the best of it, is learning, if she doesn't thoroughly understand it already, to have her dresses made at home. There never was a time in the history of clothes when so much dressmaking was done at home. Women have grown tired, oh, so tired, of the nonsense of custom dressmaking. The mistress of the household selects some young girl or woman who is handy with her needle, then she goes studiously to work and plans her own wardrobe. First of all, she tries her hand on an inexpensive dress, and if she makes a success of it, which she is very likely to do, she goes on from one degree of perfection to another.

Three-fourths of the difficulty about dressmaking lies in the fact that women do not realize what absurd figures they cut in the clothes they wear. Once let the full conciousness of this dawn on them, and the work is done; for never afterwards will they consent to look ridiculous, or what is even worse commonplace, while harmony, symmetry and beauty can be had by working for it; for whatever her follies and vanities may be, the American woman isn't lazy, especially when it comes to matters of adornment.—New York Ledger.

Three Things.

Three things to admire—Intellectual power, dignity and gracefulness.

Three things to love—Courage, gentleness and affection.

Three things to hate—Cruelty, arrogance and ingratitude.

Three things to delight in—Frankness, freedom and beauty.

Three things to wish for—Health, friends and a cheerful spirit.

Three things to avoid—Idleness, loquacity and flippant jesting.

Three things to fight for—Honor, country and home.

Three things to govern—Temper, tongue and conduct.

Three things to think about—Life, death and eternity.—Detroit Free Press.

Willing to Compromise.

"No," said the young woman. "It can never be! I wish I could have spared you the pain of this refusal, but let me say—"

"Don't say you will 'always be a sister to me,' Miss Kerleigh!" howled the disappointed man. "Anything but that!"

"No, Mr. Wellalong," she said gently. "I am hardly old enough for that. But I might be a niece or something of that kind you know."—Chicago Tribune.

Expensive Fuel.

Little Girl—"I went into Mr. Elite's house, and there isn't a door left in it. Nothing but curtains hung on poles. Isn't it too bad?"

Mamma—"Too bad!"

Little Girl—"Yes, I is awful sorry for her. I suppose coal is so high now they's had to chop up th' doors."—Street & Smith's Good News.

What a Wise Mother Can Do.

A wise mother can take ten minutes every day and read to her children a few words on astronomy, geology or physiology. Not dry statistics, which carry no knowledge to the little minds, but the names of planets and stars, their places and the mythological story connected with them; stories of the strata of rocks, with coal and other minerals buried beneath clay and stones; how the hot waters and the cold are deep down under us, waiting for man until he needs them and discovers their hiding places; stories of our own bones and nerves, muscles and blood; the course of our food from the mouth to the stomach; how fresh air invigorates us, and stimulants dry up the tissues. It is astonishing how easily little children learn the long words and use them intelligently. All these subjects and a hundred more are brought before them every day in a rightly conducted kindergarten.—Home Journal.

True Greatness.

There floweth once in the life of all
Some chancing streamlet full of glee,
Whose waters taken with the fall
Would lead us onward to the sea.

Unplucked the blossoms change to brown,
The autumn leaves fall one by one;
Ungathered chances flutter down
Or vanish with each setting sun.

Untouched are chords that would unfold
Sweet music rolling on the air;
Unfound, the brightest gems of gold
Lie hidden round us everywhere.

Unknown, the golden way to win
Is ever nigh, yet fading fast;
Unseen, the thing that might have been
Is lost forever with the past.

Not every rose that bloometh fair
Is warmed by beauty's smile, I trow—
Not every one has for his share
To wear a star upon the brow.

Yet this is truth that all should know
There is some honor for each state,
And should we rule or plow or sow,
'Tis doing duty makes us great.

A LOVE THAT WON.

"I know, Janet, that I ought to comfort you, instead of being so blue myself, but I cannot get over it. If Harry had come to me and said good-by it would not have been so hard. But never to see him before he went away off to those horrid gold mines, I think it was very unkind of him to leave his little sister. You may scold me if you like, Janet, but I think you had better sit down and write him a scolding letter instead.

"You forget, Nellie, that Harry did all in his power to see you before he left, and then when he found you could not be seen, he did the next best thing—left you a goodby note, which in your disappointment you seem to have forgotten altogether."

"Oh, yes, where is the note? Let me see what he has to say in excuse for this sudden flight.

MY DEAR LITTLE SISTER: Have endeavored to see you but failed in the attempt, so write this short farewell. You wonder at my sudden flight. Janet will explain it to you. I am but human, and, like the rest of mankind, find money the root of all evil, and like plenty of the root. The only evil in this case is that to obtain it I am compelled to tear myself away from Janet and yourself. When I have gathered up a goodly quantity of the precious metal, which they say is lying there to be picked up, then I'll return, pay off the mortgage on the farm—build a new home—marry Janet, and then we'll be happy together. This is my dream. Forgive me if the parting gives you a painful twinge. Be good to Janet. Your gold-seeking brother. HARRY.

Janet was Harry Arnold's betrothed. For years they had loved each other and would have been married ere this, but Harry felt that he wanted to begin married life free from debt. He had a farm of 160 acres, which, like many of our Western farms, was mortgaged, Harry had been prospering these last few years and the debt was fast disappearing.

Janet was teaching school in the little village of Thurston. Nellie, Harry's sister, was a stenographer in an office in Irondale, a town some miles distant. One morning she received a note from Janet asking her to come over as soon as possible, but not stating any reason. Fearing it was a case of sickness Nellie went at once, only to hear from Janet's lips the story of her brother's sudden departure to the gold fields. His friend, Angus Mackey, had written him such encouraging reports that he was anxious to go and see if he, too, could not gain a fortune in a moment. Harry determined to go, but what would his Janet say?

He drove to Thurston to see her and obtain her consent, but this he could not do. She begged him to let well enough alone. She was not in a hurry to marry—would wait a year or two, if necessary, if he would be governed by her wish and stay. Much as he loved Janet the visions of the Eldorado swelling him were too strong. So he had gone and left her, promising that if it was not a success he would return immediately and look after the farm.

This was the news Janet had for Nellie. Harry was so much to her. He had never done anything against her wishes before. He said he did this because he loved her and what could she say? Nellie's grief was soon allayed, while Janet's was still and deep. As the weary days went by with now and then a letter from Harry, folks began to notice how thin and pale Janet was becoming. The deep circles around her eyes told of sleepless days and a heavy heart.

Harry was one of the successful ones; he found, indeed, an Eldorado, but with that he found he had an insatiable thirst for drink; he found gold, but he also found with it bad company and an outlet for all he could make. His letters at first were full of the happy future, of his speedy return, but gradually they became shorter—less of love in them, and finally were only occasional missives written in his better moments. Finally, one day, Janet received a letter, after a long interval of silence. It was one of confession, telling her how low he had fallen, how utterly unworthy he was of her, and releasing her from all the promises she had made him.

His aged parents sank beneath the blow and burden, and within a few months both were laid away to rest.

Janet and Nellie talked it over and resolved to save the farm for Harry's sake. They decided to rent it, take the income thus secured and with part of their salaries pay off the rest of the debt.

When it was theirs, Janet resolved to try and lift a greater mortgage. She would go and see if she could not find Harry. She thought of him as he left her, not as the dissipated wretch he now was. Many are still living who remember the devastation caused by cholera as it swept over our own country, like a tidal wave from ocean to ocean. North, East, South and West, all felt the effects of its clammy hand. Even the little mining camp in the Sierras felt its ruthless grasp. Harry, worn out by dissipation, was not prepared to withstand its ravages and for days he was ill unto death.

One day as the stage coach was coming, bringing with it the weekly mail, Harry, in a slow state of convalescence, was thinking of the farm and loved ones. Oh, how he longed for a sight of the one he had so cruelly wronged!

The stage stopped, left as usual the pouch of mail and then there stepped from the stage a young lady clad in black. It was Janet. She had not heard of Harry's illness, but bent upon seeing him, had come all this way to do so. She felt if she could but see him she could persuade him to return. The boys were astonished to see a lady in the midst of them.

Hal Winters, the roughest and yet the most courtley of them all, stepped forward to see whom she was seeking. She told him and his first words startled her.

"Oh, Hank is better. But come along, I'll tell him you've come. Shall I tell him his wife is here?"

Janet hardly knew what to reply. However, she said: "No, tell him Janet is here—but perhaps it would be better—I'd rather go in unannounced."

He showed her the way to the rough miner's cabin where lay all that was left of Harry. The door was unlatched, so she gently pushed it open and there in one corner of the room lay Harry. He was sleeping. Janet crossed the room, drew a three-legged stool to the bed and sat down to wait his awakening.

He rolled restlessly from side to side. At last he aroused himself. He seemed to feel her presence as she sat there. He looked, rubbed his eyes and looked again. Could it be possible? Then he called out: "Oh, Janet, did you really come for me? I dreamed you did and it was so sweet to find you when I awoke."

Janet put his head upon her arm, softly and gently smoothed his forehead and told him he must not talk until he was stronger. Then she would hear all he had to say. In the meantime she would take care of him. She was sure that under her treatment he would become strong soon—very soon, she hoped. Days flew by and one morning he said he thought he would like to talk to her that afternoon.

Harry was man enough to confess all his wrong to Janet and asked her forgiveness. We suppose she granted it—women generally do. However, in less than a year Harry was around tending to the old farm, while Janet superintended the house and Nellie is coming home to spend her summer vacation.—[Chicago Evening News.

A Mind Reader from Saginaw.

Detroit has a young man who is a feature in his social circle because of his powers as a vocalist, palmist, mind reader, and "funny business" generally. He is just a little proud of himself all around, but especially so of his singing. Lately he has been giving some amusing take-offs on mind reading. Several nights ago he had as a confederate a sharp girl from Saginaw, who loves to prod him now and then in his tenderest places. On this occasion he had posted her on the mysteries of mind reading, and she appeared with him before a parlor audience, blindfolded in due form, and took her place ready for the performance. He held up a lemon in plain view of the audience.

"I have here," he said, with much form, "in my hand a lemon. What is it?"

"A lemon," promptly replied the sensitive, and he bowed and threw it aside, in the midst of applause.

"Now," he continued, taking up a piece of ice, "I hold in my hand a piece of ice. Is it hot or cold?"

"Cold," answered the blindfolded girl.

"Thanks," and he fired it out of sight while the audience applauded.

Next he took a shoe from the table.

"I have here," he said, "a No. 9 shoe. Can you tell me the size of it?"

"No. 9," responded the girl, and there were more roars of laughter and applause.

Then he stepped to one side and returned with a saw and a stick of wood. He put the stick across a bench and began to saw.

"Now," he said to the fair sensitive, "will you tell the audience what I am doing," and he sawed away vigorously.

The sensitive held her head to one side and listened intently. The operator was greatly pleased.

"This, ladies and gentlemen," he said, "is a most difficult feat."

The subject waited a minute, listening.

"Well," said the operator, "can you tell the audience what I am doing?"

"You're singing," announced the subject so unexpectedly that the operator fell over a chair back trying to get away.—[Detroit Free Press.

That Was All.

"What are you doing?" asked a man who entered as the physician was vaccinating a patient.

"Scraping an acquaintance," was the reply.

The Moodus Noises.

The Moodus noises are mysterious subterranean sounds which for nearly two centuries have been occasionally heard in the vicinity of Moodus, Conn. The sounds are produced, apparently, in the interior of a great hill, Mount Tom, which rises on the outskirts of the village, and were first noticed by the whites about the year 1709. The Indian names for the vicinity is Machimoodus, the "Place of Noises," there being a legend that a deity was imprisoned under the hill, who, by his efforts to escape, produced the sounds and the earth-tremor which frequently accompanies them. They were very frequent and distinct about 1726. They begin with a quiver of the ground and a low, rumbling sound appearing to come from an immense distance in the north and beneath the surface. The sound increases until it seems directly underneath, when there is a sharp explosion, and the roll of the subterraneau thunder passes away to the east. The sounds are loudest and the earth tremor is most pronounced at Moodus, but the people of towns and villages ten or fifteen miles away have perceived both. A remarkable thing in connection with these sounds is the fact that after the earthquake at Lisbon, in 1755, they ceased entirely, not being heard for many years. They were last noticed in 1888. The earth-tremor was often so violent that windows rattled, crockery and glass jingled on the shelves, and church bells gave out a distinctly musical note like that which follows the stroke of a clapper. No theory has ever been proposed which satisfactorily explains the mystery, as, it is said, no other phenomena indicating the presence of volcanic agents have ever been perceived.—[New York Dispatch.

New Zealand's Native Race.

About 40,000 of this fine race (the Maoris) are left, and they do not now seem to be dying out so rapidly as formerly. Of late they have been very well and liberally treated by the government, large reserves being set aside for them. Their own representatives sit in the Wellington Parliament, and they are, as they deserve, treated in every way as the equals of the whites. Some of the chiefs have features of as fine a cast as any white, and as a rule, they are superior in physique and quite his equal in intelligence. In the tourist districts, such as Chonimuta, they are of course, quite spoiled by the traveler's liberality with money for liquor, and they have degenerated into mere begging loafers.

The majority are now Christians, but the so-called Christian Maori is not always an improvement upon his heathen brother; in fact, many of the settlers much prefer him in his natural unconverted state. A few years ago a team of Maori foot-ball players visited England, and were successful in carrying off most of their matches with the best English teams. As horsemen they are hard to beat. They are hard fighters, and were a tough people to conquer. The foundation of New Zealand's pretty considerable national debt was laid by expenditure on troublesome native wars, but now, with only 40,000 left, and by no means united among themselves, they are sensible enough to see that half a million whites are too much for them.—[Detroit Free Press.

A Drumstick With a History.

The drum major's stick of the First Guard regiment in Berlin has a curious history. During the reign of Frederick II. it was the custom for Prussian officers to carry a stick as a sign of their dignity, and this stick was used not only as a commander's staff, but was employed in keeping up military discipline. At that time a certain Frederich Wilhelm Rohdich served as captain in the king's life guard. This officer had obtained great successes in the battle of Prague, and received in recompense various orders and honorable posts, and also a patent of nobility. After his death in 1796 the stick he used was preserved as a relic by his relations, till, in 1840, one of his grand-nephews, a Major Bredow, gave the stick to the First Guard regiment, with the wish that it should be used for the drum majors. The stick, which was a simple bamboo, was provided with a silver button, upon which were engraved the Rohdich arms, the cross of the order of merit, and the following words: "In memory of General von Rohdich, from 1779 to 1796 head of the regiment founded by the Kurfurt Frederick, and reformed by Frederick II. as the Guard Grenadier battalion, which, dissolved in 1806, still exists in the First Guard regiment."—[London News.

Fashions in Suicides.

"The mania for committing suicide is spreading to an alarming extent," remarked a Johns Hopkins professor a few days since. "I recall reading a prediction," he continued, "that between the years 1885 and 1895 such an epidemic, if you can call it that, would prevail owing to the planetary influences, and the facts seem to bear it out, whether the prediction was based on supposititious grounds or as a result of astronomical research. History tells us that at an early period in France so prevalent was the idea of self-destruction that the government issued a decree that after a certain time the body of any man or woman guilty of taking his or her life should be hanged in a public place and designated as that of a cowardly criminal. The result of the edict was that thereafter the suicidal mania became unfashionable, and deaths from this cause were few and far between. It would appear to me, reviewing the history of the past few years, that some legislation of the same sort must be enacted in America."—[Baltimore Herald.

Are Rats Clairvoyants?

Capt. Mason Chapman said recently: "It is an old saying that 'rats desert a sinking ship,' but it is a most singular fact that they do not wait until the boat or barge is sinking until they desert it. They appear to be apprised of the danger several hours before any accident occurs to the vessel. One case that came under my observation was when I was piloting a towboat in the Lower Mississippi. We were coming up stream late one evening, when I noticed a horde of rats coming off one of the barges we had in tow.

I told some of the members of the crew that we would have bad luck. We went ahead, and just before daylight the barge from which the rats had fled struck a rock and sank. No damage was done to any other part of the shipping. The same phenomenon occurred just before the fatal fire of the steamer Oliver Beirne. On the last day of the boat's career, about two hours before the fire, a drove of rats were seen to run ashore over the lower deck and jump overboard."—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

He Dilates Upon the Phenomena and Mysteries of the Heavens

And Tells of Sights Which He Saw When a Boy.

Shakespeare says "there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamed of in our philosophy." The fall of meteors on Wednesday night was quite a wonder to the generation and made the young people serious and solemn. Tornadoes and earthquakes and comets and meteors are always alarming, for they bring home to us our utter helplessness under the mighty hand of God. From 2 o'clock until near midnight, we watched these meteors. Part of the time we were standing out in the freezing air, but most of the time we looked through the uncurtained windows, and there was hardly a moment that they were not seen somewhere in the heavens. I hoped for another visitation like that of 1833, which I distinctly remember, for my father awaked me and dressed me hurriedly and we all stood in the piazza and watched and wondered for an hour or more. They seemed sure enough like falling stars and came down in myriads as gently as snowflakes. They nearly touched the earth before they went out, and I remember running around in the potato patch next morning for some sign of them, but found none. If there was any heat in their glittering light there was no sign of it in the tree tops among the leaves. I remember that Aunt Minty, our good old cook, prayed and exhorted long and loud, and a white woman across the street screamed out: "Come, Lord Jesus; take me, Lord Jesus. God, save us; God, forgive us," and she was kneeling on the door with her hands stretched up towards heaven. I remember that Mrs. Lester, the widowed mother of our late attorney general, lived very near us and came over to our house, stooping as she came for fear the stars would touch her. I remember that my father was calm and serene and gave us all assurance that there was no danger, for he was a well read man and knew that such phenomena had happened several times before and did no harm. Several times within the past century there had been a fall of meteors on the same date, the 13th of November, but none so brilliant or that came so near the earth.

It was in August 1854 that we were awakened about 2 o'clock one night by the crowing of the cocks for daybreak and our negroes got up and fed the stock and prepared to go to the field when our attention was attracted to the clock and on going out to see what was the matter we found it as bright as day and the aurora borealis was flashing a brilliant light that illuminated the heavens and the earth. Such things are always alarming to the timid and the ignorant. I heard Professor Proctor, the great astronomer, deliver three lectures at Lake Weir a few years ago and he lifted me up on thought among the starry heavens and made us realize our own insignificance as he approached the very confines of eternity and told us of things we had never dreamed of. He was a great and good man and I loved him as much for his humility as his learning. One night he lectured on the birth and growth and maturity and decay of a world, and he proved by the most convincing argument that this world had long since passed its maturity and was in the decline and that the scriptures would be fulfilled and this earth be burned up and pass out of existence. He said that worlds had passed away and that worlds had come into existence since the Christian era and that comets had appeared that had no record in the past—that creation was not finished but was changing and this little world of ours was but a speck in the universe. He said that if a straight line from the eye was drawn and extended in any direction it would sooner or later be stopped by a heavenly body.

We can enjoy this and be amazed but when a cyclone comes along or an earthquake begins to rock the little world about, there is no philosophy that can make us calm and serene. We don't understand these systems of nature nor can we fortify against them. I never saw a man or woman who was not superstitious about ghosts and it is because of the mystery that hangs around the dead—where are the spirits? Where had Samuel been when the witch of Endor called his spirit up—what kind of virtue was in the bones of Elijah that brought to life the dead man who was buried in his tomb? What kind of spirits were roving about distressing good people until they were sent into the swine and the swine into the sea? If we knew where we were going we could be less troubled no matter how terrible our fate. It is the mystery that hangs around that undiscovered country from which no traveler returns. I wish that we all had the faith of the little boy that I know whose mother asked him where he thought heaven was and replied promptly, "why, it's over at grandma's house." "Ah no," she said, "heaven isn't there at all. What made you think that?"

"Well, it isn't more than about a mile from there," he said. Grandma was enough heaven for him.

This seems to be an off year anyhow. A year of surprises. Just a few weeks ago and everything looked lovely for the republicans and the farmers to the farmers but Mr. Cleveland has cut the atmosphere and all its properties to the entire satisfaction of all its patronizers. Right on top of this action jumped from 7 to 9 cents and the New England manufacturers of the great staples raised the wages of their operatives 7 per cent. The republican party failed before the election to make the socialist believe that wages had already been raised after the McKinley bill, but these operatives know it was a lie. Mr. Cleveland's election or somebody has raised them and the explanation seems to have answered very satisfactorily to the majority of operatives. Goods have advanced and everything has gone lovely. And now comes cheering news and the papers heralds and announces that I reckon Governor Northen will set up an appointment for the world's fair and the people will pray the Buddha, Hi-ma and so on to help in building more railroads all over the country and also have better times, the poorly paid down-trodden patrons of the Alabama and Great Southern and Georgia Pacific and the Central and Louisville and Nashville and Georgia Central and Western and Atlantic and [illegible]

What the Various Fraternal Societies are Doing.

MASONS.

The order of the Eastern Star is an advanced order of Masonry; its membership embraces the wives, daughters, mothers, widows and sisters of Master Masons, and also Master Masons in good standing in their respective lodges. The order was instituted for women, and by them the work is exemplified, and nearly all the offices are filled by women. Every chapter is under the supervision of a Master Mason, and the landmarks of the ritual provide that no initiation can take place unless he is present.

Oregon has a membership of nearly 23,000. At the end of the year it will not be far from that mark.

Maine has now seventeen chapters of Eastern Star, whereas three years ago it had none. Gradually prejudice disappears before the light of reason.

Michigan conferred the degrees on 2,096 applicants this year.

Richmond has four Masonic halls.

California has over 16,000 members.

Over 10,000 Masons were buried last year.

There are 1,800 Knights Templars in Ireland.

Canada has a membership of nearly 21,000.

Upward of 12,000 Germans had a merry time at the recent dedication of the new German Odd Fellows' Orphan Asylum at Unionport, Westchester county, N. Y. The Odd Fellows' home, now six years old, and the new Orphans' home will derive their support from membership taxes of 25 cents per capita annually. In addition to this revenue, fairs and festivals are periodically given by the various lodges to swell the income. The German Odd Fellows' fair at Tammany Hall last April netted the organization over $37,000. The annual Fourth of July picnic always realizes from $4,000 to $5,000, and the yearly festival of the Kings County lodge can be depended upon to clear $2,000. The new Orphans' home has cost $51,000, and it is paid for. It has a capacity for 200 inmates. It was designed by Architect F. A. Minth of New York city. The water supply is derived from an artesian well, which was bored at an expense of $12,000. Gas is manufactured on the premises. The home has a regular physician, a hospital ward, large well lighted and ventilated classrooms for the study of English and German, also extensive dormitories and playgrounds. The asylum will be opened at once for the accommodation of orphaned children of German Odd Fellows.

Jay Gould, the great fancier, died last Friday.

The Huntsville Mercury gives the legislature a wise hint to overcome the deficit in the State treasury. Tax the dogs.

The Union Springs Herald under the management of Mr. P. F. Miles keeps well up in the front rank of Alabama journalism. Col. J. C. Hixon has retired from newspaper work to practice law.

We regret to note the retirement of Mr. D. C. Cumbreth from the Marion Standard. The Standard under his management gave evidence of superior merit and ability as an honest and fearless exponent of true Democracy.

The Democratic party of Alabama are once more united, and the man who by word or act would heave open the closing breach is an enemy to the Southland. The men who voted for Cleveland are democrats, no matter whether they voted for Kolb or Jones.—Eastern Star.

Mr. J. H. Nunellee and his venerable father Capt. S. F. Nunnellee, formerly of Tuskaloosa, but later of Anniston, have purchased the Selma-Times Mail. There will be a general shaking up of dry bones in the office of the Times-Mail with the Nunnellees in charge. Success to them.

Both the Illinois Senators—one a Democrat and the other a Republican—now favor the election of the United States Senators by the people, and Senator Palmer has expressed the opinion that a a constitutional amendment to that effect will probably pass Congress this winter.

On the whole this is about as sensible an observation as we have seen on the situation: "There is no use making a great ado about a small deficit in the State treasury. Nearly every treasury we know anything about is in the same fix. The county treasury suspended payment some months ago, and the Mirror's treasury has gone into desuetude." The above is from the Eutaw Mirror.

A colored man sized up the tariff this way: "The tariff seems to me sorter like dis: Dere is a great big cow, and its head is down here in de South, and we are feedin' and stuffin' it with hay and stuff. And de tail of dat cow is way up yonder at de norf, and dey is milkin her; dey does de milkin' and we does the feedin'. I say turn her around an let us milk awhile and let dem feed awhile. I am here to tell you that the Democratic party is de only party on de green earth dat is tryin' to turn de cow aroun."

"The Democratic party is big enough and generous enough to take into its folds again all the mistaken men who lately strayed from its ranks, but it can never make any concession to the centralizing doctrines of the Ocala platform to get them back. Most of the men who were misled by these dangerous doctrines do not know it, but such doctrines are more dangerous to free government and Democratic principles than any political movement since the foundation of the government, by any party.—Jacksonville Republican.

The official tabulation of the vote in Ohio shows that the result was essentially a democratic victory. James P. Seaward, the first name on the list of Democratic electors, received 404,115 votes, to 402,399 for the first name on the list of the Republicans—a plurality of 1,716 for the one Cleveland elector declared to have been chosen. It is claimed, with a good show of reason, that the voters who marked a cross opposite Mr. Seaward's name intended to vote for the entire Democratic electoral ticket. A recent change in the law, however, requires the mark for a straight vote for all the ticket to be made in a little circle at the top of the ballot. Had all the Democratic ballots been so marked the entire electoral ticket would have been chosen. However the reduction of Blaine's plurality of 32,000 in 1884 and of Harrison's of 20,000 in 1888 to a beggarly margin of about 1,000, obtained by a fluke, is a great triumph for the Ohio Democrats.

LEGISLATIVE.

The question of the regulation of primary elections was the subject of a bill introduced in the senate. Section one requires the executive or standing committee of any political party or citizens proposing to hold a primary election or meeting to select delegates to a convention or nominees to be voted for at an election, at least seven days before the proposed election or meeting to give at least five day's notice by advertising in some newspaper published in the county or by posting at least three notices in public places in each ward, precinct or beat in the county, setting out the time at which the election will be held, and the names of the parties appointed to hold such meeting or election and receive the vote thereat and make proper return thereof as well as the time when such return shall be made. Section two requires that participants in the meeting or election must be qualified electors under the laws of the State. Section three gives the committee the right to prescribe rules under which qualified electors may participate in such meeting or election, as proper member of the party, in whose interests the meeting is held. Section four, allows any recognized member of the party holding such meeting or election, challenging any person offering to vote and the right of person offering to vote shall be determined by the parties appointed to conduct the meeting or election. Section five, requires that votes shall be by ballots, and requires that the parties appointed to conduct the primary to report in writing, returning therewith the ballots, list of voters and reasons why challenged parties were allowed to vote or their votes excluded. Section six requires that such elections shall be governed by the general election laws as nearly as it can possibly be done. Section seven, makes it a misdemeanor to vote in such an election illegally, or to attempt to bribe voters, punishable by a fine of not less than ten dollars, and that on conviction the party convicted may be sentenced to not more than three months hard labor. Section eight requires that the inspectors or managers to be sworn that they will discharge their duty faithfully and honestly, to the best of their ability and any willful violation of that oath shall be perjury and shall be punished as provided by law.

The title of cheese parers has been tacked on to the members of the house who have taken a lead in the matter of reduction and retrenchment. There is another Richmond in the field to-day, but he stakes the pruning knife in a a quarter which may win him the title of pie-carver. The brilliant young member from Hale, Mr. Knight feels that while the movement of retrenchment is going forward, the members of the general assembly should be willing to bear their share of the general shake-up, and he introduced a bill this morning fixing the per diem of the senate and speaker of the house, shall be from and after the passage of the bill, two dollars and fifty cents, and the per diem of the senators and representatives forming the general assembly shall be one dollar and twenty-five cents. The bill, as a further reduction, places the mileage to be paid to members at three cents for each mile traveled in going to or returning from the seat of government.

The senate passed Mr. Lackey's excellent bill to place a penalty of fifty dollars on Probate Judges for carelessly, negligently or willfully certifying to the claim of a person not entitled to relief under the act for the benefit of confederate veterans.

The senate passed Mr. Goodwyn's bill allowing boards of county commissioners to vote as much as forty dollars out of the county funds to aid any totally disabled confederate veteran. Senator Cunningham spoke volumes when he said on the floor of the senate that this was a bill to "keep confederate soldiers out of the poor house."

The farmers of Madison county propose to look after the deficit in the flour barrel in the following sensible manner mentioned by the Mercury:

Wheat raising is evidently largely on the increase in Madison. In fact our leading farmers are talking about their wheat prospects as largely as if they were on a blizzard chilled prairies in the North West. This certainly forebodes great good for our county, as wheat not only yields handsome returns but it recovers worn-out lands.

Gov. Jones on the Deficit.

Below we give the most important portion of Gov. Jones' inaugural address, which relates to the probable deficit in the State treasury and the necessity of an increase of the tax rate:

I am not definitely advised of the amount of expenditures which would be cut off if all the pending bills providing for retrenchment are passed, nor of the probable income from some proposed new sources of taxation. It is safe to say, however, that the aggregate increase will not exceed 75,000 dollars, under the most sanguine estimates. It is conceded by all that a change must be made speedily in our existing convict system. Whether the bill recommended by the convict commission is adopted or whether the change is to be effected by some other mode, it is most certain that 50,000 dollars per annum, the net profits of the present system, will no longer be available for the general purposes of the state, and that sum will be provided for from other revenue. It is not risking much, perhaps, to say that contemplated reduction of the tag tax and the fees under the oyster tax will draw from the treasury at least $10,000 more, which the state has been using in its fiscal operations. So if we balance our net gains under proposed reforms they provide only 15,000 dollars out of a deficiency of $216,725, leaving $201,725 deficiency to be provided for by September 30, 1893, and about a like deficit in September, 1894.

The receipts from fiscal year of 1893 are from taxes collected at the present rate, under the assessment made in this calendar year, and from license and licenses, etc., collected in the early part of 1893. No increase of taxes, unless it operates retroactively (a thing not to be contemplated), will enable us to meet that deficit. Nearly a fourth of the fiscal year will have elapsed before any retrenchment proposed can be felt in the revenues for the fiscal year ending 1893. It results, therefore, if all the retrenchments proposed by any of us are wise, and made effective by legislation, only threefourths of the savings or increase would reach the treasury before September 30; and this amount as we have seen, has about balanced by loss of revenue from changes in the convict system and agricultural department.

This deficit therefore must be arranged, as were the drafts upon the treasury for January 1st next, not only by use of the borrowing power to the full extent allowed, but by raising about a like amount of money by the use of the hitherto excellent credit of the state. How is it to be done? What balance sheet of assets can we show to assure confidence that we will repay what we need, if it is loaned us? Will men loan money on our estimates of increased values? Is there any reason to believe that our next assessment on taxable values, which is based on the values of next January will be greater than the assessment last January?

It is true greater confidence is abroad, and there is strong ground to hope for increased values for January, 1894; but who can predict with confidence that property shall be listed on higher values for January 1893, than in January, 1892, in view of the low price of our chief staple and the great depression of this year? Are not the probabilities at least against any increase of values next January? What if values fall off? What other argument than the speculative one, as to the increase of values, can we offer to foster belief in our ability to pay what we will need next September? Will not the answer be, if we point to improved modes of assessments, which ought by all means to be adopted, that Alabama has struggled without much practical results against these same evils since 1819, and that the existing rate will not meet the wants of the state, even if there be great improvement in the modes of assessment and values do not decline.

What is to become of the credit of the state, which is not more vital to her than it is to the welfare of the private citizen, if on next September the treasury cannot meet the expenses of maintaining the government? Must we then stop the schools? How far can we administer justice? What is to become of all the great interests, and peace and welfare of the state, which cannot live when the government does not pay its just expenses and meet its just wants? Such a condition of things will be a thousand fold worse, and entail far greater suffering and hardship, than can result from a moderate increase of taxation.

Any reasonable effort at retrenchment which you may adopt, even if my individual judgment does not coincide, will have my hearty co-operation. But when it is apparent that no retrenchment is in our power will bridge our deficits, is it not high time we were considering the rate of taxation? And what rate can be better than a rate which will raise only the needed revenue, and not a cent more?

The proposition submitted in my biennial message was to increase a mill, if necessary. If increase in values, better assessments, or wiser laws will result in sufficient revenue in the future, not a dollar of the increase will be collected. It will in common and substitute a recommendation to this only what was needed. If we refuse to take such action, how can we expect to restore confidence? How can we induce any one on September 30, 1893, to arrange for tiding over that deficit and saving our constituents great hardships, if we can reasonably assure them that our revenues will enable us to repay their advances? What will be our situation in September, 1894?

TAX REDUCTION.

The last reduction in taxation was a risky experiment, and has operated greatly to the disadvantage of the state. We cannon afford to embark in any more doubtful experiments to retrieve our losses. Another mistake may entail great disaster upon us.

It is wisdom and patriotism alike to place supreme trust in the intelligence and good sense of the people in this matter. They will cheerfully sustain whatever is necessary and right to preserve their government. They do not doubt our motives or propose to serve them, and we cannot doubt their purpose to uphold the honor and welfare of the state. Who that puts unreserved and supreme faith in the people will doubt that, under existing conditions, they will approve an increase of the rate of taxation, necessary to sustain their state, which will not exceed the rate they cheerfully paid six years ago, and is much less than that paid before 1887, on valuations considerably less than at present? The people will have cause to condemn us, if in mistrust of them, or the justice of their judgment, we refrain from taking any measure which would otherwise commend itself to our approval to sustain the public faith and credit. The democratic party can dare to do right.

Eleven years ago Belva Lockwood, a member of the bar in good standing in the District of Columbia, was refused admission to the bar of Prince George county, Md., by Judge Magruder, although she had business before its court. She was refused because she was a woman, and Judge Magruder, in declining to allow her appearance, went out of his way to say, "I pray God the time will never come when women are admitted to the bar in Maryland!" A few weeks ago Mrs. Lockwood again applied for admission to the bar of Prince George county, in order to take up the same case she was compelled to drop eleven years ago. This time she was admitted by Judge Brooks, who is now on the bench. "Tharfore the sun do move." The Lord did not hear Judge Magruder's prayer.

BOWMAN ABANDONS KOLB.

He Resigns the Chairman of his Committee.

To the State Executive Committee of Kolbites held here Wednesday night, P. G. Bowman sent his resignation. A. T. Goodwin, the State Senator from Elmore County, was elected Chairman in his place. Several other vacancies in the committee were filled. It was decided to continue the party and a plan was adopted for the support of the same. The plan is to take each county in the State at a rate of about $600 per month for the next two years in order to raise funds for the next campaign. The meeting of the committee was secret, and other matters are said to have been disposed of, but not given out.

A resolution was passed appointing a committee of five to publish an address begging the assembly of a mass meeting in the court house in each county or some other convenient place on Saturday, January 7th '93.

Its object will be to consider alleged frauds etc. The latter part of the resolution reads on this wise:

"And whether it is the sense of the people of the State that R. F. Kolb and the candidates on the ticket headed by him should take such steps as will enable them to gain possession of the offices to which they were elected, or quietly and tamely submit to the stupendous wrongs. Also whether, in case the Legislature shall fail to provide for a contest of said election, it is the desire of the people to assert their sovereign power by a resort to such legal agencies as may yet be at their command".—Montgomery Advertiser.

For Bronchitis

I never realized the good of a medicine so much as I have in the last few months, during which time I have suffered intensely from pneumonia, followed by bronchitis. After trying various remedies without benefit, I began the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and its effect has been marvelous, a single dose relieving the of choking, and securing a good night's rest."—A. Hilgiebeiman, Gen. Store, Long Mountain, Va.

La Grippe

"Last Spring I was taken down with la grippe. At times I was completely prostrated, and so difficult was my breathing that my breath seemed as if confined in an iron cage. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and no sooner had I began taking it than relief followed. I could not believe that the effect would be so rapid."—W. H. Williams, Cook City, S. Dak.

Lung Trouble

"For more that twenty-five years, I was a sufferer from lung trouble, attended with coughing so severe at times as to cause hemorrhage, the paroxysms frequently lasting three or four hours. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and after taking four bottles, was thoroughly cured. I can confidently recommend this medicine."—Franz Hofmann, Clay Centre, Kans.

Things Worth Knowing.

The following is a splendid liniment for chilblains: One ounce of camphor gum, four fluid ounces of olive oil. Dissolve together by a gentle heat and apply to the afflicted parts.

If you find your hands growing cold and clammy, clap them together and rub them as much as possible. Bathe them well, first in hot and then in cold water, using a Turkish towel to produce friction.

Nothing so good for tired eyes has yet been discovered as bathing them in hot water; and neuralgia in nine cases out of ten will yield to applications of cloths wrung out in water in which the hand cannot be borne.

The order of washing dishes is of some importance. Glass should be washed first. After the dishes are done carefully scald, rinse and dry dishcloth and towels. If they can be dried in the open air so much the better.

Love Much.

Love much. Earth has enough of bitter in it;
Cast sweets into its cup when e'er you can.
No heart so hard but love at last may win it.
Love is the grand primeval cause of man,
All hate is foreign to the first great plan.

Love much. Your heart will be let out to slaughter,
On altars built of envy and deceit.
Love on, love on! 'tis bread upon the water;
It shall be cast in loaves at your feet,
Unleavened manna, most divinely sweet.

Love much. Your faith will be dethroned and shaken.
Your trust betrayed by many a fair, false lure.
Remount your faith, and let new trusts awaken
Though clouds obscure them, yet the stars are pure;
Love is a vital force and must endure.

Love much. There is no waste in freely giving;
More blessed is it even than to receive.
He who loves much alone finds life worth living.
Love on, through doubt and darkness and believe
There is nothing which love may not achieve.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

According to law, the terms of the State officers elected last August will commence to-morrow. In point of fact there will be but one change, the newly elected officers succeeding themselves, except in the case of State Treasurer-elect Hon. J. Craig Smith, who succeeds Hon. J. L. Cobbs. To all the officers who have served the State great credit is due for their efficiency and faithfulness, and it is safe to predict that for their incoming terms they will give equal satisfaction.

In going out of office Mr. Cobbs will have the gratification of knowing that he carries with him the confidence and esteem of the people of this State. He has devoted his whole time to the discharge of his office and he has administered it with no other desire than to conserve the best interests of the State and people. In all Alabama's experience she has not possessed a more pains-taking and conscientious public servant. His accounts have always been right, and there has never been a moment of his four years incumbency that he was not ready for the inspection of books and counting of funds. In his intercourse with those having business with the office, Mr. Cobbs has at all times been considerate and courteous and has made of every man with whom he had business while State Treasurer a true and lasting friend. In common with all Alabamians we extend to Mr. Kolb hearty and good wishes for the future. He has faithfully done his duty and to him is gladly accorded the commendation of "well done good and faithful servant."—Advertiser.

THROUGHOUT THE SOUTH.

Notes of Her Progress and Prosperity Briefly Epitomized.

And Important Happenings from Day to Day Tersely Told.

At Fayetteville, N. C., Wednesday morning, fire broke out in one of the principal business blocks and in five hours entirely burned eight stores, the loss being $40,000; half covered by insurance.

Prominent business men of Charleston, S. C., are agitating the question of building a grain elevator. Efforts heretofore made to bring western grain to the Charleston port for foreign shipment will be resumed.

The Macon and Atlantic railroad was sold at auction at Macon, Ga., Wednesday. It was bought in by the creditors and bondholders. J. R. Young, of Savannah, did the bidding, and the aggregate price paid was about $410,000. The road will probably be rebuilt.

A syndicate has purchased a large tract of phosphate land in Polk county, Fla., paying $60,000 cash. E. T. Walton, of Wilmington, Del., is president, Mr. Reynolds, of Atlanta, Ga., is vice president, and G. A. Limastree, of Wilmington Del., secretary and treasurer.

A Columbia, S. C., dispatch says: In the house Monday a voluminous prohibition bill was introduced, prepared by a committee of leading prohibitionists of the state. Its provisions are very strict. If any prohibition bill is passed, it will be this one. A strong fight will be made against prohibition.

A freight was wrecked at Johnson City, Tenn., Thursday night, on the East Tennessee road. Through disobedience of orders, freights 21 and 22 collided. Twenty cars loaded with cattle were demolished. It is thought several tramps in the cars were killed. A great number of cattle were killed.

Wednesday night when passenger train No. 17 on the Savannah, Americus and Montgomery railroad rolled into the union station at Montgomery, Ala., from Americus, Ga., Sheriff Waller attached the train on papers sent from Birmingham, where they were sworn out by C. S. Simmons & Co., wholesale grocerymen, on a claim of $5,724.16 for supplies.

The Southern Express Company held its annual meeting in Savannah, Ga., Monday morning and elected officers as follows: President, H. B. Plant; vice president and general manager, M. J. O'Brien; vice president, M. F. Plant; secretary and treasurer, G. H. Tilly; general auditor, C. L. Loop. The business of the company was reported to be in a flourishing condition.

General Lucius E. Polk died at Ashwood, Maury county, Tenn., Thursday morning. General Polk was fifty-nine years of age. He served in the confederate army under General Pat Cleburne until after the latter was killed at Franklin. He commanded a division in a corps at Chickamauga and served with distinction throughout the war. He was sent to the state senate in 1886.

A Raleigh special says: Thursday, officers of the Baptist state convention representing white missionary Baptists of North Carolina, made up the annual statement. This shows a gain of forty-seven new churches and brings the total number up to 1,700. The convention embraces forty-two associations and covers all territory east of Blue Ridge, and three counties beyond. Its gain in membership during the year approximates 12,000.

The Hartwell Railroad Company has been placed in the hands of a receiver. Judge Newman in the United States court at Atlanta, Tuesday, issued an order appointing E. B. Benson to take charge of the properties of this line, which is a branch of the Richmond and Danville road, and which runs from Hartwell to Bowersville, Ga. The receiver will take charge of the property on December 1st, and operate it for the court.

The monthly report issued by the commissioner of agriculture of Tennessee shows that the corn yield is only 78.2, as compared with 80.6 per cent. of the full crop last year. A large portion of the winter wheat crop is late sown, but the prospects are for a good stand. The yield of the cotton crop in the state is now placed at 47.3 per cent. of which nearly three-quarters has been picked. The yield last year was estimated at 72.8 per cent.

A Savannah, Ga., special says. The contract of the engineers and firemen employed on the Central railroad system expired at noon Thursday. The men will continue at work until something definite is done. The trouble between the Central and the engineers, firemen and telegraphers does not seem any nearer a settlement than a week ago, and a strike of at least the telegraphers, if both sides keep up to what they say, is apparently inevitable.

The insurance men of Charleston, S. C., are preparing to oppose the bill before the South Carolina legislature, requiring every insurance company in the state to deposit $25,000 worth of state bonds as a guarantee. Insurance men claim the bill a round about method disposing of bonds. It is not believed opposition will come from the insurance men's organization but will be made by individuals in the committee room. It is thought the bill will become a law.

The United States circuit court grand jury, at Norfolk, Va., Wednesday, returned indictments against Robert Taylor and Joseph H. Hutcer, judges of election for Jackson ward, of Richmond, and Messrs. James Lyons, Jr., and William J. Orange, citizens of Richmond, for violation of the federal election laws. The offense charged against the two judges is that having ordered several deputy marshals from the polls and said deputies refusing to obey their orders, were committed to the city jail of Richmond under the state law which confers that authority upon all judges of election.

A special of Wednesday from Meridian, Miss., says: The noted Kemper county outlaws, Tom and Walter Tolbert, for whom exciting chases for a month past have been made, are captured and at present are safely lodged in the Lauderdale county jail. The facts are still fresh in the public mind how on Nov. 4th Tom Tolbert, an escaped convict, and his brother, John Tolbert, opened fire on Tom Donald and Will Spinks, deputy sheriffs. The fire was returned and John Tolbert killed. A posse was next morning attacked by the Tolberts and Tom Cole was killed. So enraged did the county become that old man Tolbert was hung.

A Birmingham special of Thursday says: Judge Pardee, of the United States circuit court, has issued a decree ordering the sale of the East and West railroad on December 28th at public auction. The sale is to satisfy the bondholders, who hold a mortgage for $9,274,000. The terms are $3,000,000 cash, balance on time. The road is 117 miles long, between Pell City, Ala., and Cartersville, Ga. It is understood a syndicate is prepared to bid it in and consolidate it with a number of other lines, such as the Marietta and North Georgia, and Chattanooga Southern, with a view to forming a system to be called the Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. The sale takes place at Birmingham.

AFTER THE CENTRAL.

Gov. Tillman's Message to the South Carolina Legislature.

Wherein He Recommends Some Action Against the Road.

The South Carolina legislature will shortly be after the Central road of Georgia for trying to do in the state, as Governor Tillman says, what the West Point Terminal attempted to do with the Central. This matter involves the control of the Port Royal and Augusta road by the Central "to the detriment of the Port Royal and the public welfare." Gov. Tillman sent a message regarding the matter to the legislature Saturday. Complaints had been made of the matter and the last legislature had directed the attorney general to investigate them.

The governor states that in 1857 a charter was granted to build a road to Port Royal for the purpose of developing the harbor. He gives a very interesting history of this harbor, the finest on the Atlantic coast. In 1857 a charter was granted to build a railroad from Augusta to Port Royal for the purpose of developing that harbor. In 1886 the road was reorganized and it entered upon an active and prosperous career. Large and commodious docks and wharves were constructed at Port Royal, one of the largest cotton compresses in the south was built, and an elevator was erected, the workshops of the company were there, and energy and life permeated the entire organization. Lines of steamships called regularly at the port and large numbers of vessels used in deep water and improved facilities for the purposes of commerce. The business of the company steadily increased. In fact, everything promised speedy development of this magnificent harbor as the deep water outlet for the great grain and meat trade of the west.

This condition of things, however, soon attracted the attention of the Georgia Central railroad, as a competing road, having its terminus in Savannah. It bought the stock of the Port Royal road until it acquired a majority of the shares when it assumed active control of the property. The result was disastrous to the Port Royal road and the Port Royal harbor. The service that followed occasioned frequent complaint, the port facilities were neglected, the cotton compress was pulled down, the grain elevator dismantled, the wharves allowed to go to ruin, and the machine and car shops were removed.

The governor declares that the purposes for which the corporation was created are not being fulfilled, the harbor is neglected, the rights of the people disregarded, and all increase in taxable property has been prevented, while the rights of the minority stockholders are sacrificed. The governor quotes the status to show that the control of this property by the Georgia Central road is in a violation of law.

GOV. JONES INAUGURATED.

No Opposition Was Shown—His Inaugural Address.

A Montgomery special of Thursday says: Governor Jones was inaugurated for his second term in the hall of the house of representatives, the entire general assembly being present. There was no opposition.

Before taking the oath Governor Jones delivered his inaugural address. Among other things the governor gave an exposition of the acts of the democratic party from the time it took control of the state affairs in 1874, up to the present time, and declared that the party was not responsible for the condition of the treasury existing at this time. He recited the charge made that useless offices had been created, and gave a list of all offices created since 1874, showing the causes leading to the creation of these offices and the necessity. He held that the present condition of the treasury was brought about by unfortunate depressions following a too rapid decrease of the tax rate. He felt that the only plan to save the credit of the state was the increase of the tax rate.

A Jackson, Miss., special says: The vote of Coahoma county only reached the office of the secretary of state Thursday. The entire vote of the state was 53,809, divided as follows: Cleveland, 40,327; Weaver, 10,956; Harrison, 1,406; Bidwell, 910. Cleveland's plurality over Weaver is 29,961, and his majority over all is 27,665. Coahoma gives Catchings a majority of 290, and makes his majority in the district 2,750.

UNLUCKY BANK ROBBERS.

They Made a Big Haul but Were Quickly Captured.

A most daring bank frobbery occurred Tuesday afternoon in Allentown, N. J. Two young men entered the Farmers' National bank and, with drawn revolvers, demanded all the cash on hand. Cashier Hutchison and an assistant were the only employes present. The weapon was held at the head of each and one of the robbers backed up this forcible demand with the words: "We'll blow your heads off if you don't turn all your stuff over at once." Cashier Hutchison quickly complied with this request and handed over about $2,000 which lay on the counter before him. Then one of the robbers compelled the cashier and clerk to go to the wall and turn their heads while the other robber walked out of the door and into the street. His accomplice quickly followed. In a moment the cashier and clerk rushed out into the street after the robbers. The cashier had grabbed a pistol in the bank and immediately, on gaining the street, began firing at the fleeing thieves.

The robbers returned the fire and the exchange of shots and the cries of Hutchinson and his clerk soon aroused the village and almost immediately a score of persons were in pursuit. About two squares from the bank the robbers were captured. Threats of lynching were made. They gave their names as J. B. Morris and Frederick Smith, and were at once removed to Freehold jail. The money given to them by Cashier Hutchinson was recovered.

TELEGRAPHIC GLEANINGS.

The News of the World Condensed Into Pithy and Pointed Paragraphs.

Interesting and Instructive to All Classes of Readers.

Alexander H. Wyant, the famous American landscape painter, died in New York Tuesday morning, aged thirty-six years.

A dispatch of Thursday from Milwaukee says: The official count of the vote of Wisconsin has been completed. It is as follows: Peck, democrat, for governor, 176,198; Spooner, republican, 170,384; Peck's purality 7,844.

The lumber firm of Bills & Koch, Toledo, O., assigned Monday. Liabilities, $150,000; assets estimated, $88,000. Unfortunate wheat speculation on the part of the senior member of the firm is said to be the cause of the failure.

At the fire underwriters' meeting in New York, Wednesday, the most interesting thing was to decide that hereafter there shall be no universal basis of rate, but that the base rate for each city and town shall depend upon its own record.

The church, St. Michael, one of the finest in Vienna, Austria, was destroyed by fire Wednesday night. The church contained many tombstones from the sixteenth to the eighteenth centuries, which are badly damaged. The loss to the city is irreparable.

A Chicgo dispatch of Thursday says: The Calumet Iron and Steel works, on old Calumet river near Cummings, has been sold to a syndicate of Cleveland men for about $500,000, and work will be resumed in the plant after having laid idle for the last year.

A New York special says: The story reached Wall street Wednesday that Jay Gould was dead. It was promptly denied, but it was admitted at his office that he was sick. At a late hour Mr. Gould was very weak, and there is a great deal of anxiety over his condition among the members of his family.

A special of Thursday from Tacoma says: The official returns from all but one county in Washington give Harrison 36,461; Cleveland, 28,922; Weaver, 19,244; Bidwell, 2,487. For Governor: McGraw, republican, 38,103; Snivel, democrat, 28,779; Young, people's party, 58,639; Green, prohibitionist, 636.

A special of Thursday from Joliet, Ill., says: The condition of the collapsed Stone City bank and Enterprise Wire Mill Company looks more serious. Additional claims were filed Thursday morning, bringing the aggregate liabilities of both concerns to nearly a million dollars, with probably one-third of that in assets.

A New York dispatch says: Default was made Thursday on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia first extension 5 per cents, amounting to $5,000,000. At the company's office it was said that the default was necessary on account of the depression in the south. The bonds may remain in default six months before foreclosing proceedings can be instituted.

A Washington special of Wednesday says: Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Rathbone, reports the number of new postoffices established during the past fiscal year as 4,105 greater than during any previous year, except 1890. Over one-fourth of these new offices went to Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi, Alabama and North Carolina. The greatest increase in any state was in Georgia.

A news special from Taunton, Mass., says: The grand jury resumed its session Thursday morning and began the examination of more witnesses in the Borden case. Detective McHenry and wife, who were mixed up with a sensational publication a few weeks ago in the court house, were among the witnesses to testify. District Attorney Knowlton stated squarely Thursday morning that the last insanity story was all bosh.

Dispatches of Monday from Santa Clara, Cal., state that the heaviest storm of wind and rain that has occurred there for many years is now prevailing. No damage has been reported so far beyond the loss of a couple of fishing boats. Trainmen on electric cars running to a cliff observed rockets being sent up some distance out to sea. There being no tugs or life saving service here, no response could be made to the signals.

A Washington dispatch says: A meeting was held Thursday at the residence of Mrs. John A. Logan to further the interests of the American university, to be erected in this city. Mrs. Logan proposes to orgnaise an American university league upon the plan of the National Woman's Temperance Union. The object of the league is to enlist the services of the women of the Methodist church throughout the country in the accumulation of a fund of $1,000,000 to form a part of the university endowment.

The New Bedford, (Mass.) Mercury in its issue of Wednesday says: Attorney General Salisbury belives Lizzie A. Borden is insane. This is the secret of the adjournment of the grand jury in the case from November 21st to December 1st. The Mercury says the evidence submitted to the grand jury was sufficient for the indictment and its members were ready to bring in a true bill, but Attorney General Salisbury believed so strongly that the prisoner is insane he ordered adjournment so she might be examined by experts as to her sanity.

A special of Tuesday from Cheyenne says: The final count of Carbon county vote makes the Wyoming legislature republican on joint ballot, which will insure the election of a republican to the senate. It is said, however, that the democrats and populists will have control of the lower house, and will unseat a number of republicans, elected, before consenting to meet in joint session, so as to elect a democrat or a populist senator. There is also a hitch regarding Dr. Osborne's taking his place as governor, for which there is no supervision under the constitution.

JAY GOULD DYING.

The Great Financier of Wall Street Slowly Passing Away.

A New York special of Friday morning says: Jay Gould is dying. He lies at his home in this city, unconscious, and the latest bulletins from his bedside are to the effect that he may die at any moment.

All day Thursday there were anxious watchers by the bedside of the famous millionaire; and, naturally, the greatest interest has been manifested in business circles over the condition of the patient, whose every move—almost, whose every breath means so much to the financial world!

One of the windows on the Broadway side of the New York Produce Exchange, where charges are said to result, is now in charge of a female clerk, Mrs. Carrie M. Hay.

GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The Industrial Development in the Past Week.

In regard to the industrial situation in the South for the past week the advance in cotton of one and one half cents since Nov. 1, adding as it does $23,500,000 (estimating present stocks at three million bales) to the material wealth of the South, is having its effect on every branch of industry. The marketing of the crop confirms statements as to the existing shortage and a further advance may be expected. The Southern mills have marked up prices about 5 per cent for their product, to meet the increase in the value of the raw material. Several new cotton mills are reported for the week.

Preparations are making for the blowing in of several furnaces in the iron distrnct to meet the steady demand. All but three in the Birmingham district are now in blast. Increased activity is reported in the lumber market, and Texas reports shortage in manufactured cypress. There is a general complaint that the available supply of freight cars is not equal to the demand from iron, coal and lumber shippers. The general outlook is very promising.

Forty-nine new industries were established or incorporated during the week, together with 4 enlargements of manufactories, and 14 important new buildings. Among the new industries reported are brick works with $25,000 capital at Atlanta, Ga., a canning factory at Fort Valley, Ga., a $300,000 cement factory at Texarkana, Texas, a $95,000 cotton gin company at Dallas, Texas, a grain elevator at Owensboro, Ky., and a $60,000 development company at Covington, Ky. Flour and grist mills will be built at Epes Station, Ala., Cadiz and Covington, Ky., Shelbey, N. C., and Allendale, S. C., a $30,000 ice factory at Fort Valley, Ga., and one at Charleston, W. Va., a foundry and machine shop at Camden, Ark., coal mining companies organized at Covington, Ky., a $50,000 quarrying company chartered at Newport, Ky., and one at Floville, Ga.

A $10,000 gas fitting company at Houston, Texas, a chemical manufactory at Columbia, S. C., a $200,000 manufacturing company at Covington, Ky., and a paper mill at Memphis, Tenn. Cotton mills are to be built at Opelika, Ala., Floville, Ga., and Chick Springs, S. C., and a knitting mill at Knoxville, Tenn. A shoe factory is reported at Augusta, Ky., a stone sawing mill at Sanford, N. C., a tannery at Ozan, Ark., a tobacco factory at Memphis, Tenn., and a $35,000 water gas company at Richmond, Va. A barrel factory will be built at Norfolk, Va., a carriage factory at Brunswick, Ga., a furniture factory at Charleston, W. Va., and saw and planing mills at Bridgeport, Hamptonville, Huntsville and Pollard, Ala., Carrollton Ky., Statesboro, Ga., Huntington, Tenn., Waco, Texas, and Stewart's Depot, Tenn.

The enlargements for the week include an electrical plant at Greeneville, Tenn., a packing house at Wheeling, W. Va., and a tobacco factory at Statesville, N. C. Among the new buildings as reported to The Trade-man, are an armory at Richmond, Va., factories at Tampa, Florida and Pittsburg, Va., a church at Bowling Green, Ky., a court house at De-Witt, Ark., hotel, at Ashland, Ky., and Richmond, Va., a tannery at Newport, Tenn., and a warehouse at Houston, Texas.—Tradesman (Chattanooga, Tenn.)

GEORGIA AT CHICAGO.

Legislators Gaze Upon the Architectural Panorama of the World's Fair.

A special of Friday from Chicago says: The Georgia legislature saw the world's fair in a snow storm. They would not have been deterred by a blizzard. There has never been anything on the earth to approach this exposition even in its present stage, and it is not probable that it will be repeated for a century to come. The magnificent architectural panoramas spread out on the shore of Lake Michigan were such that only the most exalted imagination alone could conceive, but find no parallel for.

The party reached the Windy City in time for breakfast at the Auritorium. At 11 o'clock the Georgians went out on a private train to the fair grounds. Judge Bryan, a special commissioner of the exposition, accompanied them. Busses met them at the gates and they were driven everywhere in the grounds. Several buildings were entered and viewed from end to end.

GRAND BEYOND IMAGINATION.

The scope of the exposition is grand beyond imagination. That septem of wonders so boasted of by the ancient world would be almost commonplace even in a combination beside the vast modern marvel. There is one building in which a dozen structures like Georgia's state capitol could be stored away.

The cost of the fair buildings when finished will be eight millions, and they are all nearing completion with the exception of a few state and foreign structures. Fifty nations and thirty-seven colonies will be represented and every one of these fifty foreign nationalities has its own home. Thirty-one states and two territories have their individual buildings.

But Georgia's name nowhere appears. Her noble motto, "Wisdom, justice, moderation," nowhere greets the eye and thrills the patriotic hearts of her representatives. They would have been deeply mortified had it not been for the conviction that the state will avail itself of the rare opportunity.

During the drive around the grounds a snow storm came in from the lake, but the southerners muffled up well and took it gleefully. All were deeply impressed by what they saw, and every member of the party realizes that Georgia will be making a mistake if she does not send an exhibit here. The only question is the method of proceeding.

Returning from the grounds, Governor Northen, Speaker Atkinson, Colonel Bill Smith, of Gwinnett, Camp, of Douglas, Colonel Wrenn, Judge Bryan and others made brief speeches in the special car. Governor Northen strongly urged the legislature to do all in their power to get an appropriation for a state exhibit. Colonel Atkinson said that Georgia ought to have a fitting display of her resources here.

POLITICS IN CHURCH.

A Strange State of Affairs in Country Churches in North Carolina.

A Raleigh special says: The North Carolina Western Methodist conference convened Tuesday morning at Allistor, in the Centenary Methodist Episcopal church, Bishop Headrix presiding. The attendance was large. The third party and farmers' alliance movement, not content with disturbing political relations and quiet, is found to have also taken a hand in religious matters. Most of the preachers are ardent democrats and members of the country congregations, who are members of Gideon's band, or, under its yoke, have declined in many cases to pay church assessments and a number of pastors have received for this reason only about half their salaries. A number of them have resigned their pastorate on this account.

Connecticut's Official Vote.

The official count of the vote of Connecticut, as determined by the state board of canvassers Wednesday afternoon, shows that Cleveland received the largest vote ever cast for a presidential candidate in the state. The total vote of the state for president was 164,882, and Cleveland's plurality over Harrison is 5,375. The total vote for governor is 164,676. Lorenzo B. Morris, democratic candidate for governor, has a majority of 633 and a plurality over Governor Russell M. Bartlett, republican candidate for governor, of 6,021. Other democratic state officers have majorities ranging from 633 to 5,350.

PINKERTON INVESTIGATION

The Senate Committee Gets Down to Work.

Testimony of Robert A. Pinkerton, the Chief of the Army.

The committee of the United States senate appointed to investigate the workings of the Pinkerton detective agency, with special reference to the Homestead troubles, met in New York city Saturday morning. Robert A. Pinkerton and Captain Hind were on hand to give testimony. Mr. Pinkerton was called first. He said they sent 306 men to Homstead last July, and all those sent from New York were American citizens and of good character, and he thought those sent from Chicago were also. He had insisted, the witness said, that his men should be sworn in as deputy sheriffs and that agreement was made. Counsel advised him that they had the right to have their men sworn in as peace officers, whether they were citizens of the state or not. Pinkerton said that Captain Hind, who had charge of his men at Homestead, told him that the Pinkertons were fired on before the barges, in which they were, reached the works, and afterward when the steamer's gang plank was run out to the bank. It was during the latter volley that the captain was shot and not until then was a shot fired from the barges. The witness did not know who gave the order to fire, and thought that no order was given. In answer to a question, Pinkerton said that he thought that labor organizations were good in many respects and a benefit to workingmen. They had a right to strike, he thought, but no right to prevent other men from taking their places. When asked what profit the Pinkerton agency made on sending the men to Homestead, he replied "We are out $15,000."

He explained that his loss was caused by the seizure of 225 rifles and other property and the care or the men hurt in the battle.

Chairman Gallinger suggested that Mr. Carnegie would recompense the agency, but Pinkerton thought this was very doubtful. The witness admitted that it was sometimes customary for the Pinkertons to pass themselves as workingmen and mingle with the strikers. Pinkerton said that he firmly believed that his men were needed on many occasions because of the insufficiency of local protection. He thought that the supiness of local authority in strike times was largely due to political considerations.

"Do you think that the violence committed at Homestead was due to the strikers or to the rabble that was attracted there?" was asked.

"I think it was committed by the strikers, their leaders, and the advisory committe," was the reply.

Pinkerton took occasion to deny that Charles Waupenstein, Pinkerton superintendent, was an ex-convict, as charged by Mr. Bruce, in evidence given in Chicago. He had been at one time chief of police at Cincinnati.

PENSION FIGURES.

Secretary Noble Furnishes Estimates for the Next Fiscal Year.

A Washington dispatch of Monday says: Treasury officials view with some surprise the estimates sent up by Secretary Noble for pensions. They are, in their opinion, too small, but as it is their duty to put them in the "book of estimates," in they go. Secretary Noble's figures in round numbers are $165,000,000 for pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and $10,500,000 as a deficiency for the fiscal year 1893, which, with the appropriation of $147,000,000, brings up the pension money for the fiscal year of 1893, $157,500,000.

The treasury department is now paying out pension money at the rate of $13,500,000 a month. This makes the present rate $162,000,000 a year; but this rate is increasing each month and unless the pension office stops work altogether and does not allow any new cases or increases, the rate it is estimated must increase to at least $14,000,000 before this present fiscal year is ended. When the fiscal year 1893 94 is reached, for which Secretary Noble says $166,000,000 will be sufficient, the posted officials in the treasury department, will be $13,000,000 a month, or $180,000,000 a year, which will have a deficiency of $14,000,000 for the second session of the fifty-third congress to provide.

EXPENSES OF OUR NAVY.

Commodore Folger says He will Need $2,459,824 for Next Year.

Commodore Folger, chief of the bureau of ordnance of the navy department, in his annual report, says an appropriation of $2,459,824 will be required by his bureau for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894. Two million dollars of this amount will go towards the armament of vessels authorized, $280,000 for fuel, tools, material and labor expenses of target practice, the maintenance of new proving ground, and proof of naval armaments, $50,000 for arming and equipping the naval militia and $60,000 for the general expenses of torpedo stations.

No More Politics.

A Raleigh dispatch says: The executive committee of the North Carolina State alliance adjourned Friday night after a three days' session. It made a very searching investigation into the state business agency affairs, and made an order that the books of the agency were to be open at any time to any suballiance which is a stockholder. The state alliance organ pledged itself in the future to deal no more in politics.

California's Vote.

A special of Tuesday from San Francisco says: The official vote of all counties in California, with the exception of San Francisco, give Harrison a plurality of 3,422. Returns from all but nine precincts in the city reduces Harrison's plurality in the state to 310. It is possible that when the official vote has been completed upon individual elections the electoral vote may be divided between Harrison and Cleveland.

Official Vote of Tennessee.

A Nashville dispatch of Wednesday says: The official returns of the recent election are now complete. Judge Turney received 133,244; George W. Pickle, republican, 132,490; John P. Buchanan, populist, 12,410; R. H. Hunt, prohibition, 3,425. Turney's plurality is 754. Turney over Buchanan 20,754. Judge Turney leads 11,338 of a majority over all.

Columbus.

Viceroy they made him, Admiral and Don;
Wishing, good King and Queen, to honor him
Whose deeds should make all like distinctions dim.
Columbus! Other title needs he none;
And they—in wisdom, more than kingship blest—
Go down to future days, remembered best
For service rendered to that lowly one.

Columbus! With proud love, yet reverently,
Pronounce that name—the name of one who heard
A word of life, and answering that word,
Braved death, unfearing, on the shadowy sea;
Who, seeking land not known to any chart—
That land by faith deep graven on his heart—
Found justice, truth and human liberty!

MY COUSIN AMY.

BY ALBERT BIGELOW PAINE.

Howard Taylor and I had been chums for years. Our offices were in the same building and we had fallen into a habit of lunching and dining together whenever my family were out of town for the summer. I had often wondered why he had not married, for he was a fine-looking man, upright, able and prosperous. One night, when we were having an unusually intimate conversation, I ventured to ask him.

"You must have had a story," I said.

"Yes," he answered slowly, "I have had my story, and if it will not bore you—I warn you it is not cheerful—I will tell it to you."

"I was brought up on a farm," he continued, after a long pause. "My father was not well off, but was anxious that I should have an education, and strained every nerve to send me to the village academy, finally offering me a year at college.

"I was then eighteen years old. I had mastered the lower branches, and was thirsty for more. I eagerly accepted.

"When my year was up, I came home heart-sick to think that I must stop now, at the very threshold of accomplishment.

"My father had a cousin, also a farmer, whose land joined ours. The two had been always like brothers, and his daughter Amy had been the only sister I ever knew. She was a little younger than myself, rather small for her years, but well advanced in her studies and with the promise of beauty in her face.

"When I returned from college, I was astonished to see that in my brief absence she had become a woman, and the promise of beauty was fulfilled. I felt shy towards her and she was no longer my little sister. Still, I went to see her quite as frequently as before, and summer evenings, when we sat out on the long porch, I held her hand while I told her of my dreams and ambitions, and how they must all come to nothing because of the lack of means. It never occurred to me that she, too, had plans and dreams. Like all young fellows, I was selfish, and thought that those around me must be interested only in my welfare.

"Still I was very glad when one evening she told me that she had obtained the district school for the winter, and her voice that night was so soft, and she seemed so happy, that I kissed her for the first time since my return, and on the way home I felt that I was really very much in love with my sweet cousin.

"Not long after this, my father one day surprised me with the information that he could give me another year at college, and a week or two later I bade them all good-bye—kissing my pretty cousin a little carelessly, perhaps—and I was so full of the delight of going that I forget how much I was in love.

"Well, I worked hard at college, and had little time to think of those at home. However, I wrote twice to Amy, who answered and said she liked teaching and hoped I was getting along well with my work.

"When I came home the next summer I thought it was for good, but my father advised me to begin reading law during my vacation, saying that he thought I might be able to finish my education and take a law course afterward, as had always been my desire.

"That summer it seemed to me that my cousin was more shy and more beautiful than ever. I did not have very much time for love making, but I resolved that some day, when I got a start in my profession, I would tell her of my love and take her away from the little farm-house to keep her near me always. She had given great satisfaction as a teacher and was to have the school again.

"My last year of college was the busiest of all, for I was now reading law during every spare moment, in order to be ready for the course the following summer. I graduated at the close of the term, but did not go home, for the law class was to begin at once and money was too scarce for me to make any unnecessary journey.

"Amy wrote me a letter of congratulation, which she enclosed with one from my father, for there was nothing in it that a sister might not have written. I replied to it in a brotherly way—not sorry that we could be as brother and sister—for of course it would be a long time before I could think of a wife, and besides, after all, my cousin was only a little country girl.

"That fall I took my degree, and returned home for a week or two, preparatory to beginning the battle with fortune in the great city.

"I was 21 and full of hope. My education and my profession were completed. The world lay before me.

"I saw my cousin Amy nearly every day, but it seemed to me that she was less beautiful than formerly. She appeared paler and thinner, I thought; so I assumed a patronizing air, and told her that she was too fond of money and working too hard, for she was teaching now at the academy and studying French and Latin evenings at home. But she only laughed, and when I went away, she cried a little as she let me kiss her, and then I thought how good and pure she was, and could hardly keep back my own tears. But I was not as much in love as I had been at twenty. She was not as attractive, and, besides, my head was full of the future and the prospect of city life.

"Well, I left them and came to Chicago, a stranger in a strange city. For three years I had a hard fight, and no thought of a wife entered my head. I was very poor and twice my father sent me money to keep away the wolf.

"By and by, I began to climb the ladder and felt that success was coming at last. Then sometimes I thought of Amy, and wondered if she had fitted herself to be the wife of a man who, as people said, was going to make his mark. I had heard from her only through my parents, who had written to me regularly, but I knew that she was still teaching and unmarried.

"I determined now to pay a visit to my old home and come to a final decision as to my future. That night I received a telegram from my father. My cousin Amy was dead.

"My father met me at the station, and as we drove home, he told me what he could no longer conceal. It was [illegible] by my cousin that [illegible] two years at college. It was her earnings that had paid for my law course and that had been sent to keep me from want in the great city.

"Then, as I bowed my head in shame and anguish, he told me how for two years past she had been growing thinner and paler, they thought from over-study, and how a sudden attack had finished the work of destruction almost before they thought of danger.

"That day as I stood by the coffin and looked at the quiet face, from which every vestige of beauty had been stripped for my sake, I said, 'For your sake, sweet cousin, I will live and die alone.'"

This was the story that Howard Taylor told me as we sat looking out over the water waiting for the boat to take us home. And sometimes, since, as I thought of the big-hearted man going through life alone, I have wondered if Amy knows.—[Romance.

A Sad Thanksgiving.

"Mary," said the younger of two little girls, as they nestled under a coarse-covered bed one cold night in December, "tell me about Thanksgiving Day before papa went to heaven. I'm cold and hungry and I can't go to sleep. I want something nice to think about."

"Hush," said the elder child, "don't let dear mamma hear you. Come nearer to me," and they laid their cheeks together. "I fancy papa was rich. We lived in a very nice house. I know there were pretty pictures on the wall, and there were nice velvet chairs, and the carpet was thick and soft, like the green moss patches in the woods; and we had pretty goldfish on the side table, and Tony, my black nurse used to feed them. And papa—you can't remember papa Lotty—he was tall and grand, like a prince, and when he smiled it made me think of angels. He brought me toys and sweetmeats and carried me out to the stable and set me on Romeo's live back, and laughed because I was afraid, and I used to watch to see him come up the street, and then run to the door to jump in his arms. He was a dear kind papa," said the child in a faltering voice. "Don't cry" said the little one, "please tell me some more."

"Well, Thanksgiving Day we were happy; we sat around such a large table with so many people—aunts and uncles and cousins—I can't think why they never come to see us now Lotty; and Betty made such sweet pies, and we had a big, big turkey; and papa would have me sit next to him and give me the wishbone and all the plums out of his pudding; and after dinner he would take me in his lap and tell me 'Red Riding Hood,' and call me 'pet' and 'bird' and 'fairy.' Oh Lotty, I can't tell any more, I believe I'm going to cry."

"I am very cold," said Lotty, "does papa know up in heaven that we are so cold and hungry now." Yes—no—I cannot tell," answered Mary, wiping away her tears, unable to reconcile her ideas of heaven with such a thought. "Hush, mamma will hear." Mamma had heard. The coarse garment upon which she had toiled since sickness dropped from her hands, and tears were forcing themselves thick and fast through her closed eyelids. The simple recital proved too sad an echo in that widowed heart.—[St. Louis Republic.

The Eskimo Story Teller.

The Eskimo traditions are told over and over again. Everyone knows them word for word, and should the reader omit or add a single syllable he would be corrected instantly by some one of the audience. The recital of the story sits at one side of the room, and, covering his head, turns his face toward the wall away from the audience before he begins.—[Detroit Free Press.

Cruelty in a Kid Glove.

It has been estimated that out of the 55,000,000 people in the United States at least 16,000,000 are grown women of an age to wear kid gloves, and yet, according to the Dry Goods Economist, the import is about 10,000,000 pair from France, which is said to make 24,000,000 pair. When we realize that one woman of fashion can easily wear a hundred pair during the year, it would seem that many of our women are still to be converted to the wearing of that dainty necessity, a kid glove. Our large cities are immense consumers, New York stores selling a larger number of kid gloves to the average woman inhabitant than any other city, except Paris, which of course does a large trade with its floating populace.

The center of the glove trade has always been at Grenoble, a mountain city of 55,000 people in France, where even the streets and public squares sing of gloves, as one of each is named after Xavier Louvin, a veteran in the manufacturing of fine kid gloves. The raw skins manufactured here in a year are valued at $4,000,000. When made into 16,000,000 pair of gloves the value is just doubled, and the making up of the skins gives employment to 30,000 people.

The skins for the so-called "real" kid gloves come from France, Italy, Spain, Mexico and South America, France ranking first, where extreme care is taken with the kids, even to sewing the kid in a cover or blanket to keep the delicate skin in perfect condition. In the meantime the little animal grows until the cover inflicts untold pain, but we never hear of ladies forming a society to promote the disuse of kid gloves, as has been tried with the Audubon society for suppressing the fashion of birds on hats. But the birds are not absolutely necessary, or a substitute may be had, while nothing will replace a good kid glove on a well-dressed woman of the present day. The skins from Chili and the Andes are particularly liked for suede gloves.—[Chicago Herald.

Signs of Coming Age.

"Do you know the surest indication of old age?" said a physician recently. "The surest indications in man," he continued, "moist eye, a dry palm and a shrinkage of the calf of the leg. All of these indications are due to some action of the nerves consequent upon advancing years. In the matter of the eye, the fifth section is interfered with, and it is this which causes a flow of water. The dryness of the palm is produced by an interference with the functions of the body, also due to the action of the nerves, and the shrinkage of the leg follows from similar causes.

"In old age, too, you notice some men become more corpulent than in the earlier portions of their lives. With drinking men the change is often produced by the quantity of one stimulus which they consume with third drink, and with those who do not drink it follows from other physiological changes. As to the hair becoming gray, it results, in the majority of cases, from the partial closing of the hair-pulp and the reduction of the quantity of natural coloring matter which the closing produces. With women the changes of the eye does not come so soon as it does to men."—[Courier-Journal.

Veterans with Queer Wounds.

There were some veterans with queer records in attendance at the recent encampment. One of these, known familiarly as Comrade Chase, who served in a Maine battery during the war, carried the scars of forty-eight wounds received in a single battle, that of Gettysburg. His numerous wounds resulted from the explosion of a spherical case immediately in front of him at that memorable battle. Corporal John Burns, of Ohio, receives a pension for a peculiar wound which is described in the pension bureau as "shot in the hip with a barrel of sugar."

Burns, says the Washington Post, was on guard duty at a sharp railroad curve in Virginia during the latter part of the war, and was struck in the hip and disabled by a barrel of sugar which was thrown suddenly from the rickety car by the momentum at the turn in the road. Another veteran who is present is recorded in the bureau as having stopped a cannon ball with his abdomen. He was sitting in a tent near headquarters when a spent cannon ball came bounding along and struck him in the stomach with sufficient force to knock him hors de combat, but not to kill him.

Still another queer case is that of a Pennsylvanian veteran. He was rendered totally deaf by a cannon ball which whizzed by his head in uncomfortably close proximity at the battle of Malvern Hill. In describing the sensation afterwards he said it felt for an instant as if fifty cyclones had burst loose about his head. The concussion also paralyzed him for several minutes. There is another pensioner who receives a monthly allowance from Uncle Sam's till for a "horse bite of the neck." He was a cavalryman, and claims to have been bitten by a vicious animal while serving with Sheridan in his valley ride. The bite resulted in a partial paralysis of the spine. These are but a few illustrations of the various and multitudinous peculiarities of war which were represented at the grand army encampment.

Strange Captivity.

The springboks of South Africa migrate in vast herds, moving in a compact body and carrying everything before them. If a flock of sheep be in the line of march (as sometimes happens), it is surrounded, enveloped, and becomes, willingly or unwillingly, part of the springbok army.

An African hunter tells the strange story of seeing a lion in the midst of the antelopes, forced to join the march. It is supposed that the lion had sprung too far for his prey, that those upon whom he alighted recoiled sufficiently to allow him to reach the ground, and then the pressure from both flanks and the rear prevented him from escaping from his strange captivity.

If the springbok travels in such armies, how can those in the middle and in the rear find food? In this wise: those in the front ranks, after they have eaten greedily of the pasture, gradually fall out of the ranks to rest, while the hungry ones in the rear come up, and so the caravan eats all the while changing.—[Yankee Blade.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

Christmas is Near at Hand and the Philosopher Grows Restless.

Some Remarks Regarding Credit and Cash—He Favors the Former Plan.

It's three weeks to Christmas, but they are plotting against me right now—I was taking my evening repose and they thought I was asleep and began to disclose their plans, and so I assured a little gently over and anon just to get the bottom facts, and I found out the family secrets, and especially what they were going to do for me. I didn't seem to be in it except to foot the bills, but maybe they will think of me later. Yesterday, while I was dozing, I noticed the arrival of a lot of ladies' cloaks which they said were just sent up for them to look at and try on—only this, and nothing more. And so they looked and tried on, just to oblige the accommodating merchant, and I overheard him say that these cloaks were sent out as very superior samples and would have to be returned to New York if he couldn't dispose of them at prime cost. Well, it looks like a pity to send such beautiful cloaks away back to New York. It is a reflection on Cartersville. And when fine goods are offered at cost it is a great temptation to anybody to buy them, especially when the kind-hearted man says he will wait until January for the money. Credit for a month or so makes a wonderful difference. It seems easier like getting a thing for nothing, for when the first dun comes it is only a warning. It don't mean business. The bookkeeper does that as a matter of form. It is a credit mobilier. It moves along. Pay day is away off somewhere, and there's no telling what might happen before then. Somebody might die and leave you a legacy, or your ship might come in, or the world might come to an end, and so it is a great inducement to buy on a credit. The only trouble is that the days are all coming this way. But still credit is a wonderful thing. Most all great enterprises are done on a credit, and the longer the credit the better the debt. A bond for thirty years calls for a higher premium than one for ten years, and so I don't see why a merchant shouldn't wait on a man forever and let the debt get gooder and gooder all the time.

These are idle speculations, I know, but it is nevertheless a fact that the kind-hearted merchant did not carry back as many cloaks as he brought to my house. The girls kept two to look at a little longer—"first look, then linger, then embrace," says the old song, and when I gently inquired if they had made a purchase I was affectionately informed that their mother said she would pay for them. Of course she will—she always does when she makes up her mind. She hasn't got a dollar in the world that I know of, but when she takes a notion to dress up her children or make Christmas gifts or pay missionary money, I recognize the fact that we twain are one flesh. "With all my worldly goods I thee endow" has been of force in my family ever since I married her, and her opinion is that a healthy man who is not an idiot has no excuse for not having a little money for his wife when she wants it. Thanks to the good Lord, I have maintained her respect in that line up to date, and I will have some Christmas money for her if I have to go to Texas again to get it. The home and the heart are about all that the gentler sex have to live for, and it's a man's business to keep both happy if he can. "Mamma says she will pay for them," and I could see a mischievous twinkle in their eyes as they added, "they won't cost you a cent." They know who the family broiler is—the banker, the queen, the "ipse dixit."

For years and years I have been working in the harness—pulling the family wagon, wearing out my collars going up hill, and wearing out my britching holding back when on the down grade; but they comfort me all along the line, and say that pulling is healthy and that it is better to wear out than to rust out, and they call me a good old horse and pat me and rub me, and so I keep on pulling and expect to continue until something breaks. When the maternal ancestor has raised ten children and laid by the crop, she can have some rest, and ought to have, but the old man must keep pegging away. Sometimes I think I have softening of the brain, and not long ago Miss Arp hinted that my perspirings were not as bright as they used to be—but my head is not registered, and that I perceive. The monthly bills are all the same or sooner, and I have to skin dig and bite and nip over as much as ever. Not long ago I got behind a little with the bank, and I got a notice of it Sunday morning through the mail, and it disturbed my tranquility at church and liked to have caused me to overlook my text on Sunday. Just get behind with a bank if you want to learn what "financial calling" is. My banker called me the next day to know if I got his note. But they are mighty good to me all round—merchants and bankers, too. In fact, everybody but the state and the county and the town. Talking tax-dues is inscribable as death, and the devil is at the bottom of it. If everybody was a good citizen there would be no tax, or as little as we wouldn't feel it. There would be no courts, no jails, no asylums, no charities or constables or town marshals, no taxes or town laws, or night watch or police. Good gracious! what a paradise that would be. But here we are and there we go. Everybody is trying to reform everything, and so all theory and but little fact. They have gotten up a "single tax" and "anything but trade" and trade unions and anti-everything else, and I don't know what all, but if a man will devote the time he spends on these things at sociables and his family my opinion is he will be happier all his long row. If we all take the devil while we are working it is the best thing we can do, for he is pretty shrewd as a plotting fiend. This is a dull and sad theme, and the older I grow the more I am convinced that the best way is to [illegible]

Now Brush, when [illegible] peace with him. Poor fellow, how he did [illegible] hands and repent at leisure. With what anguish he exclaimed, "I acknowledge my transgression and my sin is ever before me." I heard old Dr. Axson preach from that text once and if there is any bigger text in the Bible, I don't know it. "My sin is ever before me." Booth and Forrest nor McCready could have thrown more of anguish into the recollection of crime than he did. A thousand times have I thought of it. My sin is ever before me. There is no retreat, no hiding place, no extinguisher. Young man, young woman, don't commit any sin that will be ever before you. Life is the unsolved problem any how and the best we can do is to try to do right and be humble and hopeful. Life is uphill and downhill and on a level, but a good horse will never stall going up and he will hold back going down, just so it ought to be with a man, and I think of that sometimes when the load is heavy and the hill is steep, but I do want somebody to speak occasionally and let me get breath. Alexander Stephens said he wanted to die in the harness and he did, but I don't. I want to die grazing around in the clover field or the barley patch and have nothing to trouble me but conscience and not much of that. I don't want many of the luxuries of life, but I do want all the comforts for Mrs. Arp and myself in our old age and enough spare money for her to pay for cooks and hats and make Christmas gifts to the grandchildren. Somebody will take care of us I know, but when the old folks have to quarter on the children it looks like they had made a failure and didn't die when their time had come. It is a pitiful sight to see them outlive all their property and not leave enough for a tombstone. I know some graves of grand old people that are still unmarked and will be, I reckon, until Gabriel blows his horn. But maybe they can rise sooner without the marble over them, and I reckon that is why the children left the parents uncovered. I reckon so.

BISHOP FOSTER, of the Methodist Church, says he is one of only eleven in all the world who have preached the Gospel for fifty-two years consecutively and without rest.

REPRESENTATIVE MCKEIGHAN, of Nebraska, the only Populist outside of Kansas elected to Congress, is distinguished as the homeliest man in the Fifty-second Congress.

GENERAL CASSIUS M. CLAY, now eighty years old, and one of the last survivors of the diplomats of his day, has presented his library, statuary and paintings to the county in which he lives (in Kentucky) as the nucleus of a public library.

WILLIAM H. ENGLISH, of Indianapolis, candidate for Vice-President on the Hancock ticket in 1880, is still described as a business man in his prime, with "iron gray" hair and "flashing eyes." He devotes himself to the accumulation of wealth, although already the possessor of many millions.

"JEFF" DAVIS'S farm in Louisiana, to which President-elect Mr. Cleveland is expected to go for a few days' hunting this winter, is described as a beautiful place. Immense tales, which never lose their verdure, may be found there; the forests are full of game; the waters are covered with wild duck, and there are lakes abounding in bags trout. Mr. Jefferson's house is twenty miles from a railway.

W. L. Martin for Attorney General received a larger majority than any other candidate in the August election. His majority was 20,704. Mr. Barron comes next with a majority of 20,500.

Cotton sold in Jacksonville Thursday for 8¼ cents. This paper predicted that cotton would go to ten cents, if Cleveland should be elected, and it has gone steadily up since then. Already the South has realized seventy-five million dollars by the rise.—Jacksonville Republican.

Mr. William O. Monroe, the veteran editor of the Eutaw Whig and Observer, is a candidate for the postmastership of his town. The people of Greene owe much to this vallant old soldier in the cause of Democracy, and the office he seeks will doubtless be accorded him by common consent.

The Calera Journal asks the VIEW "to give it a rest." We expected the Journal scribe to break down very soon and want to rest. He gives too much energy to chasing rainbows, and in endeavoring to show that Calera does not care for any portion of Chilton but that a part of Chilton wants to go to Calera. He is a hard worker but such a job as that is enough to take a way all his wind.

The good deacon who presides over the Shelby News, in referring to the CHILTON VIEW and the Shelby Chronicle says: "You will find that both these worthy brothers will be applying for office, either local or federal, for themselves or some of their families."—Shelby Chronicle.

As to our political aspirations, we assure the News man that with twenty applicants for a place the editor of the VIEW will not let any expectations run away with him on that line. We keep steadily at the printing business at the old stand, and now is the time to subscribe.

The Democrats in the Legislature should move cautiously. Alabama needs a new election law, a new road law, the tax rate will have to be increased, and there are other important matters that should not be ignored. We don't think our legislators will have any time to throw away in changing county boundaries. And a Senator who is very close to Calera remarked to us the other day that he thought the bill to change the boundaries between Chilton and Shelby would be defeated by a two-thirds vote in the House if it ever got a favorable report from the committee. So we can leave the bill with the committee. Since writing this the bill was overwhelmingly defeated in the House.

Referring to the bill of Senator Bloch to give Mrs. Jefferson Davis $500 annually, the Athens Courier says:

We have in mind now a woman living in Limestone county who lost her husband in the late war. She was left several children, most of whom were daughters to raise. It has not been long since she was seen holding the plow handles, and two of those daughters, now grown women, were hitched in front pulling the plow, turning the sod that they might make sufficient bread and a little cotton to enable them to live. Far better had Alabama pay this woman $500 annually than Mrs. Davis.

The Courier wants charity to begin at home.

Our contemporaries, CHILTON VIEW and the Shelby Chronicle said nothing in their last issues about the "slice" of territory that now belongs to Chilton and which wants to be attached to Shelby county. Brethren have you seen fit to let the people most interested settle this matter as they think best for themselves.—Calera Journal.

We clip the above from the Shelby Chronicle not having noticed it in the Journal. The VIEW contained four squibs on the subject of the same date as the above; considering that the bill has been eternally defeated in the House we are satisfied. Certainly the VIEW is willing to let the people most interested settle the matter for themselves, and we think now that they will be sure to do so, though hardly to the satisfaction of the Journal. The whole of Chilton is interested you know.

Will Longshore Contest?

Mr. Apple Pie Longshore, late candidate for congress of the late third party was in town yesterday in consultation with the three Big Wigs of the emasculated, Weaver-Lease-Radical aggregation.

Apple Pie is doubtless here seeking comfort and consolation from the three Big Wigs aforesaid for his wounded pride and lacerated feelings and may be to receive instructions from them as to his future course in politics as well as to find out whether he is to contest Mr. Robbins' seat in congress or not. He was probably advised to contest, since doing so he will receive $2,000 allowed contestants. This has been the rule adopted heretofore by defeated radical candidates for congress in this district, and Longshore is no better than were they, and likes the mighty dollar as well as they.—Selma Journal.

Is it possible that Longshore can have the "cheek" to offer to contest the election of Hon. Gaston A. Robbins in the face of the result of the recent election?

Well, we confess we will not be surprised if he does contest; for it is well known that he has the cheek of a government mule.

It is also well known that if he does contest, it will be only to get the $2,000 usually allowed contestants. We presume that this is more than Longshore can make at the practice of law in three or four years.

Then there is another thing. He will enjoy the notoriety of contesting for a seat in congress.

The mere fact of having a support in the recent canvass puffed him out equal to the frog in the fable. And sure enough, he like the frog, did "bust."

But if he should go to Washington next spring to file his contest, he will find that he is even a much smaller "pertater" in the presence of congressmen than he has found himself to be in the fourth district.

The capturing of this $2,000 would make Longshore feel just like he had administered on some other man's estate and had gotten more extra commissions.

So let him go on and get his $2,000. He can't do anybody any harm, and will doubtless, never have another opportunity either of running for Congress or getting this much money.—Anniston Hot Blast.

In regard to annexation the Shelby Chronicle says:

In another column will be found a communication signed "Veritas," in which the writer takes exception to what he supposed to be the position of The Chronicle, but inadvertently admits the very point which he seeks to cover up, namely that it is he and not the Chronicle that is troubled with narrow-mindedness regarding the matter in question. While holding out the idea that the entire county would be benefitted by such annexation, his argument is used plainly in behalf of only a small portion of the county. While the Chronicle has not as yet opposed the proposed annexation it will certainly be pardoned for showing the glaring inconsistency of its correspondent, whom it highly esteems. He assigns as a reason that the inhabitants of that portion of Chilton he desires to annex to Shelby do all their trading at Montevallo and Calera, and his line of argument is that on that account the annexation should be made. That is as weak as it is foreign to the real purpose of the movement, and in proof of this assertion we will quote from the last issue of the Journal, a paper in close touch with the annexation project. It says: "We are after getting territory enough in Shelby to constitute a county independent of Columbiana." That declaration lets the cat out of the meal tub and shows plainly that the "chimerical question" is the real object aimed at and not the "welfare of the whole county," as "Veritas" would have us believe.

Now, for the full information of "Veritas," and all other interested parties, we desire to say that it will be time enough to squeal when the Chronicle makes war upon the proposition to annex a portion of Chilton county to Shelby.

But we here state that whenever that "chimerical question" arises the Chronicle will be in the fight. Until then, keep cool, gentleman.

Is it absolutely necessary to have the largest part of a magazine intended for women give up to clothes?

Congressman Cobb.

Hon. W. W. Screws writes an inkpen from Washington concerning our present able representative in Congress:

No member has received more congratulations on account of re-election than Judge Cobb. This is attributable to the personal good will entertained for him and to the gratification of the Democrats over his election after he had been so slandered by Tom Watson. No man's defeat was ever more rejoiced over than the Georgia Third Party's and he will go out of Congress with much fewer friends than when he entered it. The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republic telegraphed that paper:

Cobb of Alabama, whose inquiry of the Speaker in the course of his speech during the last session was distorted into "where am I at," a phrase that is now as popular throughout the country as "what struck Tom Collins" a season or two ago, received the congratulations of his friends on Monday. Mr. Cobb is one of the ablest and most useful members of the House, and the Republicans and Democrats alike congratulate him on his re-election in the face of Watson's calumny.

The correspondent of the New York Times also telegraphed as follows:

Representative Cobb of Alabama, who by the use of a colloquialism not uncommon in the south, became the introducer of the campaign phrase, "where am I at?" and who was held up along with the rest of the House to public criticism, will return to his place as a member, re-elected by 5,000 plurality over an Alliance infant prodigy and a straight Republican. "Tom" Watson the fame seeking Georgian, who scandalized the House to make political capital for himself and party, comes back rebuked with a defeat, his opponent, J. C. Black, having beaten him by more than 5,000. Judge Cobb has borne himself, in all his controversy, like the modest, serious, self-respecting man that he is, and Watson has supplied all the characteristics necessary to afford a striking contrast.

The sworn testimony of the stenographer, who took down the speech of Judge Cobb shows that there has been a general mistake as to the use of the celebrated phrase "Where am I at?" When Watson was investigated by a committee for his charge against the House the stenographer produced his original notes and no such expression was to be found. On the contrary Judge Cobb in a semi-serious way and as a rebuke to those who had so interrupted him turned to the Speaker and is officially reported as asking, "Mr. Speaker, will you please inform me at what point I was in my argument," and from that comes the expression "where am I at." It was a perfectly natural request in view of the persistent interruptions to which he had been subjected.

The Next Vice President.

Vice President Stevenson will visit Anniston Tuesday next, 20th inst. Railroads will give half fare rates. Mr. Stevenson is one of the greatest men of our day. Let every body go to see him who can.

The Calera papers now say that Calera is not especially interested in getting a portion of Chilton attached to Shelby; and that it is the people of a portion of Chilton who are the interested parties and and who are working up the enterprise. We have not canvassed the portion of Chilton referred to and consider this point heresay testimony. Several citizens and property holders of that section have taken pains to inform us that they do not desire to go into Shelby and that they do not think the majority of the people of that section do. We have seen no petition favoring it, but have seen one opposing it and that is the extent of our knowledge on the subject. The Calera Journal made a state statement that the VIEW and the Shelby Chronicle took particular pains "to look after the welfare of Calera." We mistook this for sarcasm but the Journal brother denies that it was so intended; and if he will furnish proof as to how and when the VIEW has been "looking after the welfare of Calera" we will admit that it was not sarcasm but the simple truth; notwithstanding the fact that we have endeavored to confine our work to looking after the welfare of Chilton county. Upon further investigation Bro. Gist will learn that the question must be settled by the people or by the Legislature; and not by the press of Clanton and Calera.

A precinct election to select a postmaster is being suggested in some sections. The election to be confined to Cleveland Democrats. Such a plan relieves the Democratic committee and the Congressman of a critical responsibility and might be the thing for this part of the country.

They Make Things Hum.

The Selma Times-Mail that was, now comes to us with the old familiar heading, "The Morning Times." It makes us think of the old days when Frank Glass owned the paper and use to make it hum.—Age-Herald.

The Editor of the Age-Herald is too modest to state that he was on the Times during much of that period, and did his share of the humming. Mr. Cory was the Nestor of Selma journalism then, though much less than one score and ten. Another co-worker of those days, Hon. Gaston A. Robbins, formerly journalism, and has been going steadily down hill ever since until at last he has landed in congress. Thos. H. Clark and Frances R. Lloyd were also on that old staff at different times, but they haven't done any more than to break into the present State Assembly. Still another Times man, Lucien Julian Walker, helped make Mr. Cleveland's administration a success by holding up its dignity abroad, but he has since, reformed and is a hard working man. That old Times staff somehow seems to have made things hum whichever way they have turned.—Advertiser.

Chilton was not among the counties reported as excluded from the bill which passed the house on the 5th inst., prohibiting Judges of Probate from issuing license to retail liquor unless the applicant's petition is signed by a majority of the householders and freeholders of the city, town or precinct.

People who have tried it, say that there is no better medicine for dyspepsia than Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It may not give one the stomach of an ostrich, but it so strengthens the alimentary organs that digestion of ordinary food becomes easy and natural.

Remember as the VIEW is trying to make a living here it is entitled to your job printing. To send your job printing away from home and then expect the paper to serve you on any and all occasions is not reasonable and will not work very well. We notice this kind of complaint in many of our exchanges and have concluded that we might as well be fashion and make it too.

Given all the comforts and many of the luxuries of life, how many people are discontented solely from the habit of comparing their lot with those of more fortunate acquaintances! They do not specially object to walking—they like the exercise—but, whenever their next-door neighbor's carriage dashes by them, they grow suddenly tired about the knees and feel a weakness in the back with which pedestrianism does not agree. Woolen gowns would be perfectly comfortable if silk ones never rustled in front of them. John Smith's brick house is better than he ever expected to own, and he would be content enough with it if Tom Jones who went to school with him when he was a boy, had not moved into a stone-fronted mansion with handsome portico.—Exchange.

The pressure of the times is worse on the newspaper fraternity of this, and, perhaps, other southern states than upon any other business. During the campaign the local county papers held up faithfully under the pressure until they won the people's victory, now many of them are seeking ways and means of retrenchment, and are economizing expenses. They are forced to this alternative or suspend. Never in the history of the State's journalism have the country papers experienced such hardships. Cotton is now up, and this will help the farmers and and other business. But the only way the home paper can be benefitted by the beginning of a revival of business is for those who are indebted to it to come forward, and and pay up what they owe it.—Ashville Ægis.

Few Words and to the Point.

Children in Sparta were allowed to say very little so that when they spoke it was sensibly and to the point. In connection with this it is said that an Athenian once laughed at the short words the Spartans used, and said that the jugglers on the stage had no difficulty in swallowing them; whereupon Agis, the king of Sparta, replied: "We find them long enough to reach our enemies with." And adds the old historian as their swords were short and sharp, so, it seems to me, were their sayings. In connection with this brevity of speech it was asked of King Charilaus, the nephew of Lycurgus, why his uncle had so few laws. "Men of few words require but few laws," answered the king briefly. Archidemus being asked how many Spartans there were, replied, also to the point: "Enough, sir, to keep out wicked men."

Feeble and capricious appetites are best regulated by the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. They do not debilitate by excessive stimulation; but cause the stomach, liver and bowels to perform their functions properly. As an after dinner pill they are unequaled.

Welchville Locals.

The children have begun to talk about Christmas and Santa Claus.

Mrs. L. D. Brooks, of Atlanta, is visiting relatives here.

Ex-Governor Jackson, of Maryland, was in Welchville last week.

A quilt made by the ladies of this place and vicinity was sold for the benefit of Rev. Perry at G. W. Reed's last Friday night. The handsome Mr. Stutt's, of Plantersville, purchased it. A bouquet was also sold in honor of the prettiest young lady present. The beautiful and accomplished Miss Annie McGuire received the bouquet. The net proceeds of both about $15.

E. E. Jackson Lumber Co., of M. D., purchased of Welch & Bro. about 60,000,000 feet of timber. The mill is now operated by the purchasers to manufacture the timber. They are erecting four dry kilns and will soon erect a large band saw mill and make other improvements. The mill will be first class. Capacity, about 30,000 feet of lumber per day. The superintendents are nice gentlemen.

Jemison Jottings.

As there was a general dearth of social, political and general topics to occupy part of the space ringyard for the past week, we will give your readers a few quiet statements concerning our town. It is natural for persons occasionally to take a retrospective view of their surroundings.

Jemison is a small town, noted for the generosity and hospitality of its citizens. In taking a casual census of its population, two remarkable facts have been developed. First, there is no town in Alabama with double its population, that can boast of so many intelligent and beautiful young ladies. Second, there are eighteen widows within the limits of our town. This last fact may lead many to think that the climate here is entirely unsuited to the growth and development of husband's yet there are several husband's here who are alive and apparently happy.

A few weeks ago one of our handsome men fell a victim to the charms of a widow and was snatched by the hand of Cupid from that opulent and honorable order known as bachelors. And was forever bound in the bonds of matrimony. This event naturally aroused the jealousy of the young ladies against that large class of our citizens known as widows. They held a meeting in order to decide what action they ought to take to prevent any further innovation by the widows upon what they justly deem their rights. On looking over the census of the different States, it was discovered that Texas has a larger number of widowers in proportion to population than any other State in the Union. It was therefore agreed to open a correspondence with the matrimonial bureau of that State, and thereby engage and ship a car load of widows to the Lone Star state and get in return a car load of young men from Texas. This scheme was to be kept a profound secret, but as a woman cannot keep a secret, the plans adopted by the meeting leaked out. And it came to pass when the young men of the town heard the sound of the going of the widows in the tops of the Mulberry trees, they bestirred themselves, and came together and organized a string band, and now the midnight slumberer is awaked from his fitful dreams by the strains of sweet music made by these young men who are often out serenading the widows, hoping to so charm them as to prevent the double catastrophe of suddenly losing them and having a car load of unsophisticated Texas cow boys dumped into our town in their stead.

Mr. W. W. Compton and family left here last week and will make their future home in Texas.

Mr. W. M. Alexander, foreman of Hand's planing mill was caught in the shafting Saturday and narrowly escaped death.

Rev. C. W. O'Hara, the pastor of the Baptist Church, filled his appointment here Sunday.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

A GENERAL REVIEW OF THE NATION'S AFFAIRS.

Words of Commendation for all Branches of the Administration.

A Condensation of the Most Important Features of the Message.

President Harrison submitted his annual message to congress Tuesday. Following is an interesting condensation of the most important points embraced in the document:

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 6.—The president's message, embracing over fifteen thousand words, was read to both branches of congress today.

The following is an interesting and intelligent condensation of the points of interest embraced in the message:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

In submitting my annual message to congress I have great satisfaction in being able to say that the general conditions affecting the commercial and industrial interests of the United States are in the greatest degree favorable. A comparison of the most favored period in the history of the country will, I believe, show that so high a degree of prosperity, and so general a difference of the comforts of life were never before enjoyed by our people.

OUR TOTAL WEALTH.

The total wealth of the country in 1880 was $16,180,616,065; in 1890 it amounted to $65,616,-060,000, an increase of 307 per cent. The total mileage of railways in the United States in 1880 was 93,826; in 1890 it was 167,741; an increase of 448 per cent; and it is estimated that there will be about four thousand miles of track added by the close of the year 1892. The official returns of the eleventh census and those of the tenth census for 76 leading cities furnish the basis for the following comparisons:

TEN CAPITAL INVESTED.

In 1880 the capital invested in manufacturing was $1,232,339,670. In 1890 the capital invested in manufacturing was $2,900,735,284. In 1880 the number of employees was 1,301,393. In 1890 the number of employees was 2,251,134. In 1880 the wages earned were $501,905,778. In 1890 the wages earned were $1,231,179,454. In 1880 the value of the product was $3,171,579,889. In 1890 the value of the product was $4,860,206,527.

The message goes into every detail showing the increase in the number of wage earners and the money paid. It also shows the increase in the number of factories of all kinds that have been built.

NEW COTTON MILLS.

Of the cotton mills the president says: Of the forty cotton mills, twenty-one have been built in the southern states. Mr. A. B. Shepperson, of the New York cotton exchange, estimates the number of working spindles in the United States, on September 1, 1892, at 15,200,000, an increase of 600,000 over the year 1891. The consumption of cotton by American mills, in 1891, was 2,396,000 bales, and in 1892, 2,804,000 bales, an increase of 108,000 bales.

SOME LARGE FIGURES.

The message then goes into figures on new tin and tin plate plants. Message then refers to and gives figures of labor commissioners of New York and Massachusetts. Shows increased production of pig iron, Bessemer ingots and Bessemer steel rails.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

The total value of our foreign trade (export and imports of merchandise) during the last fiscal year was $1,857,400,610, an increase of $128,368,604 over the previous fiscal year.

The value of our exports during the fiscal year 1892 reached the highest figure in the history of the government, amounting to $1,030,-278,148, exceeding by $145,797,388 the exports of 1891, and exceeding the value of the imports by $461,817,538.

The message shows great prosperity of the country, comparing the trade on the Detroit river to show that as much business was done on that river as in Liverpool. Another indication of the prosperity of the country is found in the fact that the number of depositors in savings banks increased from 693,970 in 1880, to 4,258,893 in 1890, an increase of 513 per cent.

PROSPERITY, BUT LOW PRICES.

There never has been a time in our history when work was so abundant or wages were as high; whether measured by the currency in which they are paid or by their power to supply the necessaries and comforts of life. It is true that the market prices of cotton and wheat have been low. It is one of the unfavorable incidents of agriculture that the farmer cannot produce upon orders. He must sow and reap in ignorance of the aggregate production of the year, and is peculiarly thoughtless to the depreciation which follows over-production.

The value of our total farm products has increased from $1,363,646,848 in 1880 to $4,500,000,-000 in 1891, as estimated by statisticians—an increase of 229 per cent.

THIS IN THE BEST COUNTRY.

If any are discontented with their state here; if any believe that wages or prices, the returns for honest toil, are inadequate, they should not fail to remember that there is no other country in the world where the conditions that seem to them hard, would not be accepted as highly prosperous. The English agriculturist would be glad to exchange the returns of his labor for those of the American farmer, and the Manchester workmen their wages for those of their fellows at Fall River. I believe that the protective system, which has now for something more than thirty years controvercially prevailed in our legislation, has been a mighty instrument for the development of our national wealth and a most powerful agency in protecting the homes of our workingmen from the invasion of want. I have felt a most solicitous interest to preserve to our working people rates of wages that would not only give daily bread, but supply a comfortable margin for those home attractions and family comforts and enjoyments without which life is neither hopeful nor sweet. They are American citizens, a part of the great people for whom our constitution and government were framed and instituted and it cannot be a perversion of that constitution to so legislate as to preserve in their homes the comfort, independence, loyalty and sense of interest in the government which are essential to good citizenship in peace, and which will bring this statement through, as in 1861, to the defense on the flag when it is assailed. It is not my purpose to renew here the arguments in favor of a protective tariff.

THE RESULT OF THE ELECTION.

The result of the recent election must be accepted as having introduced a new policy. We must assume that the present tariff, constructed upon the lines of protection, is to be repealed and that there is to be substituted for it a tariff law constructed solely with reference to revenue; that no duty is to be higher because the increase will keep open an American mill or keep up the wages of an American workman, but that in every case such a rate of duty is to be imposed as will bring to the treasury of the United States the largest returns of revenue.

HUST BEFORE THE TARIFF.

The contention has not been between individuals and between principles and it should be offensive to suggest that the prevailing party will not carry into legislation the principles advocated by it, and the pledges given to the people, and the tariff bills passed by the house of representatives were, as I suppose, even in the opinion of their promoters inadequate and justified only by the fact that the senate and the house of representatives were not in accord, and that a general revision could not therefore be undertaken, and I recommended that the whole subject of tariff revision be left to the incoming congress. It is a matter of regret that this work must be delayed for at least three months for the threat of great tariff changes, introduces so much uncertainty that an amount not easily estimated, of business inaction and of diminished production will necessarily result. It is possible also that this uncertainty may result in congressional legislation which, for our own interests will make it unwise to contract for foreign goods in view of the prospect of tariff reductions and the uncertainty as to when they will take effect. Those who have advocated a protective tariff can well afford to have their instructive forecasts of a change of policy disappointed.

AT THE LAST SESSION

The friends of the protective system, with unfaltering confidence in the principles they have advocated will await the result of the new experiment.

The president then enters into a long dissertation as to the probable effect of a change in our tariff system.

ON GOOD TERMS WITH EVERYBODY.

The complicated and threatening differences with Germany and England in relation to Samoan affairs; with England in relation to the seal fishery and in the Behring sea, and with Chili growing out of the Baltimore affair, have been adjusted.

There have been negotiated and concluded under section 3 of the tariff law, commercial agreements relating to reciprocal trade with the following countries: Brazil, Dominican Republic, Spain for Cuba, and Porto Rico, Guatemala, Salvador, the German empire, Great Britain for certain West Indian colonies and British Guiana, Nicaragua, Honduras, and Austria-Hungary.

Of these those with Guatemala, Salvador, the German empire, Great Britain, Nicaragua, Honduras and Austria-Hungary have been concluded since my last annual message.

"The following statistics showing the increase of trade the United States has made with countries having reciprocal agreements, amounting to $74,294,295:

"A treaty providing for the arbitration of the dispute between Great Britain and the United States as to the killing of seals in the Behring sea was concluded on the 29th of February last. This treaty was accompanied by an agreement prohibiting pelagic sealing pending the arbitration, and a vigorous effort was made during the season to drive out all poaching sealers from the Behring sea."

Then follows a statement showing the unsuccessful effort to establish closer trade relations with Canada.

THE TROUBLE WITH CHILI.

"Congress, at the last session, was kept advised of the progress of the serious, and for a time threatening appearances between the United States and Chili. It gives me now great gratification to report that the Chilian government in a most friendly and honorable spirit has tendered and paid as an indemnity to the families of the sailors of the Baltimore who were killed and to those who were injured in the outbreak in the city of Valparaiso the sum of $75,000. This has been accepted, not only as an indemnity for a wrong done but as a most gratifying evidence that the government of Chili rightly appreciates the disposition of this government to act in a spirit of the most absolute fairness and friendliness in our interior with that brave people."

The message speaks of our relations with Hawaii and the importance of the projected sub marine cable.

THE TROUBLE WITH ITALY.

"The friendly act of this government in expressing to the government of Italy its reprobation of abhorence of the lynching of Italian subjects in New Orleans by the payment of 125,000 francs or $24,330.90 was accepted by the king of Italy with every manifestation of gracious appreciation and the incident has been highly promotive of mutual respect and good will.

"The recent disturbances of the public peace by lawless foreign marauders in the Mexican frontier have offered this government an opportunity to testify its good will for Mexico and its earnest purpose to fulfill the obligations of international friendship by pursuing and dispersing the evil doers."

MATTERS OF NOTE.

The message then goes into minor troubles with small principalities, the majority of which have been amicably adjusted. International copyright have been established between this country, Italy and Germany.

The message commends the Nicaragua canal. Matters relating to the present International Monetary Conference are discussed at this point.

The president says: "The free coinage of silver upon an agreed international ratio would greatly promote the interests of our people and equally those of other nations."

THE TREASURY.

Report of the secretary of the treasury here follows. It shows that the public debt has been reduced since March 4, 1889, $260,074,269, and the annual interest charge $11,688,443. There has been paid out in pensions by the present administration to November 1, 1892, $432,564,178, an excess of $114,486,286.09 over sum expended during the period from March 1, 1885 to March 1, 1889. Under the existing tariff law, the message says, $94,000,000 has gone into the pockets of the people which would have otherwise gone into the treasury.

The receipts for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, from all sources were $425,868,20.23, and the expenditures for all purposes were $415,958,,806.86, leaving a balance of $9,914,453.66. There was paid during the year upon the public debt $40,570,107.96.

Our receipts from customs duties fell off $42,000,241.06, while our receipts from internal revenue increased $8,264,823.13, leaving the net loss of revenue from these principal sources $33,724,417.93. The net loss of revenue from all sources was $33,675,972.81.

The revenues, estimated and actual for the first 1 year ending June 30, 1893, are placed by the secretary at $462,236,250.44, and the expenditures $401,236,250.44, showing a surplus of receipts over expenditures of $2,000,000. The cash cash balance in the treasury at the end of the fiscal year, it is estimated, will be $20,982,377.03

These estimates are based upon a continuance of the present laws.

THE ARMY.

The president refers only briefly to the report of the secretary of war, showing the importance of establishing strategic posts and a complete reorganization of the infantry and artillery branches of the service, also the construction of heavy guns and coast defenses.

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.

The president refers briefly to the report of the attorney general, extending to him great praise for his zeal and intelligence displayed in office.

THE POSTMASTER GENERAL.

The president praises very highly the report of the postmaster general.

The postal revenues have increased during the last year nearly $5,000,000. The deficit for the year ending June 30, 1892, is $946,341, less than the deficiency of the preceding year.

There have been added 1,500 new mail routes during the year, with mileage of 33 miles, and total number of miles of mail trips added during the year is nearly seventeen millions.

The President refers very favorably to a law making American ships of commerce flout the American flag and he commended by American citizens.

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

The report of the secretary of the navy exhibits great progress in the construction of our new navy. When the present secretary entered upon his duties only three modern steel vessels were in commission. The vessels since put in commission and to be put in commission during the winter will make a total of nineteen during his administration of the department.

During the current year ten war vessels and three navy tugs have been launched, and during the four years twenty-five vessels will have been launched. Two other large ships and a torpedo boat are under contract, and the work upon them will advance rapidly, and the four monitors are awaiting only the arrival of their armor, which have been unexpectedly delayed or they would have been before this in commission.

The president praises the efficiency of Secretary Tracy and refers with pride to the fact that the United States is once more a "naval power." The adoption of a torpedo and the discovery of smokeless powder has worked wonders in our new navy.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

The work of the interior department is always very burdensome, has been larger than ever before during the administration of Secretary Noble. The disability pension law, the taking of the eleventh census, the opening of certain areas of Indian lands to settlement, the organization of Oklahoma and the negotiations for the session.

Indian lands furnish some of the particulars of the increased work, and the results achieved testify to the ability, fidelity and industry of the head of the department and his efficient assistants.

The president recommends the endorsement of the secretary of the interior to ratify the agreement made with the Cherokees.

ALASKA.

The form of government granted to Alaska on May 17, 1884, for Alaska was in its frame and purpose, temporary.

The increase of population and the development of some important mining and commercial interests make it imperative that the law should be revised, better provisions made for the arrest and punishment of criminals.

The president then refers in terms of praise to the candour of the land office, to the court of general claims and the Indian bureau. The appropriation for subsistence of the Cheyenne and Arrapahoe Indians made at the last session of congress was inadequate.

The pensions for this year (1892) were [illegible]. That amount was appropriated and a deficiency amounting to $10,500,000 must be provided for by congress. The estimate for the year ending June 30th, 1893, will be $[illegible].

The commissioner of pensions believes that if the present legislation and methods are maintained and judging additions to the pension rolls are not made the maximum expenditure for pensions will be reached June 30, 1894, and will be at the highest possible.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD.

In my last annual message I called attention to the fact that some legislative action was necessary in order to protect the interest of the government in its relations with the Union Pacific Railway. The commissioner of railroads has submitted a very full report, giving the exact information up to the date, the facts upon the company's property and its resources.

We must deal with the question as we find it and take that course which will under existing condition best secure the interest of the United States. I recommended in my last annual message, that a commission be appointed to deal with this question and I know that recommendation and suggest that the commissioner be given full power.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE.

The president praises the efficiency of the department of agriculture and gives facts and figures why it should be continued. He then deals at length with quarantine inspections and regulations; says that a liberal appropriation should be made to prevent cholera gaining a foothold in this country next spring.

He also urges restricted immigration, especially for the present.

He refers in terms of praise to the work already done on the World's Fair.

He next deals with matters pertaining to the District of Columbia.

He recommends that congress take continued action for the protection of railway employes in coupling and braking of cars.

The civil service commission asks for an increased appropriation for needed clerical assistance, which he thinks should be given.

OUR ELECTION LAWS.

I have in each of the three annual messages which it has been my duty to submit to congress, called attention to the evils and dangers connected with our election methods and practices as they are related to the choice of officers of the nations' government.

THE FORCE BILL AGAIN.

In my last annual message I endeavored to invoke serious attention to the evils of an unfair apportionments for congress. I cannot close this message without again calling attention to these grave and threatening evils. That hoped that it was possible to secure a non-partisan inquiry by means of a commission into evils, the existence of which is known to all and that out of this might grow legislation from which all thought of partisan advantage should be eliminated and only the higher thought appear of maintaining the freedom and purity of ballot, and the equality of the elector, without the guaranty of which the government could never have been formed, and without the continuance of which it cannot continue to exist in peace and prosperity.

MODEST ELECTIONS.

It is time that mutual charges of unfairness and fraud between the two great parties should cease and that the sincerity of those who profess a desire for pure and honest elections should be brought to the test of their willingness to free our legislation and our election methods from everything that tends to impair the public confidence in the announced result. The necessity for an inquiry and for legislation by congress upon this subject is emphasized by the fact that the tendency of the legislation in some states in recent years has in some important particulars been away from and not toward free and fair elections and equal apportionment.

FREE BALLOT AND FAIR COUNT.

It is now time that we should come together upon the high plane of patriotism while we devise methods that shall secure the right of every man qualified by law to cast a free ballot and give to every such ballot an equal value in theoring our public officers and in directing the policy of the government. Laws is not less such but more, where it usurps the function of the peace officer and of the courts.

THE LYNCHING OF NEGROES.

The frequent lynching of colored people accused of crime is without the excuse which has sometimes been urged by mobs for a failure to pursue the appointed methods for punishment of crime that the accused have an undue influence over courts and juries; such acts are a reproach to the community where they occur and so far as they can be made the subject of jurisdiction the strongest representative legislation is demanded. A public sentiment that will sustain the officers of the law in resisting mobs and in protecting accused persons in their custody should be promoted by every possible means.

The officer who gives his life in the brave discharge of this duty is worthy of special honor. No lesson needs to be so urgently impressed upon our people as this, that no worthy end or cause can be promoted by lawlessness.

HARRISON'S LAST SAY.

This exhibit of the work of the executive department is submitted to congress and to the public in the hope that there will be found in it a due sense of responsibility and an earnest purpose to maintain the national honor and to promote the happiness and prosperity of all our people, and this exhibit of the growth and prosperity of the country will give us a level from which to note the increase or decadence that are legislative policies may bring in us.

There is no reason why the national influence, power and prosperity should not observe the same rates of increase that have characterized the past thirty years. We carry the great impulse and increase of these years into the future.

There is no reason why in many lines of production we should not surpass all other nations as we have already done in some. There are no near frontiers to our possible developments.

Retrogression would be a crime.

BENJAMIN HARRISON,
Executive Mansion.

December 6th, 1892.

THE MONETARY CONFERENCE.

Rothschild's Proposals Withdrawn and Other Plans Presented.

A Brussels cablegram says: The monetary conference Tuesday continued the discussion of the report of the committee which examined the Rothschild proposals. After a speech by Sir C. E. Wilson, a member of the British delegation, Rothschild withdrew his scheme from further consideration of the congress. Before Rothschild withdrew his plan Sir Fremantle, deputy master of the English mint, declared himself ready to support any reasonable measure to solve the silver problem effectively. Sir William Houldo, of the British delegation, a bimetallist, announced that he had prepared a fresh proposal to be presented immediately. There is no doubt that interest in the proceeding is abating, the belief gaining ground that the debates of the conference will have no appreciable value.

OPPOSED TO SUNDAY CLOSING

Of the World's Fair Buildings—Cardinal Gibbons' Letter.

A Chicago special of Friday says: There is a strong, rapid-growing moral and religious sentiment in favor of the repeal of the world's fair Sunday closing act. Several prominent clergymen favor the movement. Mr. Thompson, secretary of the world's fair Sunday opening association, has a letter from Cardinal Gibbons which says:

"The Sunday closing of the gates will be very unfortunate for many thousands of our countrymen who would be tempted to spend the day in dissipation. In their names I would favor opening the fair Sunday afternoons to evening with the provisions that all the machinery should be stopped and all mechanical and laboring work that will not be organily necessary should cease. In this I do not see any desecration of the Sabbath."

Music Hurdon Indicted.

A special says Friday from Tuscaloosa, Miss., says: Minnie Hurdon has been indicted by the grand jury of this county.

TELEGRAPHIC GLEANINGS.

The News of the World Condensed Into Pithy and Pointed Paragraphs.

Interesting and Instructive to All Classes of Readers.

According to a special of Sunday influenza has reappeared at Hamburg. Twenty cases have been reported.

A fire at the corner of Dock and Commercial streets, north St. Louis, at midnight Friday, destroyed several buildings.

Wilson G. Hunt, a wealthy capitalist, of New York died Wednesday, aged eighty years. He was a director in more financial institutions than any other man in this country.

A dispatch of Sunday from Cannes, France, announces the death of Lucien Napoleon Bonaparte Wise, the civil engineer who negotiated the Panama canal concession.

The South Fifteenth street mill of the Oliver Iron and Steel company, at Pittsburg, Pa., closed Friday on only a few hours' notice. The reason assigned is no orders, and the mill overstocked.

A special of Tuesday from Hot Springs, Ark., states that Senator Gibson is slowly but surely sinking, and his relations and friends are calmly waiting the end. He still remains conscious and has given instructions regarding his burial.

A broken tire on the Wagner sleeper Alva, on the New York and Montreal express bound north, threw the cars into a ditch twenty miles south of Burlington, Vt., Wednesday. Of ten passengers in the two coaches, seven were injured; none killed.

A Baltimore special says: The annual congress of the national prison association of the United States adjourned Wednesday to meet in Chicago a year hence. The session has been interesting, though nothing of unusual importance was done.

A Detroit Free Press special dispatch from Saginaw, Mich., says the Michigan Salt company, on Friday, advanced the price of salt ten cents a barrel, the salt being quoted at 65 cents. The company has 300,000 barrels on hand less than at this date one year ago.

A dispatch of Saturday from Ithaca, Mich., says: Another commercial disaster precipitated by the failure of the bank of Church, Bills & Co., is the assignment of the Nelson-Barber Company, for nearly twenty years a concern which has done business under the name of Nelson & Barber.

A new York special of Monday says: It is reliably reported that the United States will interfere with the Cuban scheme to farm out its customs revenues to a French syndicate. The secretary of state has warned the authorities of Havana that the states are strongly opposed thereto.

The congress of the National Prison Association of the United States met at Baltimore Saturday night. Cardinal Gibbons was among the first to enter the hall. He was soon followed by ex-President Hayes and Mayor Latrobe. Mr. Hayes reviewed the work of the society and the growth of crime through immigration. He said immigration as it exists to-day is plainly in the path of progress in America.

A New York special of Wednesday says: In the matter of the Central Railway and Banking Company of Georgia, full conferences having been held between the committees appointed, and the receiver and counsel for both sides, the plan of reorganization of the system has been agreed upon. This plan will make the stocks and securities of greater value than the present quotations, and contemplates putting the road in good physical condition, and the whole system on a sound financial basis.

Meagre reports of a fearful cyclone have been received from Macogoches, Texas. About 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon a terrible storm swept over Eggnogg valley, which is two miles from the city of Macogoches. The wind blew with fearful velocity, carrying everything before it. Huge trees were blown as so much chaff, and houses, barns and fences razed to the ground. As far as heard from but one life has been lost, that of Frank Parlin. It is feard there are more fatalities and casualities to be reported.

One of the most important sales of Washington relics in years occurred at Philadelphia, Tuesday. The relics belonged to the estate of the late J. B. McGuire, of Washington, and included a large proportion of the correspondence between Washington and Madison, notably a letter written to Madison in 1792, containing the outline of the draft of a proposed farewell address, written when Washington entertained the idea of declining renomination for the presidency. It was sold for $1,335 to an agent who declined to state for whom the document was bought.

A Washington special of Friday says: The superintendent of immigration reports that 467,648 immigrants arrived in this country during the last fiscal year, 2,801 of whom came in violation of the law, and were returned to their homes. Sixty thousand Canadians enter the United States every spring and return to their homes every fall to spend their earnings in their country. Our commissioner thinks it might be advisable to extend the fifty cents a head tax to all immigrants coming over our northern and southern borders, wages being here on an average of 40 per cent higher than in in Canada, and 100 per cent higher than in Mexico.

BIG MISSISSPPI FAILURE

In Which the Liabilities Exceed Four Hundred Thousand Dollars.

A Greenville, Miss., special says: The heaviest mercantile failure ever recorded in Yazoo (Miss.) Delta occurred Tuesday when the great wholesale house of L. & N. Wilchinski closed its doors and carried into bankruptcy with it the firm of Wilchinski & Barnes, at Barnes Landing, Wilchinski & Bolman, at Erwin Station, and George Wilchinski, of Greenville, also came into the failure.

The total liabilities will reach nearly $400,000 of which about $300,000 is preferred and secured by selling the extensive stock of goods in their store, with books, notes, etc., for $75,000 and giving deeds of trust on real estate in this section. It is understood that attorneys for the unsecured creditors will attach property, refusing to surrender the sale.

The failure was forced by creditors running circulated two days ago that they had failed, coupled with the fact that they had large investments in land, and about crops and the failure to collect both and unsecured them, and the rumors of failure, destroying their credit, forced the failure.

Beds of Wire.

A few figures may be cited to illustrate how important a part wire plays in our leading industries and manufactures. The output of coal in Great Britain alone, which may be taken at fully 200,-000,000 tons per annum, is mainly raised by the agency of wire ropes. The importance of sending wire may be appreciated from the fact that Great Britain's woolen export trade is worth $97,000,000 per annum. The consumption of wire netting is enormous, and the annual output in America and Europe of the one item of barbed wire for fencing—a comparatively new adaptation—is estimated to exceed 100,000 tons.

The world-wide use of wire for telegraphic and other electrical purposes is too well known to need comment, one company in america owning no fewer than 642,000 miles of their own system. —Chamber's Journal.

The Horse is Useful Even if Dead.

The whale can be put to a great number of uses when dead, as can also the horse, the various parts of which are utilized as follows: Hair of mane and tail for haircloth, stuffing mattresses and making bags for crushing seed in oil mills, etc.; hide and skin tanned for leather for covering tables, etc.; tendons used for glue and gelatin; flesh for food for dogs, poultry and man; fat used for lamps, etc.; intestines used for covering sausages, making gut strings, etc.; heart and tongue for food; hoofs for gelatin, prussiate, fancy snuff boxes, etc.; bones for knife handles, phosphorous, superphosphate of lime and manure; blood for manure and shoes for reuse or for old iron. —Spare Moments.

Both Liked the Change.

Friend—"Given up housekeeping and gone to a hotel, eh? How do you like hotel life?"

McTiff—"First rate. Never was so happy in my life."

"Indeed! And how does your wife like it?"

"First class."

"Where are you staying?"

"I'm at the St. Charles and she's at the St. James."

Tutelary Trees.

Ancient people had their tutelary trees just as they had their tutelary gods—the former being the altars and shrines of the latter. Among the Scandinavians the ash was held to be the most sacred tree. Serpents, according to their belief, dared not approach it. Hence the women left their children with entire confidence under its shade while they went on with their harvesting.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Boiling Macaroni.

An authority says that in boiling macaroni it is fatal to permit it to stop boiling for a moment until done. Have plenty of salted water in the saucepan at the boiling point when the sticks are added, and when they are tender throw in a glass of cold water to stop the cooking suddenly, and drain at once.—New York Times.

Shakespeare Up to Date.

Lobbie—"Shakespeare does not seem to draw very well nowadays."

"Manager—"N-o, but I believe 'As You Like It' could be made to go with a corps de Rosalinds and a genuine hard-glove slugging match in place of that old-fashioned wrestling bout."—New York Weekly.

Drinking Under Difficulties.

Little Boy (in the country)—"Th' water in this spring is awful good."

Mother—"Then I'll take some. Where is the cup?"

Little Boy—"There isn't any cup. You have to lie down an' drink up hill."—Street & Smith's Good News.

Flour Should be Kept Dry.

Do you know that flour should be kept in a cool, dry place? If possible, there should be some kind of a close receptacle for it, and too large a quantity sometimes spoils by being kept too long. It should also be remembered that mites which often get into flour are more destructive than mice.

Disabilities of Sex.

Little Dot—"I wish I was a boy."

Little Dick—"Why?"

Little Dot—"'Cause a girl always feels so wicked w'en she does anything wrong, an' a boy don't. Boys just goes right along an' has a good time."

Three Blessings in One.

A triplet of benefits is comprised in the single word—vigor. This implies good appetite, sound sleep, the power to digest. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters endows an enfeebled system with vigor. It insures digestion, helps nightly repose, and increases zest for the food it enables the system to assimilate. It is potent in malaria, constipation, liver and kidney complaints and rheumatism.

Nothing is Cheap.

There is nothing cheap under the sun. Good woolen is good woolen and has its current rate, and good cotton is good cotton, and good food is good food, and good tables and chairs are good tables and chairs, and in these days of competitive labor and trusts and tariffs known to all, prices vary hardly a hair's worth and nothing but second-hand goods can be bought at a bargain. A piece of silver, with an initial marked upon it, a table which has had one dinner served on its surface is "old stuff" and has almost no market value. It must be fairly given away. Everything else fetches its value, fictitious or otherwise, the value at which it is held by buyer and seller.

And if one thing is undersold to catch business, another is oversold to offset it, and you must get up very early in the morning indeed and be a very old, old shopper to know which you are purchasing. A great mark-down sale is also a mark up sale unless indeed a fire or a bankruptcy has precipitated matters. And even then real bargains are rare.—Chicago Post.

Obliterated Inscriptions on Coins.

In answer to an inquiry as to how totally obliterated inscriptions on coins can be made legible, a collector suggests the adoption of the practice of the English mint for the discovery of genuine coins when silver is called in. The coin is placed on red hot iron, an ordinary poker being often used for the purpose. The parts where the letters of the inscription had existed oxidate at a different rate from the surrounding parts, so that the letters exhibit their shape and become legible in consequence of the film of oxide which covers them having a different thickness, and, therefore, reflecting a different color from that of the adjacent parts.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

IN THE HALLS OF CONGRESS

Daily Routine of Business Transacted in the Interest of the People.

Upon Speaker Crisp's entering the house, Monday morning, there were most unusual scenes. The democrats arose and cheered him vociferously, and the republicans joined in. The speaker rapped for order, but the house refused to come to order and continued cheering for some time. It was an evident reassurance of confidence to offset the intentional or supposed slight given him Saturday night in New York, by the reform club's failure to invite him to speak at their banquet. The prevalent opinion is that the speaker's name was intentionally omitted from the list of orators and that the club meant to discount his position as an advocate of tariff reform, thereby strengthening the opposition to his re-election.

The attendance in the house Tuesday morning was small, owing in a great measure to the inclemency of the weather. The house adopted a resolution directing the committee on ways and means to inquire into and report upon the present condition of the treasury and the probable future revenues under the existing law.

Mr. Cobb, of Missouri, from the committee on war claims, reported favorably to the house Wednesday the bill introduced by Mr. Ferrall, of Virginia, appropriating $217,236 for the relief of the heirs of the late Mrs. Mary Ann Randolph Curtis Lee, of Fairfax county, Va. The claim was referred to the court of claims for a finding of fact under the "Bowman act" and was returned to the committee. The court found that wood valued at $217,236 had been taken from the Lee estate during the war by Colonel Greene, chief quartermaster of the department of Washington.

The house, Thursday, agreed to a resolution for a holiday recess from Thursday before Christmas until Wednesday after New Years, and then proceeded to apportion the days before recess among its various committees. Saturday was given to the consideration of the Florida claims bill; Monday, suspension day, was not accorded any privilege; Tuesday was given to the committee on public lands; Wednesday, to the committee on commerce. The measures called up by the committee on Indian affairs consumed the remainder of the day. Then the house adjourned until Saturday.

THE SENATE.

The anti-option bill was laid before the senate Monday but was informally laid aside to allow discussion on the Indian Territory resolution to be continued. Senators Irby (F. A., S. C.) and Warren (Rep., Wyoming,) were in their seats for the first time this session.

In the senate, Tuesday, certificates of the electors were presented from Texas, North Carolina, Alabama, Illinois and Maine. Mr. Daniel, of Virginia, offered a resolution calling on the civil service commissioners for a succinct statement of the government positions that are inside and outside of the civil service rules, the methods of application and examination, the quota of each state filled and vacant, and what positions are open to appointment outside of the civil service rules—the purpose being to procure in a compact form information for the use of those desiring to enter the government service. The resolution went over without action. Mr. Vest's joint resolution for a commission to make an agreement with the five civilized tribes of the Indian Territory for taking lands in severalty was taken up and several speeches were made. The senate at noon resumed consideration of the anti-option bill, Mr. George addressing the senate in favor of his subtreasury measure.

The famous McGarrahan claim occupied the attention of the senate till 2 o'clock, Wednesday when it went over till Thursday. The question was, whether the bill passed last session, referring the matter to the court of private land claims, should pass over the president's veto. The remainder of the session was occupied by the anti-option bill. Mr. George, of Mississippi, spoke until adjournment. He denounced business on the New York cotton exchange, as "unhallowed traffic" and its sales of cotton as "sales of phantom bales."

In the senate, Thursday, Mr. George finished his speech on the anti-option bill. Mr. Washburn made an ineffectual effort to have the time fixed for taking the vote next week. The certificates of election of presidential elector in Delaware were presented. Several petitions were presented against the anti-option bill, including one from the New York merchants' exchange. The McGarrahan bill was taken up at 12:45, and Mr. Huston resumed his argument in favor of the passage of the bill over the veto. After a short executive session the senate adjourned until Monday.

NOTES.

The president, Wednesday, presented Christmas gifts to a number of people in the shape of pardons.

Senator Stewart has introduced an amendment providing absolute free coinage to Senator Hills silver bill.

The ways and means committee now have a big job on their hands in investigating the exact condition of the treasury.

The president, on Monday, appointed Charles C. Coles to be associate justice of the supreme court of the District of Columbia.

Postmaster General Wanamaker, on Wednesday, approved the selected color of the international return postal card. It is a bluish gray and the cards are the same size as the domestic card.

Amos Cummings has introduced a resolution demanding investigation of the mailing service, with Mr. Wanamaker as chief witness. It alleges that laws were wantonly violated in sending republican literature below its legitimate rate.

The senate has confirmed the nominations of Person C. Cheney, of New Hampshire, to be minister of Switzerland; Charles C. Clarke, of Virginia, United States marshal of the eastern district of Virginia; Thomas J. Flanner, of Louisiana, to be receiver of public moneys at Natchitoches.

The Senate committee on foreign relations, Wednesday, further considered the bill by the terms of which the United States guarantees the payment of the interest on $100,000,000 in bonds to be issued by the Nicaragua Canal Company. Some slight changes, suggested by Chairman Sherman, were agreed to.

Mr. Bulloch, of Florida, introduced in the house Tuesday a resolution requesting the secretary of war to ascertain and report to the house the present actual condition of harbor improvement at Cumberland Sound, Fla., and the entrance to Port Fe nandina and whether necessity exists for any immediate legislation regarding these points.

The republican senators' caucus met again Thursday morning and further discussed the program in regard to the prospective senatorial contests in the western states. A resolution was adopted authorizing the chairman, Senator Sherman, to appoint a committee of five senators to take into consideration the wisdom and propriety of senatorial interference in these contests.

The news of the death of Senator Gibson was not received in Washington until Thursday evening. A meeting of the Louisianna delegation in congress will be held to make arrangements for attending the funeral, which, it is supposed, will be held in New Orleans. The committee to represent congress on the occasion will be named by Vice President Morton and Speaker Crisp, and they will go under an escort of the deputy sergeant-at-arms of the senate.

Every member of the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce was present at Wednesday morning's session to listen to the arguments of the railway magnates in favor of the amendments introduced by Senator Cullom to the Inter-State Commerce act. President Roberts, of the Pennsylvania, and Depew, of the New York Central, addressed the committee. Mr. Roberts said the inter-state law was being violated every day by the shippers and manufacturers. Mr. Depew said there was a general misapprehension in the public mind on the subject of the relations of railway companies to one another on the subject of rates and competition, and stated that the profits of the New York Central were not now as great as when he entered the service. The certificate of the presidential electors for Florida was presented.

The Mafia Again.

A New Orleans dispatch says: Stephen Arato was found near the Convent station, in St. James parish Friday night, desperately wounded. He detailed a story of how he, with two companions, were inveigled from the French market by four men, who stabbed to death his friends and left him for dead at Convent. The bodies of his companions which were found verified Arato's story. The authorities are certain the crime was the work of the Mafia Society.

Senator Gibson Improving.

A special of Friday from Hot Springs, Ark., says: Senator Gibson's condition is considerably improved. The attending physicians say there is hope of his recovery unless a change for the worse comes within the next forty-eight hours. He partakes freely of nourishment and seems to be gaining strength. His relatives and friends are now hopeful of his recovery.

The receipts at the horse show in New York City were $174,000 and the expenses but $73,000, thus leaving a profit of $101,000.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

An Interesting Talk of Old Times on the Farm.

He Says the Cotton Outlook is Better Since the Presidential Election.

Our cotton buyers say that 90 per cent of the crop in this country has been sold, and it has averaged 8 1-2 cents a pound. That does pretty well. I said in a former letter that the great staple went up 2 cents just as soon as Cleveland was elected. Several men and one woman have taken offense at this and write me rather malignantly about the sin of deception, and the good woman says that she had always esteemed me to be a gentleman and a Christian until now. She says that unless I am an idiot I must know that it was the short crop that made the price advance.

Well that is so. I take it all back. I was just jubilating. That's all. Her party jubilated so much before the election that we couldn't keep from crowing a little afterwards. It did us so much good. I am just as sorry for my republican friends as the circumstances will admit of, especially the women, and I remember them in my prayers and hope they may receive an abundance of resignation and take comfort in that scripture which says "The Lord loveth whom he chasteneth." Let us rejoice with those who rejoice and weep with those who weep. Sometimes the good things we haven't got are more comforting than those we have. It is better like our preacher who had to get up away in the night and nurse his little collicky boy for two long hours, and when at last he had sobbed himself to sleep the fond father patted him gently and whispered "you dear little suffering darling! Papa wouldn't take a million dollars for you, no he wouldn't—but he wouldn't give a nickel for another."

Eight cents is a fair price for cotton in Texas—just as fair as 9 cents is here in Georgia. It is a pity that the price couldn't be regulated by the cost of production and let every man make 50 per cent. Some farmers right here in Barrow county swear they can't make it for less than 8 cents, but I was talking to Mr. Shedaker who is a small farmer near our town and always has a little money to lend. He made nine and a half bales on ten acres this year and did it with hired labor, for he has no children and he says he keeps a strict account of every cent and knows exactly what he is doing and that the crop cost him 4 1-2 cents a pound. He sold it for 9 1-2 and he is satisfied. He has something to sell all the year around—some corn, or hay, or a cow, or some potatoes. He came here poor and has improved his little farm and built a new house out of the profits of farming. He envies nobody, troubles nobody, and is a good citizen.

Another farmer who sold a few bales at 9 cents told Mr. Milam that he didn't know what it cost him for his little chaps chopped it out and picked the most of it, and if they hadn't done that they wouldn't have done anything else. Counting fair wages for the children he said he reckoned his cotton cost him about 8 cents, but not counting the children it cost about 3 cents.

A sorry farmer on a sorry farm is a very sorry spectacle, and if it wasn't for his wife he would perish, but somehow, in the dispensation of providence, most every no-account, or unlucky man is tied onto a bustling, hustling woman who never surrenders and manages somehow to maintain the family. This is not fancy, but it is a fact that the more trifling or unlucky the man the more diligent is the woman. From time to time I had various tenants when I was farming and I noticed that the most indifferent men had the smartest women tied onto them.

Farming with diligence and good management is the best business I know of, and I am glad to say our farmers are improving in their methods and their industry. I heard an observing farmer say today that, as a class, they were 25 per cent better off in this country than they were three years ago. They are generally out of debt and own good stock and good implements. If a healthy man with a healthy wife has a good little farm that is paid for he has as good a chance for happiness and success as anybody. I shall never cease to cherish the memory of my farming life. And now when the children gather around the fireside they love to recall and relate the trials and tribulations, the pleasures and delights of the ten years they lived upon the farm. They worked hard and made good crops and mixed a little sport with their labors and kept everything lively and cheerful. Almost every night we had music and neighbors would drop in to enjoy it. I listened to them last night as they alternated with each other in refreshing memories.

"Don't you remember when Old Bess kicked me over backwards and put her foot square down in the milk bucket?" "Yes, and you mauled her with the hoe handle and broke it, and you used to make me sit upon the fence while you were milking and hold Old Bess' tail to keep her from switching you in the face with it, and the way you pulled the milk from her with both hands was a sight. She was a cow, she was. Do you reckon you could milk one now or have you lost the lick since you've got stuck up so fine in New York?"

"And don't you remember when old Meg fell on that stob and made a hole in her breast that you could hide a rabbit in?"

"Yes, and didn't I ram my hand in it and wash it out with lye soap and turpentine and then sew it up with a bagging needle and she got well and that was my first experience in surgery, and right there papa said he was going to make a doctor out of me."

"And don't you remember when I gave Mr. Jenkins three merino sheep for that old long-horned goat and how he hitched the breath out of me the first day and papa got mad and sent him back to Jenkins?"

"And what fun we used to have with Old Pete, the merino ram, and how we trained him to butt and nobody dared to get in forty yards of him, and one day papa was going along on his dignity, like he thought Old Pete wouldn't dare to interfere with him, and he does he knew it Old Pete was after him and I never saw a man run like papa did—you could have played marbles on his coat tail."

"And don't you remember when Ralph fell out of the top of that tall persimmon tree in the meadow and we all took him up for dead and carried him to the house and thumped and filled him out of his mouth?"

"Yes, and I rode Wally five miles to town to get the family physician after they thought he hadn't been the best man to ride a mule, he have killed her. And don't you remember how Molly used to stall when she took a notion and one morning when I had on a load of clover down in the low-grounds she took a notion and after I had begged her and whipped her and worked with her for an hour I unhitched Old Queen and rode her home and left Molly there hitched to the wagon all day long without food or water, and late in the evening I went back with Queen and hitched her alongside and got up on the wagon and said, 'Get along Molly,' and she started right away and pulled every pound all the way home and Queen could hardly keep up with her. That's the best way to break up a stalling horse that ever I tried, and it lasts, for Molly never did stall again.

"And don't you remember how the Guyton hogs used to raise up our water gaps and get in the corn field, and how Nabor Freeman said if we would catch a hog and mash his tail between two rocks he never would come back anymore, and we tried it. We caught them with the dogs every day they came and there was barely a hog in the neighborhood that didn't have a broken tail, but it didn't break them of breaking into our fields and the Guytons threatened to law us, but they didn't. And papa bought a big Poland China sow from Mr. Keever and she ate up fifteen or twenty chickens the first day we got her, and when papa asked him why he didn't tell him she was a chicken eater, he laughed and said he thought we would find it out soon enough. And don't you remember when Paul was taking his first lessons in plowing in the field over the creek, he couldn't keep his mule in the furrow, but the mule would step aside to bite every bunch of grass, and Paul got mad and used cursory language for the first time in his life, and when the horn blowed for dinner that mule didn't wait for the end of the row, but just turned square round and made for home, dragging the plow and Paul, too, and he got so mad he turned her loose and ran to a sassafras bush and tore it all to pieces for switches and revenge.

"Then the girls took it up and talked about their frolics over the fields and in the meadow and going to the mill and to school and getting black haws and maypops, and how we raised popcorn and goobers by the bushel, and hauled up walnuts from the low ground by the wagon load, and how they used to ride on top of the hay from the clover field, and what a big time we used to have getting mistletoe and evergreens for Christmas, and how Victor got on top of the house one Christmas night when the house was full of children waiting for Santa Claus, and he tooted his horn and raised a racket and all the little chaps thought the old fellow had come sure enough, and they love to think so yet. Yes, and how I dammed up the branch in the willows and made them a washhole and a springboard, and what glorious fun it was, and nobody to molest or make them afraid."

"Yes," said their mother, "you children did have a good time and a hard time, too, and it is a wonder that you are all alive today, for you had some terrible accidents, and not a doctor nearer than four or five miles. When that brick fell from the top of the chimney and laid Carl's head open, I never expected him to live until the doctor got there, and there was some fast riding done that time, too, for Dr. Griffin at Cass Station. You were all very fortunate with your mishaps, but I was all the time under apprehensions, and I never want to live again so far from a doctor. You may all praise the country, but I will take the town every time."

BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

SENATOR GIBSON DIES.

A Man Prominent in the Affairs of the State of Louisiana.

After a lingering but apparently painless illness, Senator R. L. Gibson died at Hot Springs, Ark., Thursday afternoon. At the time of his death he was surrounded by members of the family and a number of close friends, who wept bitterly when it was seen that the noble-hearted man was dead. Senator Gibson passed away as though he had merely gone to sleep. There was no struggle, no suffering. He had been confined to his bed since the 12th of November, since which time his death has been expected daily. In accordance with his wishes, the remains will be buried in Lexington, Ky., beside his wife, who died some years ago.

Randall Lee Gibson, of New Orleans, was born September 10, 1832, at Spring Hill, near Versailles, Woodford county, Kentucky; was educated in Lexington, Ky.; in Terre Bonne Parish, Louisana; at Yale college; in the law department of the Tulane university of Louisana; declined the secretaryship of legation of Spain in 1865; was aid to the governor of Louisiana at the commencement of the civil war, and commanded a company, regiment, brigade, and division in the confederate army; was president of the board of administrators of the Tulane university of Louisana, was one of the administrators of the Howard memorial library in New Orleans; was one of the trustees of the Peabody educational fund; a regent of the Smithsonian institution; a lawyer and planter; was elected to the forty-third congress from the second congressional district, but was denied admission; was a representative in the fourty-fourth, forty-fifth, forty-sixth and forty-seventh congresses, and was elected to the United States senate without opposition as a democrat, and took his seat March 4, 1883, and was re-elected in 1889. His term of service would have expired March 3, 1895.

Decrease of French Imports.

A Paris cablegram of Thursday says: Returns issued by the French board of trade shows that during November the imports decreased 6,000,000 francs and exports increased 10,000,000 francs, as compared with November, 1891. Imports and exports for the corresponding months last year

TELEGRAPHERS WALK OUT.

A Strike on the Central of Georgia Inaugurated.

About two hundred and fifty employes of the Central railroad belonging to the Order of Railway Telegraphers quit their keys shortly after 2 o'clock Monday afternoon in accordance with telegraphic orders sent out from Savannah, Ga., Deputy Grand Chief Tobey and the special committee of employes represent the strikers in every branch of the system in the three states of Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama.

The strike is the result of a fruitless effort on the part of the operators to obtain a slight increase in their pay and to have their order recognized by the Central railroad.

About two weeks ago committees were appointed by the Order of Railway Telegraphers to confer with the managers of the different lines in the south. At these conferences an increase of wages was asked, and the roads were requested to make a contract with the telegraphers' order. The pay asked for by operators would have increased their wages from $5 to $10 per month. They also wanted extra pay for over twelve hours' work each day. The time of train despatchers was to be eight hours per day.

The committee succeeded in meeting all but the officials of the Central road, who declined to meet them in any conference.

All other lines refused their demands. The committee waited in Savannah and made several efforts to see the officials of the Central, but they failed to do so.

Saturday they addressed a note to General Superintendent Wadley, giving him until two o'clock Monday to accede to their demands. At the same time a notice of this action was sent to all operators on the line, and they were instructed to hold themselves in readiness to quit the service of the company.

At two o'clock Monday General Superintendent Wadley had not replied to the note sent him and an order was telegraphed to all operators instructing them to go out. They immediately complied with the instructions.

About 175 of the strikers are stated to be station agents, in addition to the telegraphers, and it is at their points that the strikers believe the most injury will be inflicted to the business of the road. The committee maintain that it will be impossible for the road to get competent men to handle its business and the officials of the railroad are equally as emphatic in their statement that they can do so, and will soon have all vacancies filled. The committee says the telegraphers will stand together firmly and are apparently confident that they will be able to secure a settlement of their grievances in a few days.

There are nearly three hundred operators on the Central system, over 90 per cent of whom are in the telegraphers' organization. Two-thirds of the men are agents and operators combined. The train dispatchers are in the order. Telegrams received from headquarters of each division show that the men have walked out. Agents have been instructed to handle no business whatever, except to deliver freights on hand.

WADLEY EXPECTED IT.

Superintendent Wadley had little to say beyond that knowing that there would be a strike he had gone ahead and prepared for it by arranging to run trains by schedule. He held that the strike would affect the business of the road very little and that the places of the strikers would be filled rapidly.

Our Income and Expenditure.

A Washington special of Wednesday says: The secretary of the treasury's report estimates the revenues for the present fiscal year at $462,826,256, and the expenditures, at the same per cent, at $461,326,256. The secretary estimates that the total amount available at the close of the present year is over $151,000,000.

Blaine "Much Better."

A Washington special says: Dr. W. Johnson, Mr. Blaine's physician, states the story that Blaine is dying is untrue. He passed a comfortable night and rested well, and Tuesday morning appeared much better.

CITY OF MEXICO.

Unique Street Scenes in the Mexican Metropolis.

By day the town of Mexico presents a very unique appearance, for, from whatever point of view chosen, the avenues are shut in by the serrated mountains surrounding the whole valley.

The straight wide streets, running in parallel lines from north to south and from east to west, make it look modern enough, but, for all that, the old white-washed houses, the only architectural beauties of which are the numerous windows with projecting balconies, give the whole place a superannuated appearance. These houses are always built in four blocks, with one or two patios, or spacious court-yards. On two sides of this patio there is generally a narrow veranda or some projecting masonary, which serves as a protection from the rain, and enables the occupant to reach dry-shod the wide staircase with high stone steps leading to the upper rooms. These rooms, which are mostly paved with tiles instead of planks, open on to a gallery running around the court, with a balustrade at a convenient height for leaning against, which balustrade is decked with numerous pots of flowers and shrubs. The first story alone is used to live in, the ground-floor being occupied by shops, magazines, or stables. The better houses are built of freestone, whilst the poor tenements consist of a material known as amygdaloid, which is a variety of porous trap or basaltic rock of a reddish color, the blocks being bound together with cement or sand. Some buildings have walls of great thickness, three feet or more.

The foundations of most of the houses being laid in water or in marshy flats, they have no cellars, and are really great cubes of masonry kept in place by their own weight.

From the first thing in the morning the streets are full of traffic; richly dressed horsemen, hired carriages, noisy carts with unoiled wheels, drawn by four, six, or eight mules, troops of donkeys and mules loaded with all manner of packages, jostle each other in the roadway. Water-carriers, or aguadors, completely clad in leather, and wearing a kind of jockey cap also of leather, besiege the public fountains, carrying two huge amphoræ, kept in place by straps, which cross on the head over a palm-leaf cap with leather visor.

Indian men and women pass to and fro screaming out in ear-splitting tones the names of what they have to sell, fruits, vegetables, chickens, etc., carrying everything on their backs in wicker-work baskets, fastened on to their shoulders like soldiers' knapsacks, but supported by a leather thong passed across the forehead beneath the broad-brimmed straw sombreros, or worn just under the arms across the chest.

Street boys follow the passers-by, breathlessly shouting out the names of the daily papers and the numbers of the last tickets of the Loteria Nacional, or National Lottery. You pause an instant, you give a silver coin—horror of horrors, you have been noticed, and you are immediately surrounded by twenty beggars of all ages, followed by dozens of mangy yellow dogs, which appear from every side, and in piteous tones you are implored, "For the sake of Jesus, Joseph, and Mary, senor, give a dole, a little dole. Oh, dear little friend [amiguito], God and your sweetheart will reward you!"—[Harper's Weekly.

A Knife in His Skull.

An extraordinary discovery was made at an autopsy held a few days ago at Newark, N. J., on the body of a man who died from the effects of a bullet wound in the head. The operating physician found in the right side of the subject's head a piece of a knife blade about an inch long that had evidently been plunged into the skull a long time ago. It protruded into the brain, passing through the covering of the brain more than half an inch. There was no abscess or inflammation, and the steel was even with and barely noticeable on the outer side of the skull. A small, dark, triangular spot was visible after the scalp was removed. On the inner side the steel had corroded and was in general appearance much like a piece of wire, nearly round, but when the point was touched the corrosion fell off and the point of the blade was unmistakable. It had not entered through a suture and was directly transverse. On account of the absence of inflammation and the degree of corrosion it is supposed it lodged there many years ago, perhaps when Dody was a child, when the skull was more elastic. The knife blade was not an expert's feature from the outset probably caused, and was nothing of the sort we know made of the knife.—[Chicago Tribune.

ALABAMA LEGISLATURE.

What Our Law Makers are Doing in the Interest of the People.

Proceedings of the Body from Day to Day Briefly Summarized.

TWENTIETH DAY.

It was bill day in the senate, with the exception of the resolution of the free pass bill, which passed the day before excepting several state officials and its reference to the judiciary committee for perfection to make its provisions conform to the constitution, there was very little of general interest done that body. A joint resolution was adopted raising a committee to take into consideration the subject of re-arranging the judicial circuits. Quite a number of bills of a local character were passed. In the house Mr. Ward, of Henry, introduced a resolution of some length to urge the passage in the United States senate of the Hatch anti-option bill or some similar bill, which shall speedily and effectually abolish the future system. The bill was referred to the committee on rules. Among the bills which passed the house was one to authorize Jefferson county to issue bonds to the amount of $10,000 for the purpose of making an exhibit at the Worlds fair. Here's a bill that, if passed, will affect the newspapers of the state very materially. It was offered by Mr. Cox of Bullock, and provides that after the passage and approval of the measure it shall be unlawful for any person or newspaper to publish comments on evidence adduced in criminal trials in the state, or to publish discussions on the character of evidence adduced before the conclusion of the case on trial. A violation of these provisions will be treated as a misdemeanor and will be punished on conviction not less than $5 or more than $50.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

It was another bill day in the senate and the proceedings are devoid of general interest. There was a bill to extend the term of state officials from two to four years, but it did not meet with general favor and went over without action. Another bill definite the time for the beginning of the term the state officers was passed. There was also a large number of local bills passed. acceptance of the invitation extended resolution Thursday, Hon. Edward J. Phelps of Vermont, visited the house today. It was about 4 o'clock when he entered under escort of Hons. F. S. Ferguson, Thos. H. Clark and A. S. Fletcher. In the distinguished visitor, the house received him stand and offered a resolution that the house agree to sustain the good and credit of the state at all hazards. Mr. Biggers introduced a bill to make it unlawful for any person or persons to sell pools or bet on what is commonly known as a base ball nine or base ball league, or team, as the same is played in this state. Mr. Nisbet offered a bill to establish and maintain a reform school for youths convicted of crime in the state of Alabama.

TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

Much of the time of the senate today was taken up in discussing local matters and in trying to undo what had already been done. Five new local bills were introduced and referred to proper committees. The house resolution relative to the appointment of a joint committee to frame an election law, was referred to the committee on rules. Some eight local bills were passed. In the house the rules committee reported favorably on the resolution of Mr. Brown, that the senate of the house agree to sustain the good faith and credit of the state at all hazards. The report was concurred in and adopted. The same committee, however, made an adverse report on the resolution of Mr. Ward, of Henry, to urge the United States senate to pass the anti-option bill.

The tax collector of Butler county was murder and robbed last week.

The Oxford Voice has suspended publication, as have most of the third party organs in the South since the election.

Messrs. Robbins and Stallings are reported as favoring an extra session of Congress. They realize that we need relief legislation and need it now.

The Calamity Howler is the name of a People's party organ which recently started on its march to the journalistic boneyard at Chester Bend, Ark.—Memphis Commercial.

The Northport Breeze makes an excellent point in a few words as follows: "The Breeze is not one of the constitutional howlers against railroads; it would rather collect their taxes."

The tax rate will probably be increased ½ of a mill. The mistake will not be made in increasing the rate—it is but rectifying the mistake of the legislature that reduced the rate.—Exchange.

There is a boom on in Washington for General Wheeler for a place in President Cleveland's cabinet. His admirers are putting him forward for the highly important office of Secretary of Agriculture.

There are those who are claiming that the Democratic party will not give the people any relief legislation. But it is not likely that the Democratic party will be so foolish as its enemies predict.

It is predicted that if the saw mill check system is abolished as now seems probable a good many small saw mills will have to shut down and the laborers will be compelled to find other work and probably find it only on the farm at 50 cents a day.

It is said that the third partyites want preachers, papers, lawyers, doctors, merchants and every other class to entirely approve their wild financial schemes or stand a boycott. The people who have any manhood are taking the boycott and standing it very well.

No party under the sun could give us legislation that would satisfy all classes. Dr. Macune has withdrawn with a large following from the third party. Still the third party corpse will be resurrected in some sort of shape by the political cranks of the country every four years. It is made up of the disgruntled and discontented and no party on earth nor no reasonable legislation will satisfy their demands. The Democratic party can be depended upon to give the country some relief legislation.

Be glad those of us who are not worst Scott! The Anniston Hot Blast has already begun the gubernatorial campaign by nominating General W. H. Forney for chief executive two years hence. The editor of the Hot Blast is a brave man. Most of us have had enough for the present and are hankering for the time in which to regain flesh and bunches of hair lost in the recent canvass. The H. B.'s candidate is a royal good man, but we object to opening the campaign until after the legislature adjourns, at least. What we need now is rest.—Tuskaloosa Times.

We publish elsewhere the unfortunate experience of a brother editor and kinsman in Cherokee county. We wonder how many will think twice of the misfortune of this young man who at a blow has had swept away the accumulation of some years hard labor. He is one of those who has worked unselfishly for his party and his country, and yet if he should ask reward or promotion because of his sacrifices, he would doubtless be met with considerable opposition in his own party. But concerning the destruction of his paper, it would be well to note that this spirit of anarchism which was thought to be on the wane is being revived all over Alabama. We see it stated that in some of the white counties it is being preached from the pulpit. We cannot vouch for that, but we see evidence of its growth and it is a question whether the destruction is to be confined to the press. We must wait and see.

The People's Demand.

Tuscumbia Alabamian.

The apathy and utter indifference manifested by the majority of Democratic papers in Alabama in reference to a new election law is astounding and unaccountable, and equalledonly by that shown by our Legislature. Is it the result of cowardice, pure laziness, or of the fear of the loss of political preferment? Unless that resolution of the last Democratic platform declaring that hereafter representation should be based on population, to be reported to the Legislature of 1893, and along with the famous plank comprising the rule of the "virtuous and intelligent," the question of the Black Belt representation should be left out considering this paramount issue.

We learn from a gentleman just from Montgomery that the opposition in the Legislature which comprises about four-tenths of the members, are opposed to any new law based on the Australian plan. And they can secure the aid of enough members from the organized party to defeat such a bill. This is indeed a pitiable condition for the Legislature of a great and growing State like Alabama to be placed in. We are not surprised at any thing the followers of Kolb and Bowman did, but it makes the people of the State sick and tired to see money spent by men who can't rise above the dead level of mediocrity and inefficiency—contenting themselves with the introduction of a bill virtually offering a bribe of $5 per capita for votes—and allowing the burning question of real ballot reform to go by default. The bill in question was a disgrace to the man who introduced it and an insult to the people.

If the Legislature adjourns without giving us a new and better election law, it will go down as the most disappointing to the people, and the falsest to its duty of any in the history of Alabama.

AN EDITOR'S TROUBLES.

Withstood Two Boycotts, But was Burned Out at Last.

The Industrial Free Press at Cedar Bluff was recently burned out and Editor Robert Lawrence wrote the following letter to Editor Cooper of the Rome Tribune, who offered to help him with the loan of type, etc.

Mr. Lawrence thanks the editor for his offer and says:

"If, as I presume, your offer is to aid me in getting out my publication until such time as I can re-establish the plant, I regret to say as the building and entire equipment, consisting of a Fairhaven cylinder press, Liberty and Army job presses, together with all the type, paper stock and matter for the current number, were completely destroyed, and as I was unprotected by insurance, I cannot hope to resume publication.

"As I wrote you yesterday the fire was of incendiary origin, and under two boycotts, declared by the farmers Alliance and Industrial Union of this county, this fact is most significant and is, I must say, the most effective resorted to by those red-handed revolutionists who hated the Free Press because I have, in season and out of season, fought their agrarian sentiments for the past three years.

They have estopped my presses and the Free Press will perhaps, no more warn the people of the section of the dangers which lurk beneath the alluring teachings of populite agitators, but though the hand which this is penned was not blistered (as it is) by their incendiary fire, but burned from my body, my voice and vote will still speak out for Democracy and good government.

"The principles for which the paper has ever contended have triumphed in this county, in the State and have swept the country, and of course the rejoicing (though we have striven to be conservative and to give no offense to our opponents) has been unpleasant to incurable populists, whose only weapon is the boycott and its twin ally, incendiarism. It is said that fire is a great purifier, and from experience I am made to feel the need of a system of government under whose beneficient reign every good citizen can enjoy his equal rights without trampling under foot the rights of others, can in reality without fear or favor, declare unaltered devotion to "freedom of speech and of the press," and as a free man exercise these invested rights without fear of the incendiary's torch.

"However, I have been tried by the fire of a popular frenzy, and now that I have emerged from the real fire, if there was in my composition any of the dross of communism, it has been consumed, and I am more than ever a Democrat.

"Again thanking you for your kind offer of assistance, and with expressions of esteem,

I am yours fraternally,
"Robert Lawrence."

VOTE SCHEME'S KILL.

An Able Defense by Judge Cullen, of Lowndes.

To the Age-Herald.

Lowndesboro, Dec. 14.—I observe in the Montgomery Advertiser of December 13, a very disrespectful assault on Hon. Willis Brewer, of Lowndes, in reference to his bill to exempt certain persons from taxation.

In doing this extremes meet, as the Advertiser quotes an article from one of the most ardent radical papers.

Now, what is the bill of Col. Brewer? It exempts from the payment of taxes those whose taxes amount to $5 unless, if it be shown that they failed to vote at the previous August and November elections.

Any man who is aware of the conditions of suffrage in this State, as charged by our enemies, must see that if this charge be true that a change is imperative. This charge is that the ballot is perverted, especially the negro vote, and that fair elections cannot be had. If this be true, as we may allow for the sake of this argument, then we should attempt to purify the ballot box. After all fair elections are necessary to a popular government, and a popular form of government does not exist without the privilege of suffrage is made sacred when it is exercised. Transiently we may get a benefit from violating this privilege and perverting the ballot; but the result of this, if continued, must be evil, and evil only. The protection of white civilization justifies heroic treatment and daring remedies, but if white civilization can be shielded without these it is right that we do it.

Those who take a broad and statesmanlike view of this question, instead of a narrow and partisan one, will appreciate any effort that is made to purify our elections. There are symptoms of anarchy in some of our counties at this time that ought to make even a partisan, like myself, reflect.

A. R. CAFFEE.

While agreeing fully with Judge Caffee in the end aimed at, yet it would be well to consider that in many of the hill counties of Alabama probably one half of the tax payers pay less than $5 in taxes, and if it should be remitted the loss to State and county revenues would be so great as to make a heavy increase in the tax rate necessary.

The Coming Session.

The Age-Herald says about the legislature:

The session just ended was very tame compared to what the coming session will be. The great questions yet to be considered are the tax rate, constitutional amendments, the convict system and a general election law. The house failing to obtain the senate's consent to a joint committee on a general election law, provided a committee of its own to sit during the recess. It is presumed that the cheese-parers will cut a small figure in the coming session. Mr. Brewer's power was permanently broken last night when he sought to defeat the general appropriation. It is not likely that he will be able to do further mischief except to delay legislation and thereby increase the burdens of the people.

The Extra Session.

The New York Herald makes the assertion that Mr. Cleveland is in favor of an extra session of Congress, and will issue his call a short time after his inauguration, if for no other reason than to provide for the Treasury deficit.

It is not clear that the Herald or any other paper has the authority to speak for Mr. Cleveland, but it is no doubt correct in its statement that there will be an extra session, for the reason that nearly "all of the prominent leaders out of congress are convinced, and have so expressed themselves, that an extra session will be necessary.

The condition of the Treasury has been so muddled by the Billion Dollar Congress and financial jugglery of Secretary Foster, that it will be necessary to have an extra session of Congress to ascertain how the finances of the Government stand, and make preparations to prevent a panic.

Aside from this the people are demanding an early revision of the tariff, and it does not appear they will be satisfied with anything short of it.

The Democratic party is not asking Mr. Harrison for any advice, but as he has given it, we should accept it gracefully.—Birmingham News.

What Brought About the Rise.

The rise in the price of cotton means something like $27,000,000 to the cotton growers of the South, and the incoming of the Democratic administration brought about this rise.—Gadsden Times-News.

Alabama's Next Governor.

Montgomery Journal.

Mr. Fred Furgerson is stepping on dangerous ground. His resolution, which was referred to the committee on rules, to prevent the introduction of local bills after January 4, four or five days after recess, is a good one, but is going to bring down the criticism of a good many members who are already asking themselves "what are we here for anyhow, but to introduce local bills?"

He—Carrie will you make me the happiest of men? She—I should like to, Harry, but I think I prefer to remain the happiest of women.

The State of Progress.

Union Springs Herald.

Alabama continues her march forward among industries. Coal and iron are already among her chief resources, and now she is adding gold. Mines near Talladega have yielded ore sufficient to give Alabama a reputation ahead of other Southern States. The banks of Anniston now have gold from coins which were made of the gold from the Alabama mines. Preparations will soon be made for extensive mining in the gold fields of the State.

Now is the time to subscribe for your county paper.

In a dangerous emergency, AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is prompt to act and sure to cure. A dose taken on the first symptoms of Croup or Bronchitis, checks further progress of these complaints. It softens the phlegm, soothes the inflamed membranes, and induces sleep. As a remedy for colds, coughs, loss of voice, in grippe, pneumonia, and even consumption, in its early stages, excels all similar preparations. It is endorsed by leading physicians, is agreeable to the taste, does not interfere with digestion, and needs to be taken usually in small doses.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral

"From repeated tests in my own family, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has proved itself a very efficient remedy for colds, coughs, and the various disorders of the throat and lungs."—A. W. Bartlett, Pittsfield, N. H.

"For the last 25 years I have been taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for lung troubles, and am assured that its use has

Saved My Life

I have recommended it to hundreds. I find the most effective way of taking this medicine is in small and frequent doses."—T. M. Matthews, P. M., Sherman, Ohio.

"My wife suffered from a cold; nothing helped her but Ayer's Cherry Pectoral which effected a cure."—B. Amare, Plympton, N. S.

School Exhibition.

The pupils of Clanton Academy will have an exhibition consisting of music and recitations at the Academy to-morrow, (Friday) night. An admission fee of ten cents will be charged to defray incidental expenses. Everybody should attend.

About every man we meet in Chilton says he is satisfied that it was best for the South that Cleveland was elected, and this includes Democrats, Republicans and third party folks. So we can all have a merry christmas, and the new year will be brighter for all.

With many clergymen, public speakers, singers and actors, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the favorite remedy for hoarseness and all affections of the vocal organs, throat and lungs. Its anodyne and expectorant effects are promptly realized.

The VIEW is not one of the papers that sees fit to complain at the times. It is getting along nicely, its subscribers pay up well and it is not disposed to economize at their expense as some others have found necessary. For instance our supplement for this issue cost us double what a regular issue would cost.

We issue a supplement with this issue which will prove interesting to all, especially to the little folks. No paper will be issued next week except to legal advertisers, as we desire to give the printer a Christmas breathing spell. The VIEW wishes each of its readers a merry Christmas and a happy new year.

Buckingham's Dye for the whiskers is the best, handiest, safest, surest, cleanest, most economical and satisfactory dye ever invented. It is the gentleman's favorite.

We hear people say that our's is a hard town; that there is too much meanness here, and they want to move. Meanness and selfishness exist everywhere. The man who seeks to move away from it will have to move out of this mundane sphere. This does not mean that our town could not improve in this particular. It has improved and will continue to do so.

Remember as the VIEW is trying to make a living here it is entitled to your job printing. To send your job printing away from home and then expect the paper to serve you on any and all occasions is not reasonable and will not work very well. We notice this kind of complaint in many of our exchanges and have concluded that we might as well be in fashion and make it too.

The past has been an exceptionally hard year. Yet while appreciating this fact the VIEW thinks well to mention that during the past twelve months it has secured patronage enough from home business men to sustain our family about one month out of the twelve. And there are some who think it strange that we desire to do better, while at the same time they are sending their printing away from home in the hope of saving 25 cents and on $5.00 worth.

Let no patriotic man or woman send off for Christmas goods. Spend your money with home merchants.—Birmingham News.

The above is good advice. Home enterprise should always receive the support of home people. Your home merchants are your merchants and they need your patronage and encouragement. Do not send off for Christmas goods when you can buy it just as good and at just as low prices right at home. Give your home merchants the benefit of whatever is to be made Buy your Christmas goods from your home merchants. The VIEW makes this appeal for our home merchants unselfishly, notwithstanding they seem unable to do much for the home paper.

An exchange says that mullein leaf is recommended as an excellent specific for rheumatism. We do not know one who has tried it, but the remedy is easily applied, and is otherwise harmless.

Ballots Alone Count Here.

Decatur News.

Major W. W. SCREWS, we are told, will ask for the Montgomery office; editor Rapier of the Register wants the Mobile office; editor Barr of the Gazette, desires the Florence office; editor Armstrong, of the Citizen aspires to the Scottsboro office; editor Young, of the Advertiser, has an eye on the Decatur office, the Hot Blast henry writer thinks he would exactly fit the Anniston office; editor Towne, of the Democrat, will make a vigorous pull for the Athens office; Col. Johnson, late editor of the Tribune, stands ready to assume the responsibilities of the Cullman office; editor Comstock of the Reaper, is willing to attend to the duties connected with the Sheffield P. O. department, and several others whose names we do not recall, would like to be inducted into the science of strapping, tucking, and labeling pouches.

Now, all these gentlemen are worthy and well qualified, and can soon become duly and truly prepared for patriotic service, and if we were president, senator or congressmen, we would appoint every one of them. Why? Because, on the principle of Old Hickory, "that to the victors belong the spoils" and on the Biblical theory that the laborer is worthy of wages, editors are pre-eminently entitled to a full share of patronage. They work harder and more effectually for party success than any other class of men. All the editors above mentioned, and nearly every other one in Alabama have been in the thickest of the battle that has just ended. They first lifted the warning voice, and made vigorous fight upon the enemy. Like brave generals, they led in the charge—went forward, and blazed out the the way, and said to Democratic voters, "Follow us!" The press of Alabama carried the state for Cleveland; it elected nine congressmen; it elected Governor Jones; it fought for white supremacy, and the great victory achieved in the Commonwealth is due to the unceasing labors of democratic newspapers more than all other sources combined.

There should be a manifest appreciation of the good work Alabama newspapers have done, and a liberal share of federal patronage should be given to those who have stood at the helm and guided the ship of state safely into port.

THE HARD TIMES.

The Real Cause Explained by a Jackson County Farmer.

An old farmer from Jackson county recently talked with the Athens Banner and thus explained the cause of hard times: "It is not the low price of cotton," said the farmer, "for I often sold it for six and seven cents, and thought I was doing well; but I carried all the money home with me; I did not leave any in Athens, for I made what I needed on a farm. You don't have any old-fashion gins and screws to pack cotton in; you don't hear the wheels and cards going on in the kitchen on a rainy day; you don't see any plow stocks, axe helves, hoe handles, baskets and horse collars made at home. You all go to town and get them. You don't see any pig pen full of fattened hogs around the house. You go to town to get your meat. If you will go back to those old times and make what you live on at home there will be no third party nor any one asking for $50 per capita. You go to town too often after things that can be raised at home. Try it and see if I am not right."

The New York Herald quotes Hon. Gaston A. Robbins and Hon. Jesse F. Stallings as being in favor of an extra session right away. Our young congressmen are anxious to get to Washington and make their maiden speeches.—Age-Herald.

Not that they are anxious to make their maiden speeches, but they have promised the people of their districts to give them relief as early as possible from the unnecessary laws which now oppress them; and as conscientious representatives, they do not desire the people to be oppressed for nine long months unnecessarily; mark the prediction, these two young congressmen will make fine records in the National Congress.—Anniston Hot Blast.

Looking over the State it is noticed that wherever the third party papers got in their work ventilating the third party platform they damaged their party cause. They were boomerangs.

A Lively Corpse.

The following from a Pennsylvania Republican paper, the Pittsburg Dispatch will show what kind of literature is being circulated to increase the prejudice which prevails against a worthy class of citizens. The Pittsburgh Dispatch is owned by Chris Magee, the Republican who came to Alabama to help the so-called reformers and conglomerates ruin, our State and the scene is laid here. In speaking of how merchants get control of crops the paper says:

"The usual plan is for some merchant to advance a colored farmer a little meal, some bacon, corn and so on to the amount of about $50. In return he pledges his cotton crop until he can pay it. That time never comes. No matter how much cotton the farmer may raise, whether it be worth $200 or $500, the merchant claims all, and will wrangle for it. The storekeepers are in a combination, and the colored man can't buy elsewhere until he has satisfied the bill of the first merchant. I have seen the game played frequently.

"The Ku-Klux is composed of natives, and they are closely banded together. If you ask a man if he is a member he will protest vehemently and declare there is no such society, but I know better. I read an amusing account not long ago of a negro having been scared to death by one of the gang. He wore a mask and supplied himself with a leather pouch. Going to the colored man's cabin at night he called for water and apparently drank several buckets full remarking, as he finished: 'That is the first water I have taken since the battle of Bull's Run.' The negro rolled his eyes with fright and died. This may be true, but I know they don't often use such inoffensive ways of getting rid of people in the alleged fair land of Dixie."

"A snake in the grass" is all the more dangerous from being unsuspected So are many of the blood medicines offered the public. To avoid all risk, ask your druggist for Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and also for Ayer's Almanac, which is just out for the new year.

JEMISON HIGH SCHOOL.

Session of 1892 and 1893 opened September 19, and will continue nine months. Good water, pure air, a high-toned, moral people, excellent society, and live, energetic teachers who keep fully up with the advanced methods of education, are a few of the advantages which Jemison possesses to make it one of the best school points in the country. The school buildings are large, comfortable, convenient, and well furnished with good desks, black-boards and other appliances. Maps, globes, charts, and other apparatus will be freely used to illustrate the text-books.

Deafness Can't be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CHRISTMAS.

Oh, the glorious Christmas weather, when all hearts keep time together,
And we never have a feeling that is not serene and bright;
When the snow is falling, falling, and the sound of couriers calling
To their fellows on the hillside comes clearly through the night.

How the sleighbells tingle, tingle, while the snow goes crinkle, crinkle,
And the furs and robes about us hardly serve to keep us warm;
And our feet and fingers tingle to the music and the jingle,
As we drive on swiftly homeward through the thick flying storm.

How the lights shine out to meet us; how the dogs rush out to greet us,
As we draw up at the gateway; and the horses, in a steam,
Stand there restless; stamping, stamping in the drifting snow, and clamping
At their bits, impatient of us—like the shadows in a dream.

How the blazing hickory fire flashes higher, higher, higher,
As we pile the wood upon it and draw closer all around;
And the cracking and the snapping of the logs, like wood-gnomes rapping
For release from out their prisons, has a weird and wintry sound.

Oh, the warmth and love within there! Oh, the stories that we spin there
To the children, of the goblins who live out in all the snow;
And at length we leave the fable, and recall the lowly stable
Where the King of Love was lying many centuries ago.

Till, as we all sat there thinking, little eyes with sleep are blinking,
And the old clock in the hallway tells of Christmas come again;
And the whole white earth rejoices as we hear the angel voices
Sing again the old, old story: "Peace on earth, good will to men."

Then to wake up at the dawning of a glorious Christmas morning,
To find everybody happy with the warmth of Christmas cheer.
Ah, when love is such a feeling, all our better selves revealing,
Let us dwell in love forever and have Christmas all the year.

—James G. Burnett.

THE CHRISTMAS PIKE.

BY MISS L. V. BULLOCK-WEBSTER.

"WHERE shall I go for Christmas," was a question that much disturbed my mind last year; for I had a great many invitations, and only a few days to spare. I particularly wanted to be back for the big dance at The Hawthorns, and with open weather, and four good horses in the stable, I grudged missing even oneday's hunting. Still a bachelor's hunting-box, seven miles from anywhere, was not exactly my idea of the place to Christmas in; so I turned over in my mind the merits and demerits of my various friends' establishments, but could not come to any conclusion as to which I intended to honor with my presence.

The evening post settled the matter for me.

"The very place," I cried, when just as I had finished dinner the maid brought in a letter from my old chum, Langham Carter, who was home on a six months' furlough from India. He and I had been close friends at school, but we had not met again until one winter when I went out to India for some tiger and big game shooting. We were both staying with Sanderson, at Mysore, and good sport we had. He showed us how to catch elephants, as only he knows how, and put me in the way of bagging my first tiger.

"What fun it was! and what a good sort old George Sanderson is—very few like him, worse luck," I mused, as Langham's letter recalled that jolly time which we had spent together.

"Dear Frank," his note ran, "I am going down to The Moat for Christmas and I hope you'll come, too. You can have a good mount on any of the dad's horses—they are all your sort, well bred and good performers. If you bring a rod you can catch pikes galore and of sizes large in the moat. Father and mother and the girls (you remember Nellie and Nora when they were little) will be delighted to see you once more. Come by the early train on Christmas Eve and I'll me you at the station. Don't bother to write; just send a wire to say you're coming."

So next morning I sent my message, "Thanks, delighted to come," and spent the rest of the day in pleasant anticipation of the fun I was going to have. If there is one thing I like, or love, next to hunting, it is a bit of good fishing, and a big pike is my especial in the fish line; so I packed up my rod and looked out suitable tackle for the mighty monarchs of whom Lang spoke.

It was only midday when I reached the Carters' station, for I had got up betimes. Two very pretty girls were waiting for me on the platform; and I instantly recognized one as an improved edition of the little Nellie I used to chase and kiss under the mistletoe long ago. She had been my first love, and we made all sorts of vows and promises during the winter holidays that I spent at The Moat as a boy. Her companion was not Nora—I felt sure of that—but I thought she was the most beautiful woman I had ever beheld. Medium height, and fair, with curly golden hair under an Astrakan cap, she looked quite the regular Christmas-story-book-picture girl, with the advantage of a merry pair of sparkling gray eyes and a laughing face. In her arms she carried a mite of a toy bull terrier, in a smart red coat.

As I pulled my traps out of the train Miss Carter came up and shook hands.

"Langham was so sorry he couldn't meet you. He won't be back till this evening, so we—let me introduce Miss Mildred Palgrave, who is staying with us—thought we'd drive to fetch you instead. I am afraid we are a poor substitute for brother Lang, but you must make the best of it and take us on our merits."

Looking at them I thought myself lucky, and thanked heaven that Lang could not come, ingrate I was.

Miss Palgrave held out a well-gloved hand, saying, "I am so glad to meet you, for Langham has told me so many stories about you as a boy that I quite feel I know you already. But they tell me that I must treat you with respect, for you're a mighty Nimrod now, and a slayer of wild beasts."

"Not many, I'm afraid. More travelers' tales. Some of dear old Langham's yarns," answered I, modestly, but I was secretly gratified at her taking such a friendly interest in me.

"You've got to take Mildred and Goliath (the tiny terrier) in front and drive," said Nellie, when my luggage had been stowed in the bottom of the dog cart—and I was expecting to have to sit behind; "I want to have a rest. Old Banjo—we call the cob Banjo because he is so musical—pulls like a demon as soon as his head is turned for home."

Nothing loath, I helped the girls into their seats, and we were soon at The Moat, which was only five miles from the station—a very short five miles, and I hated Banjo for making the journey so brief, when I should have liked it to have lasted forever. My companion chatted on as if she had known me all her life, and I fell desperately in love with her and quite forgot my boyhood's sweetheart, who only reminded me of her presence as we drove up the avenue by exclaiming: "This is where you shot your first rabbit that Sunday afternoon when we were all at church. What a row there was about it! Do you remember? You were both bad boys in those days." On the steps were Nora and the Squire, who welcomed me heartily, and Mrs. Carter met me with a pleasant greeting in the hall. In a moment I felt "at home," and it seemed more like fifteen months than fifteen years since these kindly folks had last seen me.

As we sat at lunch Mr. Carter apologized for Langham's unavoidable absence, and asked me if I could console myself with the pike for one afternoon. "They are all on the feed," he said, "and Johnson, the keeper, has got some nice roach. I want you to try and catch the Patriarch. Old Jacob, as we call him, is a huge brute who abides by the island. He is wily, but as no one has fished the place for a year we are hoping he'll give you a show. Last year he broke two of my friends, one of them twice, and they swore he must be fifty pounds at least. He ate a good-sized duck last summer, and we picked up a half dead carp not long ago that weighed over fifteen pounds, and had a big hole in its side like a cavern. No doubt it was old Jacob's work."

I almost forgot Mildred in my excitement, and directly lunch was over rigged up my pet old rod, made of a bamboo I had brought from India, where it had killed many a goodly mahseer in the swift Joaldoka, and put on live bait tackle of abnormal strength and size.

Johnson and I were soon in the punt, and began at the foot of the moat where the water was shallow. I mounted a nice roach, fresh and lively, of about two ounces, and under the keeper's instructions tried a bit or water beside a log. My float was scarcely settled when I had a pull, and knew I was into a good fish, and after a few minutes a respectable ten-pounder was in the boat. On the way up I caught two more and then came the haunts of the Patriarch, and we grew cautious and slow.

"No use trying a small bait for him, sir. Put on the very largest in the well."

So, dutifully, I selected one that was fully half a pound weight, and, following Johnson's directions, swung it well out into a deep hole at the mouth of a backwater that ran round a little island in front of the house.

"That's the place, just where your float is now," cried the squire, who with the girls had come down on the lawn to watch the fun.

A charming group they made—that fine old country gentleman, the picture of health and good nature, with three pretty girls standing by him, and Don, his sedate old pointer, at his heels; while gayly frolicking round them all was the irrepressible Goliath, who seemed to imagine that the whole party had come out entirely for his gratification and amusement. As my bait touched the water the excitable little dog pricked up his ears, and advanced at the water's edge, surveying it wrathfully as if he fancied it might be some vagrant water rat with whom it was his duty to do battle.

"Come to heel, Goliath; come to heel, called Mildred. "You'll tumble in and catch your death of cold."

But she called in vain, he heeded not her warning, and I almost forgot my fishing, as taken up was I with watching the comical little beast as he dodged about the bank in fussy indecision, his red jacket contrasting prettily with the dry grass and weeds.

My bait was so big and lively that it kept the float moving briskly, constantly pulling it under, and as I had no space cords I was obliged to let it go, hoping that a sensible patriarch would discriminate between a bony roach and a float and prefer the former, in spite of the attractive red top of the latter.

However the eccentric vagaries of the said red top attracted all Master Goliath's attention, and each time the float bobbed up he gave a little jump and a yap in unison. At length his excitement grew so intense that we all burst out laughing. To him it appeared no laughing matter, but a serious subject which required investigation, and when the bright red top disappeared longer than usual he could stand it no more, but jumping with a dash, regardless of the bitter cold water, swam out for the point where he last saw the float.

Mildred's face was a study. "Oh, my poor little dog!" she cried. "Do get him out at once, Mr. Galloway, and bring him in. Don't lose a moment." As well as his laughter would let him Johnson was paddling to meet the bold swimmer, and I leant ready in the bows, with my sleeves turned up, to grab him as soon as he was near enough. His round, little head and big eyes and red coat made him look like some strange new water-baby come to view the world. When he was within six feet of the boat, and I was just making ready for the grasp, there was a mad swirl that sent the water flying into my face, a rush, a huge pair of jaws swept the surface, and in a moment the Patriarch had pulled poor Goliah under the water, and he was lost to our sight!

All the girls screamed in chorus, and Mildred gave such a weird, wild, agonized cry, as she saw her darling disappear to certain death, that I felt almost as if I were a murderer; for had I not been fishing this would never have happened.

Johnson had all his wits about him. "He's gone for his hold there under the willow," said he, driving the slow punt forward, and plunging the pole deep into the water in hopes of frightening the monster off his prey. As he did so up came fish and dog, the latter struggling gamely, but still held across his quarters in the cruel jaws.

I could not help myself—in a moment I dived from the punt right on to them, and quick as thought with my left hand grabbed Goliath by the collar, whilst with my right I struck a heavy blow across the pike's jaws, whic made him leave go.

Johnson seized my hand as I turned round, and was helping me into the punt when the Patriarch, wildly enraged at losing his prey, made another dash, grasping my arm just above the wrist in his effort to get at the dog. But his Nemesis had come. Johnson had the gaff in his hand, and did not lose a second in gaffing Master Jacob behind the shoulders. Luckily it was one of the old fashioned, home made ones—a huge hook big enough to gaff sharks, with a big holding barb on it—and struggle and fight as he might the monster could not get away.

Meanwhile I had chucked the half dead Goliath into the punt and struggled in myself; then, slipping a cord over the fish's tail, we soon had him in the boat, where a judicious tap on the head with a loaded "pike stick" settled his hash. The sight of his enemy seemed to bring new life into Goliath, and seizing him by a fin he shook and shook to his heart's content, quite oblivious of his own broken leg and torn sides.

When we touched the shore I scrambled out with the plucky little terrier in my arms and restored him to his anxious mistress, who thanked me heartily and gratefully while she showered kisses upon her rescued treasure.

The squire hurried me off to the house, wisely thinking that a hot bath would prevent any evil effects from this cold dive. My coat sleeve had protected my arm so well that a few deep scratches were the extent of my ills, and I felt as if I would gladly have lost a hand to be thanked once more like that by my darling Mildred. For I quite regarded her now as my own, and determined I would propose that very night after dinner.

For the first time in my life I was grateful to the winds who had wafted Nora and left me the enemy which had made my life so easy and pleasant; and I hope succeeding to myself the old cottage. "Enough for you to manage for two," and thinking how I should spend next Christmas at home, and how Mildred and I would go to Langham and Nellie and Nora to stay with us, and how we would talk over this day's proceedings, and enjoy ourselves.

By the time I had dressed I felt quite "good," and had no doubts at all about the future.

"Tea is served in the drawing-room," said the pretty parlor maid, "and the ladies are waiting."

"How's Goliath?" asked I.

"All right, sir. Johnson has set his leg, and tied up his wounds, and he's doing nicely. He is asleep now, sir, on Miss Palgrave's lap."

"Say I'll be down in a minute," I answered. And as soon as I brushed my hair, and tied my scarf to my satisfaction, I stalked down stairs as if I was walking on air, to receive the renewed thanks of my idol, and to try and tell her that my life was at her service.

As I stalked into the drawing room Langham rushed forward and shook me warmly by the hand, exclaiming, "I am so glad to see you, Frank, you dear old man. A thousand thanks for your boldness in rescuing Millie's pet. She treasures that little brute above creation—"

For a moment I was thunderstruck. My dream was over! Fool that I was, it served me right, and good sense soon returned. Heartily could I congratulate them both on their good fortune, and I hope no one ever guessed my disappointment.

"Bar one thing," Mildred broke in, as she slipped her hand caressingly into his arm.

"And says it's just because I gave it to her," continued Langham. "You know it was my first present to her after we were engaged."

When he had done talking over our adventure, and saying how thankful we were that it had terminated so well, we all went out to inspect the foe, the sight of whom made Goliath bristle with rage, and struggle to get out of his mistress' arms, and attack once more his would-be murderer.

Certainly he well deserved the name of the Patriarch. He weighed forty-eight pounds and was long and lean and lank, with jaws like a crocodile. Had he been in condition in proportion to his length he would have weighed fully sixty pounds, and I felt quite proud of having played even a subordinate part in the capture of such a monster.

Johnson got a couple of sovereigns from Langham for his share, and well he deserved it. If it had not been for his prompt action I believe old Jacob would have snatched Goliath from my arms and left his mistress a-lamenting.

We spent a jolly evening, and never have I enjoyed a Chrismas more than I did that one, though this year I fancy it may prove even pleasanter still; for now I am going as Nellie's accepted lover. Don't laugh; in spite of one day's infatuation for her friend I discovered that it was Nellie, my first and only sweetheart, that I really cared for, and the girl I loved as the boy of twelve I now love with the strong and lasting love of manhood.

Oh, yes, the Patriarch and Goliath, what became of them? Goliath went out to India six weeks later, when his mistress married my old friend, and I am afraid he will carry the marks of that day's adventure till his death. I trust he may never again encounter so cruel a foe, for a pluckier little dog was never wrapped in a skin.

And the Patriarch! We ate some of him on Christmas Day. In life he was terrible, and in death he was horrible; may I never taste so vile a fish again. Peace be to his memory, we ne'er shall look upon his like again. His skin is stuffed, and holds a place of honor in my hall, and I look upon him, indirectly, as the means of giving me my love.

What's Nellie like? Well, my friends, you'll see next year when we are married, and then you'll agree with me that she is the sweetest girl in the world.—Holly Leaves.

A CHRISTMAS PUDDING.

Old Christmas comes
With frozen thumbs,
His long beard white with snow;
'Tis right good cheer
His knock to hear,
And grist to have him go.

The children dance,
And the babies prance,
For the tiniest toddler knows
'Tis a world of drums
And dolls and plums,
Where the jolly old pilgrim goes.

Do You Wish the Finest Bread and Cake?

It is conceded that the Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest of all the baking powders.

The purest baking powder makes the finest, sweetest, most delicious food. The strongest baking powder makes the lightest food.

That baking powder which is both purest and strongest makes the most digestible and wholesome food.

Why should not every housekeeper avail herself of the baking powder which will give her the best food with the least trouble?

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

Certain protection from alum baking powders can be had by declining to accept any substitute for the Royal, which is absolutely pure.

FARM NOTES.

The time has gone for keeping a steer until he is four years old before sending to market.

Stock that is continually tempted by weak fences should not be blamed for becoming "breachy."

A box six inches high and two feet square kept filled with clean, dry dirt makes a good dust bath.

Don't buy a cow with high head and eyes starting from sockets. She is off in disposition, and you will be a loser.

If ducks can have a free range during the day and comfortable quarters at night they can readily be kept healthy.

Milking should be done with the greatest regularity. An hour's time out of the way is harmful to the cow every time.

Next to the Jersey Red, the Poland China breed is considered to rank highest in regard to hardiness and ability to resist disease.

The calf is not so stupid as he looks. When his mother fails to answer his demands he gives her a "milk punch," and the old lady comes down.

Light hogs prepared for early market are often far more profit than if kept until later when prices are low because of the rush of fresh pork.

The wheels of the mowing machines are made use of for constructing low-down wagons with wide rimmed wheels, that prove to be just the thing.

Provide plenty of bedding for the sheep during the winter so as to keep the wool out of the dirt, and at the same time it will aid, to keep the sheep dry.

A well known Australian wool grower raises 200 acres of rape for his sheep, and he speaks in the highest terms of its value. He has fattened twenty sheep per acre on his rape field.

If you have barb wire fence around your pasture it may pay to tie scraps of tin or some other substance to the wires to prevent the animals from running against it without seeing it.

Scaly legs are eyesores. With such simple remedies as applying vaseline or lard, to which a few drops of carbolic acid has been added, there is no excuse for their presence in a well kept flock of poultry.

The chaff from wheat is one of the best materials for use on the floor of the poultry house. Keep the chaff dry and under cover. It not only permits of easy cleaning of the house, but acts as an absorbent and also serves as litter in which the hens may scratch for food.

A large crop of apples may be grown when a hive of bees is stationed in the orchard. The pollen is rubbed from their bodies against the pistils of thousands of flowers, which thus become fertilized. Many of the strange feats of hybridizing varieties are due the agency of bees.

Innocent Man—"What about?"

Prison Warden—"Seems to me that considerin' that you hadn't any business here, you ought to pay the state for your board."

Mrs. Bilkins—"Oh, Goodie! Here's a letter from Cousin George."

Mr. Bilkins—"Huh! Who cares for him?"

Mrs. Bilkins—"Eh! Why, he lives in Chicago, and his house is close to the Fair grounds, and it's the very place for us to go next summer. I wrote to him, telling him we were all just dying to see him and his lovely family. I wonder what he says. Read it; I'm too nervous."

Mr. Bilkins (reading)—"'My Dear Cousin: You will soon have a chance to see us all once more. I have rented my house, and we shall make you a good long visit next summer.'"—New York Weekly.

IN THE HALLS OF CONGRESS

Daily Routine of Business Transacted in the Interest of the People.

Upon Speaker Crisp's entering the house, Monday morning, there were most unusual scenes. The democrats arose and cheered him vociferously, and the republicans joined in. The speaker rapped for order, but the house refused to come to order and continued cheering for some time. It was an evident reassurance of confidence to offset the intentional or supposed slight given him Saturday night in New York, by the reform club's failure to invite him to speak at their banquet. The prevalent opinion is that the speaker's name was intentionally omitted from the list of orators and that the club meant to discount his position as an advocate of tariff reform, thereby strengthening the opposition to his re-election.

The attendance in the house Tuesday morning was small, owing in a great measure to the inclemency of the weather. The house adopted a resolution directing the committee on ways and means to inquire into and report upon the present condition of the treasury and the probable future revenues under the existing law.

Mr. Cobb, of Missouri, from the committee on war claims, reported favorably to the house Wednesday the bill introduced by Mr. Ferrall, of Virginia, appropriating $217,236 for the relief of the heirs of the late Mrs. Mary Ann Randolph Curtis Lee, of Fairfax county, Va. The claim was referred to the court of claims for a finding of fact under the "Bowman act" and was returned to the committee. The court found that wood valued at $217,236 had been taken from the Lee estate during the war by Colonel Greene, chief quartermaster of the department of Washington.

The house, Thursday, agreed to a resolution for a holiday recess from Thursday before Christmas until Wednesday after New Years, and then proceeded to apportion the days before recess among its various committee. Saturday was given to the consideration of the Florida claims bill; Monday, suspension day, was not accorded any privilege; Tuesday was given to the committee on public lands; Wednesday, to the committee on commerce. The measures called up by the committee on Indian affairs consumed the remainder of the day. Then the house adjourned until Saturday.

THE SENATE.

The anti-option bill was laid before the senate Monday but was informally laid aside to allow discussion on the Indian Territory resolution to be continued. Senators Irby (F. A., S. C.) and Warren (Rep., Wyoming,) were in their seats for the first time this session.

In the senate, Tuesday, certificates of the electors were presented from Texas, North Carolina, Alabama, Illinois and Maine. Mr. Daniel, of Virginia, offered a resolution calling on the civil service commissioners for a succinct statement of the government positions that are inside and outside of the civil service rules, the methods of application and examination, the quota of each state filled and vacant, and what positions are open to appointment outside of the civil service rules—the purpose being to procure in a compact form information for the use of those desiring to enter the government service. The resolution went over without action. Mr. Vest's joint resolution for a commission to make an agreement with the five civilized tribes of the Indian Territory for taking lands in severalty was taken up and several speeches were made. The senate at noon resumed consideration of the anti-option bill, Mr. George addressing the senate in favor of his subtreasury measure.

The famous McGarrahan claim occupied the attention of the senate till 2 o'clock, Wednesday when it went over till Thursday. The question was, whether the bill passed last session, referring the matter to the court of private land claims, should pass over the president's veto. The remainder of the session was occupied by the anti-option bill, Mr. George, of Mississippi, spoke until adjournment. He denounced business on the New York cotton exchange, as "unhallowed traffic" and its sales of cotton as "sales of phantom bales."

In the senate, Thursday, Mr. George finished his speech on the anti-option bill. Mr. Washburn made an ineffectual effort to have the time fixed for taking the vote next week. The certificates of election of presidential elector ins Delaware were presented. Several petitions were presented against the anti-option bill, including one from the New York merchants' exchange. The McGarrahan bill was taken up at 12:45 and Mr. Hunton resumed the argument in favor of the bill. [illegible] passage of the bill over the veto. After a short executive session the senate adjourned until Monday.

NOTES.

The president, Wednesday, presented Christmas gifts to a number of people in the shape of pardons.

Senator Stewart has introduced an amendment providing absolute free coinage to Senator Hills silver bill.

The ways and means committee now have a big job on their hands in investigating the exact condition of the treasury.

Postmaster General Wanamaker, on Wednesday, approved the selected color of the international return postal card. It is a bluish gray and the cards are the same size as the domestic card.

Amos Cummings has introduced a resolution demanding investigation of the mailing service, with Mr. Wanamaker as chief witness. It alleges that laws were wantonly violated in sending republican literature below its legitimate rate.

The senate has confirmed the nominations of Person C. Cheney, of New Hampshire, to be minister of Switzerland; Charles C. Clarke, of Virginia, United States marshal of the eastern district of Virginia; Thomas J. Flanner, of Louisiana, to be receiver of public moneys at Natchitoches.

The Senate committee on foreign relations, Wednesday, further considered the bill by the terms of which the United States guarantees the payment of the interest on $100,000,000 in bonds to be issued by the Nicaragua Canal Company. Some slight changes, suggested by Chairman Sherman, were agreed to.

Mr. Bulloch, of Florida, introduced in the house Tuesday a resolution requesting the secretary of war to ascertain and report to the house the present actual condition of harbor improvement at Cumberland Sound, Fla., and the entrance to Port Fe nandina and whether necessity exists for any immediate legislation regarding these points.

The republican senators' caucus met again Thursday morning and further discussed the program in regard to the prospective senatorial contests in the western states. A resolution was adopted authorizing the chairman, Senator Sherman, to appoint a committee of five senators to take into consideration the wisdom and propriety of senatorial interference in these contests.

The news of the death of Senator Gibson was not received in Washington until Thursday evening. A meeting of the Louisianna delegation in congress will be held to make arrangements for attending the funeral, which, it is supposed, will be held in New Orleans. The committee to represent congress on the occasion will be named by Vice President Morton and Speaker Crisp, and they will go under an escort of the deputy sergeant-at-arms of the senate.

Every member of the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce was present at Wednesday morning's session to listen to the arguments of the railway magnates in favor of the amendments introduced by Senator Cullom to the Inter-State Commerce act. President Roberts, of the Pennsylvania, and Depew, of the New York Central, addressed the committee. Mr. Roberts said the inter-state law was being violated every day by the shippers and manufacturers. Mr. Depew said there was a general misapprehension in the public mind on the subject of the relations of railway companies to one another on the subject of rates and competition, and stated that the profits of the New York Central were not now as great as when he entered the service. The certificate of the presidential electors for Florida was presented

The Mafia Again.

A New Orleans dispatch says: Stephan Areto was found near the Convent station, in St. James parish Friday night, desperately wounded. He detailed a story of how he, with two companions, were inveigled from the French market by four men, who stabbed to death his friends and left him for dead at Convent. The bodies of his companions which were found verified Areto's story. The authorities are certain the crime was the work of the Mafia Society.

Senator Gibson Improving.

A special of Friday from Hot Springs, Ark., says: Senator Gibson's condition is considerably improved. The attending physicians say there is hope of his recovery unless a change for the worse comes within the next forty-eight hours. He partakes freely of nourishment and seems to be gaining strength. His relatives and friends are now hopeful of his recovery.

The receipts at the home show in New York City were $174,000 and the expenses [illegible] a profit of $101,000.

BILL ARP'S LETTER.

An Interesting Talk of Old Times on the Farm.

He Says the Cotton Outlook is Better Since the Presidential Election.

Our cotton buyers say that 90 per cent of the crop in this country has been sold, and it has averaged 8 1-2 cents a pound. That does pretty well. I said in a former letter that the great staple went up 2 cents just as soon as Cleveland was elected. Several men and one woman have taken offense at this and write me rather malignantly about the sin of deception, and the good woman says that she had always esteemed me to be a gentleman and a Christian until now. She says that unless I am an idiot I must know that it was the short crop that made the price advance.

Well that is so. I take it all back. I was just jubilating. That's all. Her party jubilated so much before the election that we couldn't keep from crowing a little afterwards. It did us so much good. I am just as sorry for my republican friends as the circumstances will admit of, especially the women, and I remember them in my prayers and hope they may receive an abundance of resignation and take comfort in that scripture which says "The Lord loveth whom he chasteneth." Let us rejoice with those who rejoice and weep with those who weep. Sometimes the good things we haven't got are more comforting than those we have. It is better like our preacher who had to get up away in the night and nurse his little colliery boy for two long hours, and when at last he had sobbed himself to sleep the fond father patted him gently and whispered "you dear little suffering darling! Papa wouldn't take a million dollars for you tho he wouldn't—but he wouldn't give a nickel for another."

Eight cents is a fair price for cotton in Texas—just as fair as 9 cents is here in Georgia. It is a pity that the price couldn't be regulated by the cost of production and let every man make 50 per cent. Some farmers right here in Bartow county swear they can't make it for less than 8 cents, but I was talking to Mr. Shedaker who is a small farmer near our town and always has a little money to lend. He made nine and a half bales on ten acres this year and did it with hired labor, for he has no children and he says he keeps a strict account of every cent and knows exactly what he is doing and that the crop cost him 4 1-2 cents a pound. He sold it for 9 1-2 and he is satisfied. He has something to sell all the year around—some corn, or hay, or a cow, or some potatoes. He came here poor and has improved his little farm and built a new house out of the profits of farming. He envies nobody, troubles nobody, and is a good citizen.

Another farmer who sold a few bales at 9 cents told Mr. Milam that he didn't know what it cost him for his little chaps chopped it out and picked the most of it, and if they hadn't done that they would have done anything else. Counting fair wages for the children he said he reckoned his cotton cost him about 6 cents, but not counting the children it cost about 3 cents.

A sorry farmer on a sorry farm is a very sorry spectacle, and if it wasn't for his wife he would perish, but somehow, in the dispensation of providence, most every no-account, or unlucky man is tied onto a bustling, hustling woman who never surrenders and manages somehow to maintain the family. This is not fancy, but it is a fact that the more trifling or unlucky the man the more diligent is the woman. From time to time I had various tenants when I was farming and I noticed that the most indifferent men had the smartest women tied onto them.

Farming with diligence and good management is the best business I know of, and I am glad to say our farmers are improving in their methods and their industry. I heard an observing farmer say today that, as a class, they were 25 per cent better off in this country than they were three years ago. They are generally out of debt and own good stock and good implements. If a healthy man with a healthy wife has a good little farm that is paid for he has as good a chance for happiness and success as anybody. I shall never cease to cherish the memory of my farming life. And now when the children gather around the fireside they love to recall and relate the trials and tribulations, the pleasures and delights of the ten years they lived upon the farm. They worked hard and made good crops and mixed a little sport with their labors and kept everything lively and cheerful. Almost every night we had music and neighbors would drop in to enjoy it. I listened to them last night as they alternated with each other in refreshing memories.

"Don't you remember when Old Bess kicked me over backwards and put her foot square down in the milk bucket?" "Yes, and you mauled her with the hoe handle and broke it, and you used to make me set upon the fence while you were milking and hold Old Bess' tail to keep her from switching you in the face with it, and the way you pulled the milk from her with both hands was a sight. She was a cow, she was. Do you reckon you could milk one now or have you lost the lick since you've got stuck up so fine in New York?"

"And don't you remember when old Mag fell on that stob and made a hole in her breast that you could hide a rabbit in?"

"Yes, and didn't I run my hand in it and wash it out with lye soap and turpentine and then sew it up with a begging needle and she got well and that was my first experience in surgery, and right there papa said he was going to make a doctor out of me."

"And don't you remember when I gave Mr. Jenkins three merino sheep for that old long-horned goat and how he knocked the bench out of me the first day and papa got mad and sent him back to Jenkins?"

"And what fun we used to have with Old Pete, the merino ram, and how we trained him to butt and nobody dared to get in fifty yards of him, and one day papa was going along on his dignity, like he thought Old Pete would dare to interfere with him, and before he knew it Old Pete was after him and I never saw a man run like papa did—you could have played marbles on his coat tail."

"And don't you remember when Ralph fell out of the top of that tall persimmon tree in the meadow and we all took him up for dead and carried him to the house and the blood and bruis run out of his mouth?"

"Yes, and I rode Molly five miles to town in one hour and fifteen minutes after the doctor and if she hasn't been the best mare in the world to speed have killed her. And don't you remember how Molly used to stall when she took a notion and one morning when I had on a load of clover down in the low-grounds she took a notion and after I had begged her and whipped her and worked with her for an hour I unhitched Old Queen and rode her home and left Molly there hitched to the wagon all day long without food or water, and late in the evening I went back with Queen and hitched her alongside and got up on the wagon and said, 'Get along Molly,' and she started right away and pulled every pound all the way home and Queen could hardly keep up with her. That's the best way to break up a stalling horse that ever I tried, and it lasts, for Molly never did stall again.

"And don't you remember how the Guyton hogs used to raise up our water gaps and get in the corn field, and how Nabor Freeman said if we would catch a hog and mash his tail between two rocks he never would come back anymore, and we tried it. We caught them with the dogs every day they came and there was hardly a hog in the neighborhood that dident have a broken tail, but it dident break them of breaking into our fields and the Guytons threatened to law us, but they didn't. And papa bought a big Poland China sow from Mr. Keever and she ate up fifteen or twenty chickens the first day we got her, and when papa asked him why he didn't tell him she was a chicken eater, he laughed and said he thought we would find it out soon enough. And don't you remember when Paul was taking his first lessons in plowing in the field over the creek, he couldent keep his mule in the furrow, but the mule would step aside to bite every bunch of grass, and Paul got mad and used cursory language for the first time in his life, and when the horn blowed for dinner that mule dident wait for the end of the row, but just turned square round and made for home, dragging the plow and Paul, too, and he got so mad he turned her loose and ran to a sassafras bush and tore it all to pieces for switches and revenge.

"Then the girls took it up and talked about their frolics over the fields and in the meadow and going to the mill and to school and getting black haws and maypops, and how we raised popcorn and goobers by the bushel, and hauled up walnuts from the low ground by the wagon load, and how they used to ride on top of the hay from the clover field, and what a big time we used to have getting mistletoe and evergreens for Christmas, and how Victor got on top of the house one Christmas night when the house was full of children waiting for Santa Claus, and he tooted his horn and raised a racket and all the little chaps thought the old fellow had come sure enough, and they love to think so yet. Yes, and how I dammed up the branch in the willows and made them a washhole and a springboard, and what glorious fun it was, and nobody to molest or make them afraid."

"Yes," said their mother, "you children did have a good time and a hard time, too, and it is a wonder that you are all alive today, for you had some terrible accidents, and not a doctor nearer than four or five miles. When that brick fell from the top of the chimney and laid Carl's head open, I never expected him to live until the doctor got there, and there was some fast riding done that time, too, for Dr. Griffin at Cass Station. You were all very fortunate with your mishaps, but I was all the time under apprehensions, and I never want to live again so far from a doctor. You may all praise the country, but I will take the town every time."

BILL ARP, in Atlanta Constitution.

SENATOR GIBSON DIES.

A Man Prominent in the Affairs of the State of Louisiana.

After a lingering but apparently painless illness, Senator R. L. Gibson died at Hot Springs, Ark., Thursday afternoon. At the time of his death he was surrounded by members of the family and a number of close friends, who wept bitterly when it was seen that the noble-hearted man was dead. Senator Gibson passed away as though he had merely gone to sleep. There was no struggle, no suffering. He had been confined to his bed since the 12th of November, since which time his death has been expected daily. In accordance with his wishes, the remains will be buried in Lexington, Ky., beside his wife, who died some years ago.

Randall Lee Gibson, of New Orleans, was born September 10, 1833, at Spring Hill, near Versailles, Woodford county, Kentucky; was educated in Lexington, Ky.; in Terre Bonne Parish, Louisana; at Yale college; in the law department of the Tulane university of Louisana; declined the secretaryship of legation of Spain in 1885; was aid to the governor of Louisiana at the commencement of the civil war, and commanded a company, regiment, brigade, and division in the confederate army; was president of the board of administrators of the Tulane university of Louisana, was one of the administrators of the Howard memorial library in New Orleans; was one of the trustees of the Peabody educational fund; a regent of the Smithsonian institution; a lawyer and planter; was elected to the forty-third congress from the second congressional district, but was denied admission; was a representative in the fourty-fourth, forty-fifth, forty-sixth and forty-seventh congresses, and was elected to the United States senate without opposition as a democrat, and took his seat March 4, 1883, and was re-elected in 1886. His term of service would have expired March 3, 1893.

Decrease of French Imports.

A Paris cablegram of Thursday says: Returns issued by the French board of trade shows that during November the imports decreased 8,648,000 francs and exports increased 10,552,000 francs, as compared with imports and exports for the corresponding month last year.

TELEGRAPHERS WALK OUT.

A Strike on the Central of Georgia Inaugurated.

About two hundred and fifty employes of the Central railroad belonging to the Order of Railway Telegraphers quit their keys shortly after 2 o'clock Monday afternoon in accordance with telegraphic orders sent out from Savannah, Ga., Deputy Grand Chief Tobey and the special committee of employes represent the strikers in every branch of the system in the three states of Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama.

The strike is the result of a fruitless effort on the part of the operators to obtain a slight increase in their pay and to have their order recognized by the Central railroad.

About two weeks ago committees were appointed by the Order of Railway Telegraphers to confer with the managers of the different lines in the south. At these conferences an increase of wages was asked, and the roads were requested to make a contract with the telegraphers' order. The pay asked for by operators would have increased their wages from $5 to $10 per month. They also wanted extra pay for over twelve hours' work each day. The time of train despatchers was to be eight hours per day.

The committee succeeded in meeting all but the officials of the Central road, who declined to meet them in any conference.

All other lines refused their demands. The committee waited in Savannah and made several efforts to see the officials of the Central, but they failed to do so.

Saturday they addressed a note to General Superintendent Wadley, giving him until two o'clock Monday to accede to their demands. At the same time a notice of this action was sent to all operators on the line, and they were instructed to hold themselves in readiness to quit the service of the company.

At two o'clock Monday General Superintendent Wadley had not replied to the note sent him and an order was telegraphed to all operators instructing them to go out. They immediately complied with the instructions.

About 175 of the strikers are stated to be station agents, in addition to the telegraphers, and it is at their points that the strikers believe the most injury will be inflicted to the business of the road. The committee maintain that it will be impossible for the road to get competent men to handle its business and the officials of the railroad are equally as emphatic in their statement that they can do so, and will soon have all vacancies filled. The committee says the telegraphers will stand together firmly and are apparently confident that they will be able to secure a settlement of their grievances in a few days.

There are nearly three hundred operators on the Central system, over 90 per cent of whom are in the telegraphers' organization. Two-thirds of the men are agents and operators combined. The train dispatchers are in the order. Telegrams received from headquarters of each division show that the men have walked out. Agents have been instructed to handle no business whatever, except to deliver freights on hand.

WADLEY EXPECTED IT.

Superintendent Wadley had little to say beyond that knowing that there would be a strike he had gone ahead and prepared for it by arranging to run trains by schedule. He held that the strike would affect the business of the road very little and that the places of the strikers would be filled rapidly.

Our Income and Expenditure.

A Washington special of Wednesday says: The secretary of the treasury's report estimates the revenues for the present fiscal year at $449,894,250, and the expenditures, at the same per cent, at $451,898,950. The secretary estimates that the total amount available at the close of the present year is over $121,000,000.

Blaine "Much Better."

A Washington special says: Dr. W. Johnson, Mr. Blaine's physician, states the story that Blaine is dying is untrue. He passed a comfortable night and rested well, and Tuesday morning appeared much better.

CITY OF MEXICO.

Unique Street Scenes in the Mexican Metropolis.

By day the town of Mexico presents a very unique appearance, for, from whatever point of view chosen, the avenues are shut in by the serrated mountains surrounding the whole valley.

The straight wide streets, running in parallel lines from north to south and from east to west, make it look modern enough, but, for all that, the old white-washed houses, the only architectural beauties of which are the numerous windows with projecting balconies, give the whole place a superannuated appearance. These houses are always built in four blocks, with one or two patios, or spacious court-yards. On two sides of this patio there is generally a narrow veranda or some projecting masonary, which serves as a protection from the rain, and enables the occupant to reach dry-shod the wide staircase with high stone steps leading to the upper rooms. These rooms, which are mostly paved with tiles instead of planks, open on to a gallery running around the court, with a balustrade at a convenient height for leaning against, which balustrade is decked with numerous pots of flowers and shrubs. The first story alone is used to live in, the ground-floor being occupied by shops, magazines, or stables. The better houses are built of freestone, whilst the poor tenements consist of a material known as amygdaloid, which is a variety of porous trap or basaltic rock of a reddish color, the blocks being bound together with cement or sand. Some buildings have walls of great thickness, three feet or more.

The foundations of most of the houses being laid in water or in marshy flats, they have no cellars, and are really great cubes of masonry kept in place by their own weight.

From the first thing in the morning the streets are full of traffic; richly dressed horsemen, hired carriages, noisy carts with unoiled wheels, drawn by four, six, or eight mules, troops of donkeys and mules loaded with all manner of packages, jostle each other in the roadway. Water-carriers, or aguadors, completely clad in leather, and wearing a kind of jockey cap also of leather, besiege the public fountains, carrying two huge amphoræ, kept in place by straps, which cross on the head over a palm-leaf cap with leather visor.

Indian men and women pass to and fro screaming out in ear-splitting tones the names of what they have to sell, fruits, vegetables, chickens, etc., carrying everything on their backs in wicker-work baskets, fastened on to their shoulders like soldiers' knapsacks, but supported by a leather thong passed across the forehead beneath the broad-brimmed straw sombreros, or worn just under the arms across the chest.

Street boys follow the passers-by, breathlessly shouting out the names of the daily papers and the numbers of the last tickets of the Loteria Nacional, or National Lottery. You pause an instant, you give a silver coin—horror of horrors, you have been noticed, and you are immediately surrounded by twenty beggars of all ages, followed by dozens of mangy yellow dogs, which appear from every side, and in piteous tones you are implored, "For the sake of Jesus, Joseph, and Mary, senor, give a dole, a little dole. Oh, dear little friend [amiguito], God and your sweetheart will reward you!"—[Harper's Weekly.

A Knife in His Skull.

An extraordinary discovery was made at an autopsy held a few days ago at Newark, N. J., on the body of a man who died from the effects of a bullet wound in the head. The operating physician found in the right side of the subject's head a piece of a knife blade about an inch long that had evidently been plunged into the skull a long time ago. It protruded into the brain, passing through the covering of the brain more than half an inch. There was no abscess or inflammation, and the steel was even with and barely noticeable on the outer side of the skull. A small, dark, triangular spot was visible after the scalp was removed. On the inner side the steel had corroded and was in general appearance much like a piece of wire, nearly round, but when the point was touched the corrosion fell off and the point of the blade was unmistakable. It had not entered through a suture and was directly [illegible]. On account of the absence of inflammation and the degree of corrosion it is supposed it lodged there many years ago, perhaps when Daly was a child, when the skull was quite elastic. ALABAMA LEGISLATURE.

What Our Law Makers are Doing in the Interest of the People.

Proceedings of the Body from Day to Day Briefly Summarized.

TWENTIETH DAY.

It was bill day in the senate, with the exception of the resolution of the free pass bill, which passed the day before excepting several state officials and its reference to the judiciary committee for perfection to make its provisions conform to the constitution, there was very little of general interest done by that body. A joint resolution was adopted raising a committee to take into consideration the subject of re-arranging the judicial circuits. Quite a number of bills of a local character were passed. In the house Mr. Ward, of Henry, introduced a resolution of some length to urge the passage in the United States senate of the Hatch anti-option bill or some similar bill, which shall speedily and effectually abolish the future system. The bill was referred to the committee on rules. Among the bills which passed the house was one to authorize Jefferson county to issue bonds to the amount of $15,000 for the purpose of making an exhibit at the World's fair. Here's a bill that, if passed, will affect the newspapers of the state very materially. It was offered by Mr. Cox of Bullock, and provides that after the passage and approval of the measure it shall be unlawful for any person or newspaper to publish comments on evidence adduced in criminal trials in the state, or to publish discussions on the character of evidence adduced before the conclusion of the case on trial. A violation of these provisions will be treated as a misdemeanor and will be punished on conviction not less than $5 or more than $50.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

It was another bill day in the senate and the proceedings are devoid of general interest. There was a bill to extend the term of state officials from two to four years, but it did not meet with general favor and went over without action. Another bill defining the time for the beginning of the terms of the state officers was passed. There were also a large number of local bills passed. In acceptance of the invitation extended by a resolution Thursday, Hon. Edward J. Phelps, of Vermont, visited the house today. It was about 4 o'clock when he entered under the escort of Hons. F. S. Ferguson, Thos. H. Clark and A. S. Fletcher. In respect to the distinguished visitor, the members of the house received him standing. Mr. Brown offered a resolution that the members of the house agree to sustain the good faith and credit of the state at all hazards. Mr. Biggers introduced a bill to make it unlawful for any person or persons to sell pools or bets on what is commonly known as a base ball nine or base ball league, or team, as the same is played in this state. Mr. Minter offered a bill to establish and maintain a reform school for youths convicted of crime in the state of Alabama.

TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

Much of the time of the senate today was taken up in discussing local matters and in trying to undo what had already been done. Five new local bills were introduced and referred to proper committees. The house resolution relative to the appointment of a joint committee to frame an election law, was referred to the committee on rules. Some eight local bills were passed. In the house the rules committee reported favorably on the resolution of Mr. Brown, that the members of the house agree to sustain the good faith and credit of the state on all hazards. The report was concurred in and adopted. The same committee, however, made an adverse report on the resolution of Mr. Ward, from Henry, to urge the United States senate to pass the anti-option bill.

The tax collector of Bullock county was murder and robbed last week.

The Oxford Voice has suspended publication, as have most of the third party organs in the South since the election.

Messrs. Robbins and Stallings are reported as favoring an extra session of Congress. They realize that we need relief legislation and need it now.

The Calamity Howler is the name of a People's party organ which recently started on its march to the journalistic boneyard at Cluver Bend, Ark.—Memphis Commercial.

The Northport Breeze makes an excellent point in a few words as follows: "The Breeze is not one of the constitutional howlers against railroads; it would rather collect their taxes."

The tax rate will probably be increased ¾ of a mill. The mistake will not be made in increasing the rate—it is but rectifying the mistake of the legislature that reduced the rate.—Exchange.

There is a boom on in Washington for General Wheeler for a place in President Cleveland's cabinet. His admirers are putting him forward for the highly important office of Secretary of Agriculture.

There are those who are claiming that the Democratic party will not give the people any relief legislation. But it is not likely that the Democratic party will be so foolish as its enemies predict.

It is predicted that if the saw mill check system is abolished as now seems probable a good many small saw mills will have to shut down and the laborers will be compelled to find other work and probably find it only on the farm at 50 cents a day.

It is said that the third partyites want preachers, papers, lawyers, doctors, merchants and every other class to entirely approve their wild financial schemes or stand a boycott. The people who have any manhood are taking the boycott and standing it very well.

No party under the sun could give us legislation that would satisfy all classes. Dr. Macune has withdrawn with a large following from the third party. Still the third party corpse will be resurrected in some sort of shape by the political cranks of the country every four years. It is made up of the disgruntled and discontented and no party on earth nor no reasonable legislation will satisfy their demands. The Democratic party can be depended upon to give the country some relief legislation.

Great Scott! The Anniston Hot Blast has already begun the gubernatorial campaign by nominating General W. H. Forney for chief executive two years hence. The editor of the Hot Blast is a brave man. Most of us have had enough for the present and are hankering for the time in which to regain flesh and bunches of hair lost in the recent canvass. The H. B.'s candidate is a royal good man, but we object to opening the campaign until after the legislature adjourns, at least. What we need now is rest. — Tuskaloosa Times.

We publish elsewhere the unfortunate experience of a brother editor and kinsman in Cherokee county. We wonder how many will think twice of the misfortune of this young man who at a blow has had swept away the accumulation of some years hard labor. He is one of those who has worked unselfishly for his party and his country, and yet if he should ask reward or promotion because of his sacrifices, he would doubtless be met with considerable opposition in his own party. But concerning the destruction of his paper, it would be well to note that this spirit of anarchism which was thought to be on the wane is being revived all over Alabama. We see it stated that in some of the white counties it is being preached from the pulpit. We cannot vouch for that, but we see evidence of its growth and it is a question whether the destruction is to be confined to the press. We must wait and see.

The People's Demand.

Tuscumbia Alabamian.

The apathy and bitter indifference manifested by the majority of Democratic papers in Alabama in reference to a new election law is astounding and unaccountable, and equalled only by that shown by our Legislature. Is it the result of contentment, prosperity, or of the general state of political stabiliment? Unless that resolution of the last Democratic platform declaring that hereafter representation should be based on population is to be relegated to the realm of museums dessetude, along with the famous plank concerning the rule of the "virtuous and intelligent," the question of the Black Belt representation should be left out considering this paramount issue.

We learn from a gentleman just from Montgomery that the opposition in the Legislature which comprises about four-tenths of the members, are opposed to any new law based on the Australian plan, and they can secure the aid of enough members from the organized party to defeat such a bill. This is indeed a pitiable condition for the Legislature of a great and growing State like Alabama to be placed in. We are not surprised at any thing the followers of Kolb and Bowman did, but it makes the people of the State sick and tired to see money spent by men who can't rise above the dead level of mediocrity and inefficiency—contenting themselves with the introduction of a bill virtually offering a bribe of $5 per capita for votes—and allowing the burning question of real ballot reform to go by default. The bill in question was a disgrace to the man who introduced it and an insult to the people.

If the Legislature adjourns without giving us a new and better election law, it will go down as the most disappointing to the people, and the faisest to its duty of any in the history of Alabama.

AN EDITOR'S TROUBLES.

Withstood Two Boycotts, But was Burned Out at Last.

The Industrial Free Press at Cedar Bluff was recently burned out and Editor Robert Lawrence wrote the following letter to Editor Cooper of the Rome Tribune, who offered to help him with the loan of type, etc.

Mr. Lawrence thanks the editor for his offer and says:

"If, as I presume, your offer is to aid me in getting out my publication until such time as I can re-establish the plant, I regret to say as the building and entire equipment, consisting of a Fairhaven cylinder press, Liberty and Army job presses, together with all the type, paper stock and matter for the current number, were completely destroyed, and as I was unprotected by insurance, I cannot hope to resume publication.

"As I wrote you yesterday the fire was of incendiary origin, and under two boycotts, declared by the farmers Alliance and Industrial Union of this county, this fact is most significant and is, I must say, the most effective resorted to by those red-handed revolutionists who hated the Free Press because I have, in season and out of season, fought their agrarian sentiments for the past three years.

They have estopped my presses and the Free Press will perhaps, no more warn the people of this section of the dangers which lurk beneath the alluring teachings of populite agitators, but though the hand which this is penned was not blistered (as it is) by their incendiary fire, but burned from my body, my voice and vote will still speak out for Democracy and good government.

"The principles for which the paper has ever contended have triumphed in this county, in the State and have swept the country, and of course the rejoicing (though we have striven to be conservative and to give no offense to our opponents) has been unpleasant to incurable populists, whose only weapon is the boycott and its twin ally, incendiarism. It is said that fire is a great purifier, and from experience I am made to feel the need of a system of government under whose beneficient reign every good citizen can enjoy his equal rights without trampling under foot the rights of others, can in reality without fear or favor, declare unaltered devotion to "freedom of speech and of the press," and as a free man exercise these invested rights without fear of the incendiary's torch.

"However, I have been tried by the fire of a popular frenzy, and now that I have emerged from the real fire, if there was in my composition any of the dross of communism, it has been consumed, and I am more than ever a Democrat.

"Again thanking you for your kind offer of assistance, and with expressions of esteem,

I am yours fraternally,
"Robert Lawrence."

GOV. BREWER'S BILL.

An Able Defense by Judge Caffee, of Lowndes.

To the Age-Herald.

Lowndesboro, Dec. 14.—I observe in the Montgomery Advertiser of December 13, a very disrespectful assault on Hon. Willis Brewer, of Lowndes, in reference to his bill to exempt certain persons from taxation.

In doing this extreme quest, as the Advertiser quotes an article from one of the most ardent radical papers.

Now, what is the bill of Col. Brewer? It exempts from the payment of taxes those whose taxes amount to $5 or less, if it be shown that they failed to vote at the previous August and November elections.

Any man who is aware of the conditions of suffrage in this State, as charged by our enemies, must see that if this charge be true that a change is imperative. This charge is that the ballot is perverted, especially the negro vote, and that fair elections cannot be had. If this be true, as we may allow for the sake of this argument, then we should attempt to purify the ballot box. After all fair elections are necessary to a popular government, and a popular form of government does not exist without the privilege of suffrage is made sacred when it is exercised. Transiently we may get a benefit from violating this privilege and perverting the ballot; but the result of this, if continued, must be evil, and evil only. The protection of white civilization justifies heroic treatment and daring remedies, but if white civilization can be shielded without these it is right that we do it.

Those who take a broad and statesmanlike view of this question, instead of a narrow and partisan one, will appreciate any effort that is made to purify our elections. There are symptoms of anarchy in some of our counties at this time that ought to make even a partisan, like myself, reflect.

A. E. CAFFEE.

While agreeing fully with Judge Caffee in the end aimed at, yet it would be well to consider that in many of the hill counties of Alabama probably one half of the tax payers pay less than $5 in taxes, and if it should be remitted the loss to State and county revenues would be so great as to make a heavy increase in the tax rate necessary.

The Coming Session.

The Age-Herald says about the legislature:

The session just ended was very tame compared to what the coming session will be. The great questions yet to be considered are the tax rate, constitutional amendments, the convict system and a general election law. The house failing to obtain the senate's consent to a joint committee on a general election law, provided a committee of its own to sit during the recess. It is presumed that the cheese-parers will cut a small figure in the coming session. Mr Brewer's power was permanently broken last night when he sought to defeat the general appropriation. It is not likely that he will be able to do further mischief except to delay legislation and thereby increase the burdens of the people.

The Extra Session.

The New York Herald makes the assertion that Mr. Cleveland is in favor of an extra session of Congress, and will issue his call a short time after his inauguration, if for no other reason than to provide for the Treasury deficit.

It is not clear that the Herald or any other paper has the authority to speak for Mr. Cleveland, but it is no doubt correct in its statement that there will be an extra session, for the reason that nearly "all of the prominent leaders out of congress are convinced, and have so expressed themselves, that an extra session will be necessary.

The condition of the Treasury has been so muddled by the Billion Dollar Congress and financial jugglery of Secretary Foster, that it will be necessary to have an extra session of Congress to ascertain how the finances of the Government stand, and make preparations to prevent a panic.

Aside from this the people are demanding an early revision of the tariff, and it does not appear they will be satisfied with anything short of it.

The Democratic party is not asking Mr. Harrison for any advice, but as he has given it, we should accept it gracefully.—Birmingham News.

What Brought About the Rise.

The rise in the price of cotton means something like $27,000,000 to the cotton growers of the South, and the incoming of the Democratic administration brought about this rise.—Gadsden Times-News.

Alabama's Field Pennyroyal.

Montgomery Journal.

Mr. Fred Forgerson is stepping on dangerous ground. His resolution, which was referred to the committee on rules, to prevent the introduction of local bills after January 4, four or five days after recess, is a good one, but is going to bring down the criticism of a good many members who are already asking themselves, "what are we here for anyhow, but to introduce local bills?"

He—Carrie will you make me the happiest of men? She—I should like to, Harry, but I think I prefer to remain the happiest of women.

The Birth of Progress.

Union Springs Herald.

Alabama continues her march forward among industries. Coal and iron are already among her chief resources, and now she is adding gold. Mines near Talladega have yielded ore sufficient to give Alabama a reputation ahead of other Southern States. The banks of Anniston now have gold from coins which were made of the gold from the Alabama mines. Preparations will soon be made for extensive mining in the gold fields of the State.

Now is the time to subscribe for your county paper.

School Exhibition.

The pupils of Clanton Academy will have an exhibition consisting of music and recitations at the Academy to-morrow, (Friday) night. An admission fee of ten cents will be charged to defray incidental expenses. Everybody should attend.

With many clergymen, public speakers, singers and actors, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the favorite remedy for hoarseness and all affections of the vocal organs, throat and lungs. Its anodyne and expectorant effects are promptly realized.

The VIEW is not one of the papers that sees fit to complain at the times. It is getting along nicely, its subscribers pay up well and it is not disposed to economize at their expense as some others have found necessary. For instance our supplement for this issue cost us double what a regular issue would cost.

We issue a supplement with this issue which will prove interesting to all, especially to the little folks. No paper will be issued next week except to legal advertisers, as we desire to give the printer a Christmas breathing spell. The VIEW wishes each of its readers a merry Christmas and a happy new year.

Buckingham's Dye for the whiskers is the best, handiest, safest, surest, cleanest, most economical and satisfactory dye ever invented. It is the gentleman's favorite.

We hear people say that our's is a hard town; that there is too much meanness here, and they want to move. Meanness and selfishness exist everywhere. The man who seeks to move away from it will have to move out of this mundane sphere. This does not mean that our town could not improve in this particular. It has improved and will continue to do so.

Remember as the VIEW is trying to make a living here it is entitled to your job printing. To send your job printing away from home and then expect the paper to serve you on any and all occasions is not reasonable and will not work very well. We notice this kind of complaint in many of our exchanges and have concluded that we might as well be in fashion and make it too.

The past has been an exceptionally hard year. Yet while appreciating this fact the VIEW thinks well to mention that during the past twelve months it has secured patronage enough from home business men to sustain our family about one month out of the twelve. And there are some who think it strange that we desire to do better, while at the same time they are sending their printing away from home in the hope of saving 25 cents and on $5.00 worth.

Let no patriotic man or woman send off for Christmas goods. Spend your money with home merchants.—Birmingham News.

The above is good advice. Home enterprise should always receive the support of home people. Your home merchants are your merchants and they need your patronage and encouragement. Do not send off for Christmas goods when you can buy it just as good and at just as low prices right at home. Give your home merchants the benefit of whatever is to be made Buy your Christmas goods from your home merchants. The VIEW makes this appeal for our home merchants unselfishly, notwithstanding they seem unable to do much for the home paper.

An exchange says that mullein leaf is recommended as an excellent specific for rheumatism. We do not know one who has tried it, but the remedy is easily applied, and is otherwise harmless.

Editors after Post Offices.

Decatur News.

Major W. W. Screws, we are told, will ask for the Montgomery office; editor Ratzer of the Register wants the Mobile office; editor Barr of the Gazette, desires the Florence office; editor Armstrong, of the Citizen aspires to the Scottsboro office; editor Young, of the Advertiser, has an eye on the Decatur office, the Hot Blast heavy writer thinks he would exactly fit the Anniston office; editor Towns, of the Democrat, will make a vigorous pull for the Athens office; Col. Johnson, late editor of the Tribune, stands ready to assume the responsibilities of the Cullman office; editor Comstock of the Reaper, is willing to attend to the duties connected with the Sheffield P. O. department, and several others whose names we do not recall, would like to be inducted into the science of strapping, locking, and labeling pouches.

Now, all these gentlemen are worthy and well qualified, and can soon become duly and truly prepared for patriotic service, and if we were president, senator or congressmen, we would appoint every one of them. Why? Because, on the principle of Old Hickory, "that to the victors belong the spoils" and on the Biblical theory that the laborer is worthy of wages, editors are pre-eminently entitled to a full share of patronage. They work harder and more effectually for party success than any other class of men. All the editors above mentioned, and nearly every other one in Alabama have been in the thickest of the battle that has just ended. They first lifted the warning voice, and made vigorous fight upon the enemy. Like brave generals, they led in the charge—went forward, and blazed out the the way, and said to Democratic voters, "Follow us!" The press of Alabama carried the state for Cleveland; it elected nine congressmen; it elected Governor Jones; it fought for white supremacy, and the great victory achieved in the Commonwealth is due to the unceasing labors of democratic newspapers more than all other sources combined.

There should be a manifest appreciation of the good work Alabama newspapers have done, and a liberal share of federal patronage should be given to those who have stood at the helm and guided the ship of state safely into port.

THE HARD TIMES.

The Real Cause Explained by a Jackson County Farmer.

An old farmer from Jackson county recently talked with the Athens Banner and thus explained the cause of hard times: "It is not the low price of cotton," said the farmer, "for I often sold it for six and seven cents, and thought I was doing well; but I carried all the money home with me; I did not leave any in Athens, for I made what I needed on a farm. You don't have any old-fashion gins and screws to pack cotton in; you don't hear the wheels and cards going on in the kitchen on a rainy day; you don't see any plow stocks, axe helves, hoe handles, baskets and horse collars made at home. You all go to town and get them. You don't see any pig pen full of fattened hogs around the house. You go to town to get your meat. If you will go back to those old times and make what you live on at home there will be no third party nor any one asking for $50 per capita. You go to town too often after things that can be raised at home. Try it and see if I am not right."

The New York Herald quotes Hon. Gaston A. Robbins and Hon. Jesse F. Stallings as being in favor of an extra session right away. Our young congressmen are anxious to get to Washington and make their maiden speeches.—Age-Herald.

Not that they are anxious to make their maiden speeches, but they have promised the people of their districts to give them relief as early as possible from the unnecessary laws which now oppress them; and as conscientious representatives, they do not desire the people to be oppressed for nine long months unnecessarily; mark the prediction, these two young congressmen will make fine records in the National Congress.—Anniston Hot Blast.

Looking over the State it is noticed that wherever the third party papers got in their work ventilating the third party platform they damaged their party cause. They were boomerangs.

A Study Well Done.

The following from a Pennsylvania Republican paper, the Pittsburg Dispatch will show what kind of literature is being circulated to increase the prejudice which prevails against a worthy class of citizens. The Pittsburgh Dispatch is owned by Chris Magee, the Republican who came to Alabama to help the so-called reformers and conglomerates ruin our State and the scene is laid here. In speaking of how merchants get control of crops the paper says:

"The usual plan is for some merchant to advance a colored farmer a little meal, some bacon, corn and so on to the amount of about $50. In return he pledges his cotton crop until he can pay it. That time never comes. No matter how much cotton the farmer may raise, whether it be worth $200 or $500, the merchant claims all, and will wrangle for it. The storekeepers are in a combination, and the colored man can't buy elsewhere until he has satisfied the bill of the first merchant. I have seen the game played frequently.

"The Ku-Klux is composed of natives, and they are closely banded together. If you ask a man if he is a member he will protest vehemently and declare there is no such society, but I know better. I read an amusing account not long ago of a negro having been scared to death by one of the gang. He wore a mask and supplied himself with a leather pouch. Going to the colored man's cabin at night he called for water and apparently drank several buckets full remarking, as he finished: 'That is the first water I have taken since the battle of Bull's Run.' The negro rolled his eyes with fright and died. This may be true, but I know they don't often use such inoffensive ways of getting rid of people in the alleged fair land of Dixie."

Deafness Can't be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CHRISTMAS.

Oh, the glorious Christmas weather, when all hearts keep time together,
And we never have a feeling that is not warm and bright;
When the snow is falling, falling, and the sound of sweetest calling
To their fellows on the hillside echoes clearly through the night.

How the sleighbells tingle, tingle, while the snow goes crinkle, crinkle,
And the furs and robes about us hardly serve to keep us warm;
And our feet and fingers tingle to the music and the jingle,
As we drive on swiftly homeward through the thick flying storm.

How the lights shine out to meet us, how the dogs rush out to greet us,
As we draw up at the gateway; and the horses, in a steam,
Stand there restless, stamping, stamping in the drifting snow, and clamping
At their bits, impatient of us—like the shadows in a dream.

How the blazing hickory fire flashes higher, higher, higher,
As we pile the wood upon it and draw closer all around;
And the cracking and the snapping of the logs, like wood-gnomes rapping
For release from out their prisons, has a weird and wintry sound.

Oh, the warmth and love within there! Oh, the stories that we spin there
To the children, of the goblins who live out in all the snow;
And at length we leave the fable, and recall the lowly stable
Where the King of Love was lying many centuries ago.

Till, as we all sat there thinking, little eyes with sleep are blinking,
And the old clock in the hallway tells of Christmas come again;
And the whole white earth rejoices as we hear the angel voices
Sing again the old, old story: "Peace on earth, good will to men."

Then to wake up at the dawning of a glorious Christmas morning,
To find everybody happy with the warmth of Christmas cheer.
Ah, when love is such a feeling, all our better selves revealing,
Let us dwell in love forever and have Christmas all the year.

—James G. Burnett.

THE CHRISTMAS PIKE.

BY MISS L. V. BULLOCK-WEBSTER.

"WHERE shall I go for Christmas," was a question that much disturbed my mind last year; for I had a great many invitations, and only a few days to spare. I particularly wanted to be back for the big dance at The Hawthorns, and with open weather, and four good horses in the stable, I grudged missing even oneday's hunting. Still a bachelor's hunting-box, seven miles from anywhere, was not exactly my idea of the place to Christmas in; so I turned over in my mind the merits and demerits of my various friends' establishments, but could not come to any conclusion as to which I intended to honor with my presence.

The evening post settled the matter for me.

"The very place," I cried, when just as I had finished dinner the maid brought in a letter from my old chum, Langham Carter, who was home on a six months' furlough from India. He and I had been close friends at school, but we had not met again until one winter when I went out to India for some tiger and big game shooting. We were both staying with Sanderson, at Mysore, and good sport we had. He showed us how to catch elephants, as only he knows how, and put me in the way of bagging my first tiger.

"What fun it was! and what a good sort old George Sanderson is—very few like him, worse luck," I mused, as Langham's letter recalled that jolly time which we had spent together.

"Dear Frank," his note ran, "I am going down to The Moat for Christmas and I hope you'll come, too. You can have a good mount on any of the dad's horses—they are all your sort, well bred and good performers. If you bring a rod you can catch pikes galore and of sizes large in the moat. Father and mother and the girls (you remember Nellie and Nora when they were little) will be delighted to see you once more. Come by the early train on Christmas Eve and I'll me you at the station. Don't bother to write, just send a wire to say you're coming."

So next morning I sent my message, "Thanks, delighted to come," and spent the rest of the day in pleasant anticipation of the fun I was going to have. If there is one thing I like, or love, next to hunting, it is a bit of good fishing, and a big pike is my especial in the fish line; so I packed up my rod and looked out suitable tackle for the mighty monarchs of whom Lang spoke.

It was only midday when I reached the Carters' station, for I had got up betimes. Two very pretty girls were waiting for me on the platform; and I instantly recognized one as an improved edition of the little Nellie I used to chase and kiss under the mistletoe long ago. She had been my first love, and we made all sorts of vows and promises during the winter holidays that I spent at The Moat as a boy. Her companion was not Nora—I felt sure of that—but I thought she was the most beautiful woman I had ever beheld. Medium height, and fair, with curly golden hair under an Astrakan cap, she looked quite the regular Christmas-story-book-picture girl, with the advantage of a merry pair of sparkling gray eyes and a laughing face. In her arms she carried a mite of a toy bull terrier, in a smart red coat.

As I pulled my traps out of the train Miss Carter came up and shook hands.

"Langham was so sorry he couldn't meet you. He won't be back till this evening, so we—let me introduce Miss Mildred Palgrave, who is staying with us—thought we'd drive to fetch you instead. I am afraid we are a poor substitute for brother Lang, but you must make the best of it and take us on our merits."

Looking at them I thought myself lucky, and thanked heaven that Lang could not come, ingrate I was.

Miss Palgrave held out a well-gloved hand, saying, "I am so glad to meet you, for Langham has told me so many stories about you as a boy that I quite feel I know you already. But they tell me that I must trust you with respect, for you're a mighty Nimrod now, and a slayer of wild beasts."

"Not many, I'm afraid. More travelers' tales. Some of dear old Langham's yarns," answered I, modestly, but I was secretly gratified at her taking such a friendly interest in me.

"You've got to take Mildred and Goliath (the tiny terrier) in front and drive," said Nellie, when my luggage had been stowed in the bottom of the dog cart—and I was expecting to have to sit behind; "I want to have a rest. Old Banjo—we call this sob Banjo because he is so musical—pulls like a demon as soon as his head is turned for home."

Nothing loath, I helped the girls into their seats, and we were soon at The Moat, which was only five miles from the station—a very short five miles, and I hated Banjo for making the journey so brief, when I should have liked it to have lasted forever. My companion chatted on as if she had known me all her life, and I fell desperately in love with her and quite forgot my boyhood's sweetheart, who only reminded me of her presence as we drove up the avenue by exclaiming: "This is where you shot your first rabbit that Sunday afternoon when we were all at church. What a row there was about it! Do you remember? You were both bad boys in those days." On the steps were Nora and the Squire, who welcomed me heartily, and Mrs. Carter met me with a pleasant greeting in the hall. In a moment I felt "at home," and it seemed more like fifteen months than fifteen years since these kindly folks had last seen me.

As we sat at lunch Mr. Carter apologized for Langham's unavoidable absence, and asked me if I could console myself with the pike for one afternoon. "They are all on the feed," he said, "and Johnson, the keeper, has got some nice roach. I want you to try and catch the Patriarch. Old Jacob, as we call him, is a huge brute who abides by the island. He is wily, but as no one has fished the place for a year we are hoping he'll give you a show. Last year he broke two of my friends, one of them twice, and they swore he must be fifty pounds at least. He ate a good-sized duck last summer, and we picked up a half dead carp not long ago that weighed over fifteen pounds, and had a big hole in its side like a cavern. No doubt it was old Jacob's work."

I almost forgot Mildred in my excitement, and directly lunch was over rigged up my pet old rod, made of a bamboo I had brought from India, where it had killed many a goodly mahseer in the swift Joaldoka, and put on live bait tackle of abnormal strength and size.

Johnson and I were soon in the punt, and began at the foot of the moat where the water was shallow. I mounted a nice roach, fresh and lively, of about two ounces, and under the keeper's instructions tried a bit or water beside a log. My float was scarcely settled when I had a pull, and knew I was into a good fish, and after a few minutes a respectable ten-pounder was in the boat. On the way up I caught two more and then came the haunts of the Patriarch, and we grew cautious and slow.

"No use trying a small bait for him, sir. Put on the very largest in the well."

So, dutifully, I selected one that was fully half a pound weight, and, following Johnson's directions, swung it well out into a deep hole at the mouth of a backwater that ran round a little island in front of the house.

"That's the place, just where your float is now," cried the squire, who with the girls had come down on the lawn to watch the fun.

A charming group they made—that fine old country gentleman, the picture of health and good nature, with three pretty girls standing by him, and Don, his sedate old pointer, at his heels; while gayly frolicking round them all was the irrepressible Goliah, who seemed to imagine that the whole party had come out, entirely for his gratification and amusement. As my bait touched the water the excitable little dog pricked up his ears, and advanced at the water's edge, surveying it critically as if he fancied it might be some vagrant water rat with whom it was his duty to do battle.

"Come to heel, Goliah, come to heel," called Mildred. "You'll tumble in and catch your death of cold."

But she called in vain, he heeded not her warning, and I almost forgot my fishing, so taken up was I with watching the comical little beast, as he dodged about the bank in fussy imitation of his master and began to scratch up the dry grass and weeds.

My bait was as big and lively that it kept the float moving briskly, occasionally pulling it under, and as I had no spare tackle I was obliged to let it go, holding that a sensible patriarch would discriminate between a bony roach and a float and prefer the former, in spite of the attractive red top of the latter.

However the eccentric vagaries of the said red top attracted all Master Goliath's attention, and each time the float bobbed up he gave a little jump and a yap in unison. At length his excitement grew so intense that we all burst out laughing. To him it appeared no laughing matter, but a serious subject which required investigation, and when the bright red top disappeared longer than usual he could stand it no more, but jumping with a dash, regardless of the bitter cold water, swam out for the point where he last saw the float.

Mildred's face was a study. "Oh, my poor little dog!" she cried. "Do get him out at once, Mr. Galloway, and bring him in. Don't lose a moment." As well as his laughter would let him Johnson was paddling to meet the bold swimmer, and I leant ready in the bows, with my sleeves turned up, to grab him as soon as he was near enough. His round, little head and big eyes and red coat made him look like some strange new water-baby come to view the world. When he was within six feet of the boat, and I was just making ready for the grasp, there was a mad swirl that sent the water flying into my face, a rush, a huge pair of jaws swept the surface, and in a moment the Patriarch had pulled poor Goliah under the water, and he was lost to our sight!

All the girls screamed in chorus, and Mildred gave such a weird, wild, agonized cry, as she saw her darling disappear to certain death, that I felt almost as if I were a murderer; for had I not been fishing this would never have happened.

Johnson had all his wits about him. "He's gone for his hold there under the willow," said he, driving the slow punt forward, and plunging the pole deep into the water in hopes of frightening the monster off his prey. As he did so up came fish and dog, the latter struggling gamely, but still held across his quarters in the cruel jaws.

I could not help myself—in a moment I dived from the punt right on to them, and quick as thought with my left hand grabbed Goliath by the collar, whilst with my right I struck a heavy blow across the pike's jaws, whic made him leave go.

Johnson seized my hand as I turned round, and was helping me into the punt when the Patriarch, wildly enraged at losing his prey, made another dash, grasping my arm just above the wrist in his effort to get at the dog. But his Nemesis had come. Johnson had the gaff in his hand, and did not lose a second in gaffing Master Jacob behind the shoulders. Luckily it was one of the old fashioned, home made ones—a huge hook big enough to gaff sharks, with a big holding barb on it—and struggle and fight as he might the monster could not get away.

Meanwhile I had chucked the half dead Goliath into the punt and struggled in myself; then, slipping a cord over the fish's tail, we soon had him in the boat, where a judicious tap on the head with a leaded "pike stick" settled his hash. The sight of his enemy seemed to bring new life into Goliath, and seizing him by a fin he shook and shook to his heart's content, quite oblivious of his own broken leg and torn sides.

When we touched the shore I scrambled out with the plucky little terrier in my arms and restored him to his anxious mistress, who thanked me heartily and gratefully while she showered kisses upon her rescued treasure.

The squire hurried me off to the house, wisely thinking that a hot bath would prevent any evil effects from this cold dive. My coat sleeve had protected my arm so well that a few deep scratches were the extent of my ills, and I felt as if I would gladly have lost a hand to be thanked once more like that by my darling Mildred. For I quite regarded her now as my own, and determined I would propose that very night after dinner.

For the first time in my life I felt grateful to the uncle who had worked hard and left me the money which had made my life so easy and pleasant; and I kept repeating to myself the old adage, "Enough for one is enough for two," and thinking how I should spend next Christmas at home, and how Mildred and I would ask Langham and Nellie and Nora to stay with us, and how we would talk over this day's proceedings, and enjoy ourselves.

By the time I had dressed I felt quite "good," and had no doubts at all about the future.

"Tea is served in the drawing-room," said the pretty parlor maid, "and the ladies are waiting."

"How's Goliath?" asked I.

"All right, sir. Johnson has set his leg, and tied up his wounds, and he's doing nicely. He is asleep now, sir, on Miss Palgrave's lap."

"Say I'll be down in a minute," I answered. And as soon as I brushed my hair, and tied my scarf to my satisfaction, I stalked down stairs as if I was walking on air, to receive the renewed thanks of my idol, and to try and tell her that my life was at her service.

As I stalked into the drawing room Langham rushed forward and shook me warmly by the hand, exclaiming, "I am so glad to see you, Frank, you dear old man. A thousand thanks for your boldness in rescuing Millie's pet. She treasures that little brute above creation—"

For a moment I was thunderstruck. My dream was over! Fool that I was, it served me right, and good sense soon returned. Heartily could I congratulate them both on their good fortune, and I hope no one ever guessed my disappointment.

"Bar one thing," Mildred broke in, as she slipped her hand caressingly into his arm.

"And says it's just because I gave it to her," continued Langham. "You know it was my first present to her after we were engaged."

When he had done talking over our adventure, and saying how thankful we were that it had terminated so well, we all went out to inspect the foe, the sight of whom made Goliath bristle with rage, and struggle to get out of his mistress' arms, and attack once more his would-be murderer.

Certainly he well deserved the name of the Patriarch. He weighed forty-eight pounds and was long and lean and lank, with jaws like a crocodile. Had he been in condition in proportion to his length he would have weighed fully sixty pounds, and I felt quite proud of having played even a subordinate part in the capture of such a monster.

Johnson got a couple of sovereigns from Langham for his share, and well he deserved it. If it had not been for his prompt action I believe old Jacob would have snatched Goliath from my arms and left his mistress a-lamenting.

We spent a jolly evening, and never have I enjoyed a Chrismas more than I did that one, though this year I fancy it may prove even pleasanter still; for now I am going as Nellie's accepted lover. Don't laugh; in spite of one day's infatuation for her friend I discovered that it was Nellie, my first and only sweetheart, that I really cared for, and the girl I loved as the boy of twelve I now love with the strong and lasting love of manhood.

Oh, yes, the Patriarch and Goliath, what became of them? Goliath went out to India six weeks later, when his mistress married my old friend, and I am afraid he will carry the marks of that day's adventure till his death. I trust he may never again encounter so cruel a foe, for a pluckier little dog was never wrapped in a skin.

And the Patriarch? We ate some of him on Christmas Day. In life he was terrible, and in death he was horrible; may I never taste so vile a fish again. Peace be to his memory, we ne'er shall look upon his like again. His skin is stuffed, and holds a place of honor in my hall, and I look upon him, indirectly, as the means of giving me my love.

What's Nellie like? Well, my friends, you'll see next year when we are married, and then you'll agree with me that she is the sweetest girl in the world.—Holly Leaves.

A CHRISTMAS PUDDING.

Old Christmas comes
With frozen thumbs,
His long beard white with snow;
'Tis right good cheer
His knock to hear,
And grief to have him go.

The children dance,
And the babies prance,
For the tiniest toddler knows
'Tis a world of drums
And dolls and plums,
Where the jolly old pilgrim goes.

The Origin of Christmas.

The actual date of the institution of Christmas Day as a feast day is indeed obscure. The best authorities have it that it was established by a decretal letter of Pope Telesphorus. The date of the decree is uncertain, but as this Pope died A. D. 138 one can make some sort of a guess.

The reasons for making the birthday of Christ a feast day were many. One reason, however, was found in the sacriligious manner in which the Saturnalia, the old Roman festival in honor of Satan, was celebrated. This festival occured in December, at about the time that Christmas now occurs, and under the Roman emperors who reigned at the time of the death of Christ it was a saturnalia in all that the term implies, beginning on the 18th of December and lasting seven days. Feasting, revelry and the most sacrilegious feasts and festivals were freely indulged in by all, the distinctions of rank being for the time forgotten and the utmost freedom permitted to all classes, no business whatever being done while the Saturnalia lasted.

That such heathen festivities should be distasteful to the early Christians is not surprising, and so it was that Christmas was instituted as a Christian feast day in honor of Christ. The Saturnalia as a feast day is gone and forgotton, but Christmas we have still with us, and are likely to have for all time.

To us Christmas means the 25th of December, and the 25th of December means Christmas. The thought of observing Christmas on any other day would seem more than queer now. It was, in fact, at that time the most movable of feast days. In fact, there was a good deal of uncertainty and a good deal of discussion among the wise men as to the exact date of the birth of Christ. And so no fixed date was settled on.

It was not until the fourth century that the 25th of December was finally fixed as being the date of the Nativity. At the instance of Cyril of Jerusalem an investigation was had. The theologians of the East and the West made a careful inquiry, and after studying the tables of the censors at Rome it was agreed that December 25 was the date of the birth of Christ. The opinion was by no means unanimous, we are told, but the bulk of it was in favor of December 25, and December 25 it was and is yet. And it is because of the decision of the wise men who settled the day for us some 1800 years ago that we are now celebrating Christmas on the 25th of December.

Mankind never put up more hay than she has this past season, and the quality of all hay was never better. Thousands of tons were put up without being touched by a particle of rain.

Do You Wish the Finest Bread and Cake?

It is conceded that the Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest of all the baking powders.

The purest baking powder makes the finest, sweetest, most delicious food. The strongest baking powder makes the lightest food.

That baking powder which is both purest and strongest makes the most digestible and wholesome food.

Why should not every housekeeper avail herself of the baking powder which will give her the best food with the least trouble?

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

Certain protection from alum baking powders can be had by declining to accept any substitute for the Royal, which is absolutely pure.

FARM NOTES.

You can never grade up the cattle unless you use better animals for breeding.

The time has gone for keeping a steer until he is four years old before sending to market.

Stock that is continually tempted by weak fences should not be blamed for becoming "breachy."

A box six inches high and two feet square kept filled with clean, dry dirt makes a good dust bath.

Don't buy a cow with high head and eyes starting from sockets. She is off in disposition, and you will be a loser.

If ducks can have a free range during the day and comfortable quarters at night they can readily be kept healthy.

Milking should be done with the greatest regularity. An hour's time out of the way is harmful to the cow every time.

Next to the Jersey Red, the Poland China breed is considered to rank highest in regard to hardiness and ability to resist disease.

The calf is not so stupid as he looks. When his mother fails to answer his demands he gives her a "milk punch," and the old lady comes down.

Light hogs prepared for early market are often far more profit than if kept until later when prices are low because of the rush of fresh pork.

The wheels of the mowing machines are made use of for constructing low-down wagons with wide rimmed wheels, that prove to be just the thing.

Provide plenty of bedding for the sheep during the winter so as to keep the wool out of the dirt, and at the same time it will aid, to keep the sheep dry.

A well known Australian wool grower raises 200 acres of rape for his sheep, and he speaks in the highest terms of its value. He has fattened twenty sheep per acre on his rape field.

If you have barb wire fence around your pasture it may pay to tie scraps of tin or some other substance to the wires to prevent the animals from running against it without seeing it.

Scaly legs are eyesores. With such simple remedies as applying vaseline or lard, to which a few drops of carbolic acid has been added, there is no excuse for their presence in a well kept flock of poultry.

The chaff from wheat is one of the best materials for use on the floor of the poultry house. Keep the chaff dry and under cover. It not only permits of easy cleaning of the house, but acts as an absorbent and also serves as litter in which the hens may scratch for food.

A large crop of apples may be grown when a hive of bees is stationed in the orchard. The pollen is rubbed from their bodies against the pistils of thousands of flowers, which thus become fertilized. Many of the strange feats of hybridizing varieties are due the agency of bees.

Needed Further Instructions.

Prison Warden—"It's just been found out that you did'nt commit that crime you've been in for all these years, and so the governor has pardoned you."

Innocent Man—"Um—I'm pardoned, am I?"

Prison Warden—"Y-e-s, but don't go yet. I'll have telegraph for further instructions."

Innocent Man—"What about?"

Prison Warden—"Seems to me that considerin' that you hadn't any business here, you ought to pay the state for your board."

Sure to See Him.

Mrs. Bilkins—"Oh, Goodie! Here's a letter from Cousin George."

Mr. Bilkins—"Huh! Who cares for him?"

Mrs. Bilkins—"Eh? Why, he lives in Chicago, and his house is close to the Fair grounds, and it's the very place for us to go next summer. I wrote to him, telling him we were all just dying to see him and his lovely family. I wonder what he says. Read it; I'm too nervous."

Mr. Bilkins (reading)—"'My Dear Cousin: You will soon have a chance to see us all once more. I have rented my house, and we shall make you a good long visit next summer.'"—New York Weekly.
